DANIELSON, Sept. 11. — Mario Giammetto, a Cranston, R. I., young man, was languishing in Brooklyn jail this afternoon in default of $10,000 bail, after having been presented before Judge W. Fenner Woodward in the town court this morning. Giammetto is charged with a statutory offense involving the allegation that he induced a young girl resident here to leave the state with him, for immoral purposes. This happened months ago.

The girl in question disappeared from her home here on January 3 last, and did not return until a little more than a month ago. A search that covered all of this state and much of New York state was made without avail. Many weeks passed before the young woman collapsed on a street in New York city one day and taken to a hospital in an exhausted condition. That incident established her whereabouts, but did not bring her return home, for charges were preferred against her by the New York police and prosecuted.

Her alleged association with Giammetto appeared to be broken when she returned here a few weeks ago, but after a time at home went away to Rhode Island. State officers have been seeking Giammetto to place him under arrest for a long time.

It was recalled today that Judge James N. Tucker, who is dead at his home in East Killingly, was a most faithful person in keeping a diary, and did so for a long term of years. With his usual care, he set down an accurate record of the many interesting things that occurred from day to day in and about East Killingly, including a report on general weather conditions, including temperatures, minimum and maximum. So dependable were his diary entries as to weather conditions that he had the experience of being invited to testify in a case being tried in the superior court at Putnam, as to the weather on a particular day about which there was controversy in the action, and what his entry showed had a considerable bearing in the decision of the case.

As the result of a collision between cars operated by Leo McIntyre of Danielson and Edwin Russell, also of this town, on the Elmville road shortly after midnight last night, McIntyre was ordered by the state officer who investigated the accident, to appear in the town court here on Friday.

Thomas U. Day, who studied during the past scholastic year at a college of osteopathy at Kirksville, Mo., is going to Durham, N. H., next Tuesday to enter the University of New Hampshire to take a pre-medical course. Mr. Day, a graduate of Killingly high school, plans later to enter some medical school and will make a special study of surgery.

A. M. Thompson will leave here tomorrow with his daughter, Miss Henrietta Thompson, to motor to Madison, Wis., where Miss Thompson is to enter the University of Wisconsin to pursue a collegiate course. Miss Thompson graduated with honors in the class of 1930 of Killingly high school.

Mrs. Ira A. McDaniel, of Cedartown, Ga., is visiting at Dayville with her parents, Deputy Sheriff and Mrs. Charles E. Ayer. Her husband is the assistant treasurer of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber company mills in the section where he is located, and the Goodyear Mills, Inc., of this town. the Goodyear Mills, Inc., of this town.

J. Carl Witter, as for years past, has acted as starter of the horse races at the Woodstock fair this year. The fair closed this afternoon.

Harry Creighton, of Dayville, has entered the Shriners' hospital in Springfield as a patient and will remain there for several months. It has been indicated that he will be very pleased to be remembered with letters or cards from his many school friends.

While riding through nearby countryside this morning County Game Warden Thomas Daniels, of Plainfield, saw three deer, a buck in the lead, slowly galloping across an open field, and making as pretty a sight as one would wish to see.

Light frosts were reported in this territory this morning but not of such severity as to cause crop damage, though some flowering plants were nipped.

Louis Peloquin, who has successfully promoted a series of open air boxing shows at the North street arena during the summer season, is arranging for the opening of the indoor season in the town hall on some undetermined date in October.

Property owners are reminded that there is now a provision in the borough charter under which such persons are required to clean chimneys of buildings they own at least once a year. Failure to do so makes such persons liable to presentation in court and to a fine.

Normand Lasch, 105 lbs.; Kid Brouillard, 192; Anselm Bernier, 125; Charles Goulet, 125; Benny Salinski, 132, Jewett City and Kid Gendreau, 147, members of the local Peloquin team, left here this evening to take part in bouts at Westerly. Friday evening Ray Landry, Charles Goulet, William Leo and Andy Fuller will go from here to take part in bouts at New London meeting New York boys.

Henry C. Marchand, of New Bedford, is visiting with friends in Danielson and vicinity for a few days.

JEWETT CITY

SUPPER, PRESENTATION TO WIND UP BALL SEASON

The players on the four teams and all those who helped to make the Jewett City Twilight league such a grand success, were given a grand chicken supper Wednesday evening, at Pachaug grange hall. After J. A.'s were passed, W. A. Richardson, president of the board of directors, made the formal presentation of the silver cup to John Bush, manager of the winning team. Mr. Bush in turn presented the trophy to Mr. Richardson, he being the local superintendent of the Fisk Rubber company's mill. The plant is not in operation at present, and as the team is liable to be separated, the players were of the opinion that the souvenir of the season's success, should be permanently in the custody of the superintendent of the plant.

In addition to this, Manager Bush, acting for his team, presented the president a Parker-Duofold pen and pencil set, mounted in gold. During the after dinner hour, and following a speech by George A. Ross, there were brief addresses by Managers Bush of the Fisk team, Thompson of the Campers, Chase of the Acco and LeClaire of the Kaceys. Thomas Barnett, who has been an interested and valuable auxiliary, expressed his belief that a larger league might be formed next season. The press agent also made a few remarks in the interest of local baseball. Eugene J. Carroll who has served so efficiently as treasurer during the summer, spoke briefly of the financial success of the borough's first venture in a local baseball league.

Sixty were present at the supper, which was furnished by the economic committee of Pachaug grange.

Those who served the supper for the league were: Mrs. William Bitgood, Mrs. Patrick Weaver, Mrs. George Whipple, Mrs. Victor Campbell, Mrs. Ellen Young and Mrs. Howard Davis. The waiters were Florence Campbell, Helen Weaver, Lucy Davis, Frank Morgan, Raymond and Charles Campbell.

PUTNAM

ANDREWS BOY HOME AFTER WEEK IN NEW YORK

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Sept. 11.—One week's adventure in New York city was enough for John Andrews, 16-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. B. N. Andrews of Farrows street, who ran away from home to seek his fortune in the big city. Early Wednesday evening the youth arrived home, tired and weary, and with only a ten cent piece in his pocket. This morning he was up bright and early, eager to return to Putnam high school, where he is a member of the senior class. His craving for wanderlust has left him—perhaps forever.

The boy's sudden departure from his home more than a week ago, greatly alarmed his parents, who enlisted the aid of state and local police and newspapers in an attempt to locate their missing son, who informed them in a note that he had left home because of his reluctance to return to school. Upon his arrival last evening he unfolded a tale of hectic adventure that may dampen the ardor of other young boys in the same frame of mind as John Andrews was a fortnight ago. Andrews reached America's metropolis without difficulty, but once there he was just another lad, unnoticed in the great crowds of milling people. He was unmindful of the present-day employment conditions and when confronted with the task of finding employment he soon learned that things are not quite like they are told in the fame and fortune stories. The passing of a week provided him with all he desired of New York life with the result that he was soon happy to return to his parents and school. Mr. and Mrs. Andrews were overwhelmed with joy upon his return last night.

Windham county and especially Putnam, Thompson and Pomfret, have provided plenty of copy for the 1930 edition of "Who's Who in America," which has recently been published. Included among the American personalities listed in the latest edition of the volume, admission to which cannot be purchased, are: John B. Byrne of this city, vice-president of the Hartford Connecticut Trust Co., and former state bank commissioner; Miss Mary Louise Marot, Thompson educator and head of the Howe-Marot school for girls in Thompson; Frank Hoffnagel Bigelow, headmaster of Rectory school at Pomfret; Arnold von C. P. Huizinga of Thompson; Clarence Winthrop Bowen of Woodstock, publisher and author of "History of Woodstock"; Hamilton Holt of Woodstock, president of Rollins college, Florida; William H. Holmes, former principal of Israel Putnam school and now superintendent of schools in Mt. Vernon, N. Y.; Malcolm W. Willey, formerly of Putnam and professor of sociology at University of Minneapolis, author of many books; Professor Willey is a graduate of Putnam high school and former professor at Dartmouth; Frances Lester Warner (Mrs. Mayo D. Hersey), daughter of Mrs. Edgar M. Warner of South Main street.

In anticipation of future expansion of the present system in this city, cable experts of the S. N. E. Telephone Co. were at work today, installing an underground cable containing 600 pairs of wires, from a point at the intersection of Grove street and South Main street, to a cut-out on Pomfret street. The cable runs underground all of the distance and will serve telephone needs of the business section.

ADVOCATING REPEAL

When United States Attorney Tuttle of New York made the statement the other day that he might be favorably inclined toward the nomination for governor of that state if he could come to an understanding with the republican organization, which was taken to mean an agreement in behalf of a plank favoring the repeal of the 18th amendment, he apparently stirred Governor Roosevelt of New York to action.

The governor had been withholding his views upon that subject. But now he has come out with a letter in which he places himself on record as favoring the repeal of the amendment and entrusting the regulation of the liquor business to the respective states. That makes it apparent that he is no longer going to straddle the question. He has found it politically wise to come out into the open, the first consideration perhaps being the next state election in the Empire state and thereafter the possibility of his candidacy for the presidential nomination in his party.

When Governor Roosevelt declares that sentiment in New York state is against the amendment he understands the folly of trying to duck it. Evidently he realizes that if the possible republican candidate is taking a stand for repeal he must hasten to do likewise. It is possible that it isn't the state situation which has caused him to pause so long in making a public statement upon that question. If he has the national office in mind he understands, of course, that there is a powerful southern sentiment in favor of the amendment and every democratic candidate needs to give consideration to that situation. As if to emphasize this, the Texas democrats in convention voted "unalterable" opposition to repeal, but it is remembered, of course, that they have accepted wet candidates even while calling for dry.

Whatever the effect may be nationally among the democrats, the Roosevelt statement serves to show that the opposition to conditions under prohibition has not decreased in New York and indicates that it may have been influenced in part by the situation in New Jersey, Massachusetts and certain of the other states, where increasing wet sentiment is being displayed.

CHANGING SENATORS

Every election, changes are made in the membership of congress which it is hoped will result in the improvement of that body. Sometimes there are changes made in the primaries which accomplish the same purpose, and then again those very same primaries and elections produce just the opposite results.

This week particular attention has been centered upon the outcome of the primaries in the states of South Carolina and Louisiana. There was a chance for the democratic electorate to better their representation in the United States senate. They made the most of the opportunity in South Carolina, but they went from good to bad in Louisiana. At least, that is the advance impression, and it will be surprising if it does not prove to be true.

Senator Cole Blease of South Carolina has held every office within the gift of his constituents that he wanted. He has been disposed to make an exhibition of himself in whatever office he held. He has been a loud exponent of lynching, has taken pride in his personal wetness though upholding the dry sentiment of his state when voting, and vociferously declared his contempt for the Constitution. He didn't realize it, but South Carolina had grown tired of him, and so declared by refusing him a renomination.

The loss of Blease in the senate will be no cause for shedding tears. It will be rated as helping the situation, since his successful opponent had displayed no evidence of adopting any of his policies, but for such relief as the senate might experience from the defeat of Blease it promises to be handicapped by the nomination of Governor Long by the democrats of Louisiana in place of the conscientious and respected veteran, Ransdell.

It has been a deep mystery how anyone with the record of the Louisiana governor could expect to be placed, to say nothing about being retained, in public office. If he maintains his demagogic attitude, he will bring to the senate as much, if not more, than Blease takes away. It means a change for which the democrats of the respective states are responsible and apparently they are making the changes that they want.

URIBURU'S GOVERNMENT

While this country has for some years taken the position, with special reference to Central America, that changes in government which are made unconstitutionally would not be recognized, it has not adhered to such a policy with reference to South American countries in all instances. There seem to be times when unbearable conditions cannot be overcome in any other way than by a coup d'etat, and it is possible that such an interpretation will be placed upon the upsets which have taken place in South American republics, and particularly that in Argentina.

From all indications the chief cause for regret over the fall of the Irigoyen regime was the loss of life. This was not as large as frequently features such situations, but it left a blot on what may otherwise prove to be a beneficial change. At any rate, the government that is being carried on under Provisional President Uriburu gives promise of favorable developments. His purpose is to get it away from the Irigoyen rut and turn it over as quickly as possible to officials who will be selected by the people. The new president declares he has stepped into the breach solely as an emergency head of the government with no other desire than to serve his country in the situation and get back into his military office as quickly as possible.

When he declares his intention of doing those things which his predecessor has refused to do, bring Argentina into proper diplomatic relation with other countries and participate in Pan American policies, he responds to a demand which has received no attention in recent years. He not only makes a good impression at home but likewise upon other governments. His grasp of the situation is one that bids for confidence. He is, of course, under test, and attention will be given to the manner in which his government handles the situation which has been created there, but he presents not a selfish but a broad, patriotic plan of action which jibes with the things his country needs, and when he seeks recognition under such circumstances his request will be due for weighty consideration.

ANIMALS IN HIGHWAY

In his appeal to motorists to be less reckless in regard to domestic animals which may be encountered in the highway, Motor Vehicle Commissioner Stoeckel will arouse much sympathy.

During the past year the records show that there were 353 animals killed by autos, most of which were domestic animals, while it is believed an even greater number of wild animals were killed in the highways. How many more than those indicated in the department's records were killed by autos there is no way of knowing.

Many of those domestic animals include cattle and horses, in all probability, while a greater number may have involved dogs and possibly cats. There are those drivers who pay careful attention to any living thing that is encountered in the highway. It will be found that some drivers are unwilling to kill blacksnakes by running over them because they are considered of value on the farms.

While there are probably few who would halt a car for a snake, it might be well if there were more who were disposed to respect the dog or the cat which are family pets and which have both a real and sentimental value. As for cattle and horses, there can be no question as to what should be done. Exasperating delays may be caused but there is a property value involved in such instances which cannot be ignored. Furthermore, in all instances of the kind there is the matter of kindness to animals which should not be disregarded.

When the commissioner calls attention to the fact that "unless the killing and maiming of animals decreases it is highly probable that new legislation with severe penalties will be enacted," it can be appreciated that it is preferable to meet such conditions without being forced to it through penalization. There would be less laws if the people didn't insist upon making them necessary.

EASTERN POINT RESULTS

The democrats of Connecticut have met in convention and made their selections for state officials. This was one of the years when there was little competition for the respective places on the ticket, when there was clear sailing for those who could put up a real claim for nomination but when there were not many who were out for office.

As the result of the session at Eastern Point, the democratic ticket will be headed by Wilbur L. Cross of New Haven, formerly head of the Yale graduate school, who is a native of the town of Mansfield. Dean Cross' selection cannot be looked upon otherwise than a creditable one and he made it certain before he was nominated that he was going to be in control of the entire campaign and the organization's committee. This was not accomplished without an 11th hour debate but it was a case of yielding to his demand in order to get the use of his name.

Dean Cross will stand on a platform dealing with various matters, but which among other things calls for the repeal of the 18th amendment and the Volstead act, a stand not altogether strange in view of the fact that Connecticut has never ratified the amendment. He is, nevertheless, particularly outspoken in this respect and unquestionably was influential in having it included in the platform.

The result of the democratic convention will as usual serve to develop interest in the state campaign. Altogether it was a harmonious session, but harmony is to be expected once in a while.

EDITORIAL NOTES

It will not take long to stir up a real live interest in football just as soon as baseball goes onto the shelf.

Three weeks and daylight saving will be over. Then watch out for Thanksgiving and Christmas.

Uneasy rests the head where the presidency is dependent upon the support of a country which is inclined to revolutions.

The cranberry crop is reported above average. That means that Thanksgiving can be celebrated as usual.

THE WORLD AT FIFTEEN

"Men," said Ernestine grimly, "are queer. But girls are queerer. I mean you never know just what they are going to do or what it is all about after they do it. Why, I would have trusted Celeste with my life and I admired her terribly because she is so—oh, I can't express all that Celeste is! She is just exactly and precisely what you would adore to be your own self. Why, you could copy every move that girl makes because it is so different from the way you do it yourself, and so striking.

"For instance, if every one else is sitting down Celeste will be standing up, and when the rest of us are breaking our necks to get a green outfit Celeste completely knocks the props out from under us by coming out in black and white. And she always knows what to do when there is a situation. So many boys like Celeste that there always is a situation of some sort, and the way that girl can handle 'em is a wonder. Just as though she was in a chariot driving about twenty race horses, you see, and yet keeping things from tangling all up.

"So it was the most natural thing in the world for me to ask her what to do when Tom began forgetting dates with me and sort of taking me for granted. It was important that I bring him to time before the big sorority dance and I told Celeste how worried I was. She said it was a very simple case and all I needed to do was to get Tom worried and wondering and the easiest way to do that was to ignore him gently. I must not be abrupt nor cold nor snappy.

"It was quite important that I should be just as sweet as possible and look at him kindly but abstractedly and always be busy when he asked me to go anywhere. I was not even to accept for the movies and that was hard because he has the most gorgeous, long, yellow sports car and you do feel so swagger when you speed up in it to the theater and get out with everybody envying you. She insisted that I would win his entire attention if I could make him sort of upset this way and that certainly was what I wanted. I should just die if he didn't take me to that sorority dance, especially since I have had a fight with Bob and Arthur's away. I think a girl's life is awfully full of trouble and worry, somehow.

"It really was like going to a doctor and having him give you a lot of medicine that didn't taste good, but which you knew was the only cure. If any girl knew how to win a boy it was Celeste. They topple over like ninepins when she's around.

"So when Tom phoned and asked to come over I said I had to study. And when he asked how about Friday night and the show I said: 'Oh, Tom'—the sort of voice I heard my Aunt Helen use—'oh Tom, I'm so-o-o sorry, but I have another engagement,' just as though I were patting him on the head and saying, 'Little boy, please don't cry; it'll turn out all right some day.' I could hear him gasp over the wire. It seemed to be working.

"And when we met I looked at him brightly, but a little sadly, and smiled, and before he could get to me I had oozed away with some one else. He looked utterly amazed and my heart swelled with gratitude toward Celeste. I saw her go home after school in Tom's yellow car and she saw me and told me the next day that she did it on purpose, because she was eager to find out just how Tom was taking the treatment she had prescribed. She said, he didn't mention me once and that was a very good sign, as it showed how deeply he was thinking about me.

"I kept right on ignoring him until I nearly passed out, hoping for the best. And then what do you suppose happened right at the very minute when he should have been prostrate on my doorstep begging me to go to the dance? He took Celeste to it! Yes. Of all double-faced double-crossers that girl is the most prominent in my estimation. There isn't a single thing she can say to excuse herself. The trouble is she doesn't seem to care whether she excuses herself or not—and she's always been dying to ride in that yellow car and get out of it in a languid, cosmopolitan sort of way. You wait till I think up something!"—Chicago News.

A Washington Bystander

Associated Press Staff Writer
By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11—In the somnolent days of late summer with almost everybody political back home at work on his or her political fences, the capital was a sleepy place.

Watchmen dozed at the doors. Tourists and their booming guides filled the corridors.

Yet if you knew the old building well enough, you could find plenty of activity—good, hustling political activity.

It took almost a search warrant to locate the hidden away rooms of the democratic whip of the senate, but once you did find them you found also Colonel Ed Halsey hard at work preparing trouble for republican senators who are trying this year for another term.

Checks Votes

Colonel Halsey, despite his relatively youthful appearance, has been connected with the democratic bloc of the senate so long that it wouldn't be the same place without him.

And as secretary-treasurer of the democratic senatorial campaign committee over which Tydings of Maryland presides, the colonel has found plenty to do.

For one thing, he has been back through the books to find out just how every republican senator up for re-election voted on every important question during the last congress. He also has digested what each of these republicans had to say in his senate speeches.

And all of this data have been assembled for the information and guidance of the democratic opponents of sitting republicans.

Party Fixture

Man and boy, Halsey has been on the senate floor in a peculiarly intimate relationship with succeeding generations of democratic senators for 30 years or more. He knows 'em all. And he is one of those permanent fixtures of the party organization.

Besides his campaign committee job, he also is secretary to the minority and, beyond that, sort of permanent sergeant-at-arms of the democratic national conventions every four years.

Naturally, with this record of dyed-in-the-wool democratic regularity, Halsey has his own notions about what constitutes a democrat. He has set down a formula for answering the question, "What is a democrat?"

"A democrat is one who votes to adhere to the principles of the party as expounded by Jefferson, Jackson and Wilson; which assures personal liberty, freedom of religion, speech and press; equal justice, industry, frugality and happiness, abhorring corruption and privilege, and preserving inviolate the republic in vigor and union."

Which indicates that the colonel takes his democracy seriously, or else that senatorial phrase-making is a catchable disease.

YOUR HEALTH

Oral Health

By F. N. Ralston, D. D. S., Des Moines, Iowa.

(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

Oral health has been attracting attention increasingly in the past years, until now it ranks close to the top in public interest. What do we mean by oral health? It embraces not only the prevention of decay of the teeth, but the health and general welfare of all the tissues of the mouth.

While our dentists have progressed wonderfully in the study of mouth problems and their cure, many times, if not in the majority of cases, their work is handicapped by the lack of a good subject with which to work. By this mean that the structure of teeth and bone is so poor, and proper development so lacking, that their best efforts can produce only imperfect results.

The first, and possibly the chief step towards lasting oral health is a right start, and this can be accomplished only by strict adherence to a proper diet on the part of the mother during the entire term of pregnancy and lactation. In this connection let us stress the importance of breast feeding as compared with bottle feeding.

Next in line is the period from the eruption of the first teeth until they are all replaced by the permanent set. This is a crucial period, and the future health and comfort can be determined, to a great extent, by the care given the mouth during this time. Bad habits, such as thumb sucking, mouth breathing, and biting of the lips should be carefully guarded against, and the services of a physician employed to determine if there are adenoids or infected tonsils.

The dentist should examine the teeth regularly, and all deep pits and grooves and all places of beginning decay should be filled immediately, before the nerve becomes involved and infected. The first teeth, when badly decayed and infected, with pus flowing from gum boils, are a great menace and often the forerunner of many of the awful infectious diseases, due to the lowering of the vitality and lessening of the child's resistance to the germs causing these disorders. Much of the dullness in school, underweight, lack of pep and appetite are often directly due to these infected teeth.

Irregularity of the teeth is also a cause of many other ills, and may indirectly lead to untold damage. At the first indication of such trouble the advice and care of the dentist should be sought.

The first or six year molar is the first of the permanent teeth to appear, and is often confused with the first teeth, as it erupts just back of the last of these. It is one of the most important teeth in the mouth, and should be watched carefully and decay avoided if possible.

A visit to the dentist twice a year, careful and regular brushing of the teeth, together with proper diet, will go far toward oral health and comfort through the entire life.

IN THE DAY'S NEWS

From Rio to Buenos Aires By Air

Experiences during a swift air trip from Rio de Janeiro to Buenos Aires are recounted by Frederick Simpich in a communication to the National Geographic society and released as a bulletin from the Washington, D. C. headquarters of the society. This was the last long leg of a seaplane survey cruise from Washington to Cuba, over the West Indian Island bridge to Orinoco swamps, across amazing solitudes of the Amazon delta, and around the hugh hump of Brazil to Argentina.

"Ninety miles down the hill-tumbled coast below Rio," writes Mr. Simpich, 'we hit the fog. First it hung in league-long, twisted ropes—like great gray cables for some phantom suspension bridge across the Atlantic. Then, stirred by the faint breath of morning, the long fog ropes merged into solid, dirty waves. Barely could we see our wing tips.

"Flying by instruments, we bored the fog bank through, and came to Santos—where the world gets most of its coffee—in bright sunshine. From the air, we saw the short railway that runs inland to the near-by swiftly-growing city of Sao Paulo. In five minutes we landed a passenger, put off mail and took on more, and were in the air. You marvel at the speed and precision of the Nyrba mail schedule. At Florianopolis we met a Fleetster—down by a lone Yankee pilot named Stark—carrying north nothing but mail. On a tail wind, that morning, he had averaged 180 miles an hour!

"Toward Porto Alegre, where scores of thousands of German colonists make local life more like Breslau than Brazil, we struck more fog. From May till October, between Rio and the River Plate, fogs are frequent. The banks are anywhere from 200 to 2,500 feet high, or 'thick' as pilots say. 'If you come to a bank that lies flat on the sea, or has no holes in it,' said Pilot Shea, 'it's safest to set down on the water and wait for it to lift or else turn around and go back......... We never expose passengers to any risk. Most of the time here the fog ceiling is high enough so we can fly under it, low over the water. Or else it's Swiss cheese fog—with big holes in it through which we can see the ocean.'

" 'The weather prophet gets no breaks down here,' said another pilot. 'The winds run wild. They blow from anywhere. Rain comes from the north, or northeast, usually; and cold clearing winds blow from the southwest. And the lightning is bad; it gets ices, as you fly north towards the Equator.

" 'But it's the "Pampero," that Argentine wind with a speed record of 110 miles an hour, that makes the worst weather. It blows off the pampas. But we don't mind it much; pilots always get ample warning by the big clouds of dust that you can see coming ahead of these Pampero storms.'

"In pouring rain we took gas at Rio Grande do Sul, and hopped off with water fairly streaming from our wide wings. In heavy rain—not as in a fog—you can see land or water plainly at least 200 feet below you. The force and weight of heavy rainfall slows down a plane, as mud slows down a motor car. But it keeps going.

"For 250 miles, along the lonely coast of Rio Grande do Sul—Brazil's southernmost state—we flew past a string of great lakes that lies parallel to the beach. Part of this stretch is known as the Lagoa dos Patos. It is a wild, forsaken region till you round the shoulder of Uruguay, with its vast, green sheep pastures. Swift transition from empty wilderness to civilization's refined works is almost astounding here. Magnificent summer hotels dot the beaches, as you near Montevideo — with well kept golf courses. Big stockyards remind you of Kansas City. On a packing plant you see the name 'Swift' in big white letters. Ten minutes only we stop—in this great busy city of nearly half a million—for gas and mails; then up and off, over the wide muddy mouth of the great River Plate.

"For miles from Rio we had seen hardly a ship. Only wrecks, the rusty bones of dead ships, strewn on rocks and ledges. But now came a great parade of merchant vessels, flying flags of all sea-trading nations; for a double line of buoys marks the channel, which hugs the south shore of the Plate—and forms a busy lane to the sea. Like the Rhine, the Plate carries a colossal tonnage.

"We jumped a fog bank, and got another look at the long line of ships. It seemed like some big nation's navy, cruising in review past a king.

"Then beyond—like a mirage in desert haze—we glimpsed the majestic sky line of Buenos Aires, metropolis of South America. Our goal, after nearly 10,000 miles of flying over strange lands, up hidden rivers, around volcanoes — across forests primeval and the jungle wastes of trackless tropics. Smoky, foggy, serrated with skyscrapers; tall chimneys, radio towers, masts, funnels, cranes, derricks, all emerged from the blurred etching as our plane sped closer at 100 miles an hour. Pilots always want to spurt, the last few leagues! Higher we climbed, for a better view, and saw a vast, solid far-flung prairie city—flat as Chicago—stretching miles and miles. And still farther away, in the red haze of foggy sunset, the everlasting pampas."

"FOOD VACCINATION" MAY AID DIGESTION

PARIS—(AP)—"Food vaccination" to prevent the rashes or digestive disturbances that some persons are subject to is under experiment at Pasteur.

Prof. Besredka is described as giving a very small portion of the troublesome food an hour before the meal at which the objectionable dish is to be served.

This is supposed to act as a vaccination serum, immunizing the patient.

A HISTORY OF CONNECTICUT INDUSTRY

Released by Manufacturers Association of Connecticut

McKesson & Robbins, Inc., Bridgeport.

Among the American firms of federal days, McKesson & Robbins, Inc., has served the needs of the medical profession and promoted public health for more than 100 years.

The firm was known in 1828 as Charles M. Olcott and later in 1833 as Olcott, McKesson & Co. The principal partner, John McKesson, Sr., descended from a pioneer Scotch ancestor, a farmer who had settled in Pennsylvania 50 years before the Revolution. In 1833 Daniel C. Robbins came to the business, continuing through his long life to 1888.

Great sailing ships of the 30's and 40's, bringing native materials from over the world to New York, docked in nearby South street, poking their long bowprits over the roofs of the water front warehouses. When they sailed away over the seven seas, McKesson & Robbins products were stowed in the cargo holds for European and far east ports.

The whole world has relied upon McKesson & Robbins in all the years since, and to meet world demands the firm's export labels are printed in all languages including the Chinese. World travelers in strange lands greet with happy recognition the firm name of McKesson & Robbins, Inc., upon the labels of McKesson products, which are welcomed and appreciated throughout two hemispheres.

The firm early established its own laboratory and for a century has devoted itself to research and scientific effort. It has never deviated in the long years of its magnificent history from its own higher standards of purity and manufacturing excellence.

The "old school" idea of pride in supreme quality has been handed down from generation to generation and today McKesson quality is an institution—a higher standard which the world accepts with confidence because it has endured for more than 100 years.

McKesson laboratories, rebuilt and newly equipped periodically as science advanced, have served the needs of many people in plagues and disasters in peace times and in three American and many foreign wars. No more complete laboratory in pharmacy manufacture exists in the world today than that of McKesson & Robbins, Inc.

Of the firms in America when McKesson & Robbins was young few now exist. It was an old business in 1868 when a bag of gold dust worth $20,000 was received from frontier Montana, with a letter: "We want to open a drug store out here. Send complete stock in return for the dust."

John McKesson aided Morse with capital, to invent the telegraph and the progressive firm was listed in the first telephone directory, one of the few firm names to be continuously included.

Today McKesson & Robbins, Inc., occupies its most important place in the affairs of medicine and public health. Even more splendid than its history is its present; its service to humanity is made more important by the forces of its numbers, for its laboratory and manufacturing plant at Bridgeport covers acres, and 67 McKesson owned distributors, in geographical centers of America are bound by its fine traditions and serve the independent druggists of the nations.

Pride in quality, in maintaining standards of excellence, and in a century of honorable dealing; pride in the firm's heritage and present high position, and pride in loyal and friendly relationships with the medical profession throughout the whole world are precious possessions, which, however, impose great responsibilities upon the present generation of managers of McKesson & Robbins, Inc.

All that has been learned in a century of successful pharmaceutical manufacture; the good will which has come in 100 years of honest dealing with the professions and public contribute to the present eminence of McKesson & Robbins, Inc. The present officers are: F. D. Coster, president; C. B. Benjamin, vice president; J. R. White, vice president; George Dietrich, secretary; Julian Thompson, treasurer.

CURVED GLASS RODS MAKE BOILING LIQUIDS BEHAVE

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—(AP)—Chemists who boil all sorts of liquids are familiar with a peculiar action which they call "bumping". It means, says a scientific report of the Eastman synthetic organic chemicals department, that the boiling takes place in intermittent spurts.

This is a nuisance to chemists because sometimes the entire body of liquid leaves the bottom of a flask with sufficient velocity to push a hole through the top. Curved glass rods in flasks largely eliminate these breaks.

FIRE ENGINE EQUIPPED TO SPRAY PLANT LICE

BERLIN—(AP)—Why not use a fire engine to kill plant lice?

So reasons Max Michelsen, German inventor, who has demonstrated that method by employing a full-sized fire engine, armed with water for the experiment, to spray a large orchard within 20 minutes.

He attached a portable motor pump to the engine by a long hose, and the pump end of the hose was equipped with several smaller hoses, each terminating in an atomizer-like nozzle.

When They Go Away To School

Our old house seems growing lonely,
Though it's cheerful as a rule;
Dancing, melody and daughter—
But they're going off to school!

Trunks are piled in hall and stairway,
Women, sewing, everywhere,
Talk of new collegiate fashions,
Modish hats and cuts of hair.

Tennis balls and tennis rackets,
Clubs for golf and polo, too,
Lie around on chairs and tables—
No, there's not a book in view!

Messengers from stores arriving,
Bring in bundles by the score;
Buddy talks a style-book language
I have never heard before.

He must have new "prom" regalia,
Sweaters, too, in snappy shades;
Says a guy can't be yell-leader
Looking like the ace of spades.

Whispers hint the girls are "pledges,"
Something new their mother's staged;
Only starting off to college,
Yet she has them both engaged!

Mother calls me plain old fogy,
Age has laid me on the shelf;
Says, somehow, I don't remember
When I went to school myself.

Wonder if I have forgotten?
Times have changed a lot since then;
Gee, I'd like to go back with them
Even if I "flunked" again!

Restless CHILDREN

CHILDREN will fret, often for no apparent reason. But there's always Castoria! As harmless as the recipe on the wrapper; mild and bland as it tastes. But its gentle action soothes a youngster more surely than a more powerful medicine.

That's the beauty of this special children's remedy! It may be given the tiniest infant — as often as there is need. In cases of colic, diarrhea or similar disturbance, it is invaluable. A coated tongue calls for just a few drops to ward off constipation; so does any suggestion of bad breath. Whenever children don't eat well, don't rest well or have any little upset—this pure vegetable preparation is usually all that's needed.

MR. AND MRS. IVES' DAUGHTER HAS PECULIAR ACCIDENT

Encouraging news came Thursday night from Mrs. Abel Reggio, a patient at Backus hospital, Norwich, who was said to be comfortable. Mrs. Reggio came from her home at Bay Shore, Long Island, Monday to visit her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William W. Ives, of Champlin street. Tuesday evening, as she had just left her car in the yard, the brakes did not hold and the machine backed, striking the gate, which, as she tried to stop the car, struck Mrs. Reggio, breaking two small bones in her left ankle.

The accident is the more regrettable, since Mrs. Reggio came to Norwich to join her sister, Mrs. Adelbert S. Armstrong, and her father, Mr. Ives, who were concerned over the illness this week of Mrs. Ives. However, Mrs. Ives, too, was reported to be improved Thursday evening.

EASTFORD

Twenty new members were received into the church in Eastford at the communion service last Sunday morning at 10:45. After Deacon Gilbert S. Deane, on behalf of the church, had given the right hand of fellowship to the pastor Rev. George H. Reese, the following were welcomed into full fellowship by the pastor: Mr. and Mrs. [illegible] Bonnell by letter from Hull Memorial [illegible] church, Cheshire; Mrs. Gertrude Bowen, by letter, from the Methodist church in Spencer, Mass.; Mrs. Margaret Stevens, by letter from [illegible] church, in Southbridge, Mass.; Mrs. Mary I. Reese, and Walter Reese, by letter, from Central Village; on confession of faith: Carolyn Warren, Lilian Reese, Thelma and Hermon Barlow, James, Lillian and Emil Vaida, Albert and Franklin Buell, Donald Clark and Helen and Lois Bosworth. Ten of those uniting on confession of faith were baptized at this service. Mrs. Sumner Warren was one of the twenty received into the church but was unable to be present to receive the right hand of fellowship.

WEDDING

Lamb—Fregeau

At a nuptial high mass in the presence of hundreds of invited guests, Miss Georgianna Fregeau, daughter of Mrs. Philias Ducharme of Providence street, became the bride of Sidney A. Lamb, U. S. N., at 10:15 o'clock Thursday morning at Sacred Heart church. Rev. Donat B. Jette performed the nuptial ceremony and was celebrant of the mass that followed. Miss Alice Frechette, organist at the church, had charge of the music.

For her maid of honor, the bride had her sister, Miss Corinne Fregeau. The best man was Charles E. Drew. As the bridal party moved up the main aisle to the altar, Miss Frechette played the Bridal Chorus from Lohengrin. Mendelssohn's Wedding March was used for the recessional.

The bride wore a beautiful gown of white satin. Her bridal veil of tulle was caught up with orange blossoms and she carried a bouquet of white roses with shower of lilies of the valley. Miss Fregeau wore green satin with transparent velvet hat to match and also carried roses.

After the church ceremony there was a reception and wedding breakfast at the Wauregan hotel, which was attended by 65 guests, many from out of town. At the bride's home there was a lavish display of wedding gifts, testifying to her popularity among the younger set.

The groom is stationed at the submarine base at Groton where he is a chief petty officer. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Luther Lamb. The bride has always lived in Taftville where she has a wide circle of friends. During the day the happy couple left for New York and Atlantic City. When they return they are to take up their residence in the village.

FUNERAL

Mrs. Ozias Dodge and son, John Dodge, are home from their camp at Squam Lake, N. H. The latter will return to Yale next week.

Dr. and Mrs. William T. Driscoll and family have opened their home on Broadway, after passing the season at Groton Long Point.

Miss Woolman and Miss Hart, who have been guests at Norwich Inn, have left for their homes in Brooklyn, N. Y. During their stay in town they entertained several luncheon and dinner parties at the inn, also were honor guests at a number of social affairs in Norwich homes.

LAW CALLS FOR REAL ESTATE OWNERS TO RECORD NAME CHANGE

Attention was called Thursday by the Norwich board of assessors to a state law which is little known by property owners although it has been in the public acts since 1921.

This is the law which provides that owners of real estate or those having an interest in real estate shall make a record with the town clerk if they change their name for any reason. The law provides that the name change shall be recorded within 60 days of the time it occurs and fixes a penalty in case this is not done.

It is apparent that this statute provision would apply most frequently in the case of married women owning or having an interest in real estate before their marriage. It would also apply to women securing a divorce with the right to resume their maiden name. Another application of the law would be in the case of persons applying to the superior court and securing a change of name.

In any of these cases, if the person concerned owned real estate before the name change a certificate showing the new name would need to be recorded with the town clerk. The law does not provide what form this certificate should take, but the Norwich assessors suggest that if it should contain a reference by book and page to the real estate affected it would more completely meet the situation in showing the ownership.

The statute referred to is chapter 42, public acts of 1921, and reads as follows:

Sec. 1—Any person owning real estate or having an interest therein whose name has been changed shall, within 60 days after such change, file with the town clerk of the town in which such real estate is located a certificate duly acknowledged, giving the name before and after such change, and the town clerk shall record and index the same in the land records.

Sec. 2—Any person failing to comply with the provisions of this act shall forfeit to the town in which such real estate is situated, the sum of $10, to be recovered in a civil action in the name of the town.

REPORT MR. PERKINS ON ROAD TO RECOVERY

MIDDLETOWN, Sept. 11.—(AP)—Robert W. Perkins, of Norwich, vice-president of the Connecticut Light & Power Co., tonight was reported on the road to recovery by attaches of Middlesex hospital, here. Mr. Perkins suffered severe injuries about the face and skull yesterday in an automobile accident.

The bones about his left eye were crushed but doctors said he would not lose the sight of his eye.

In communication by telephone with the hospital at Middletown late Thursday night, it was learned that the condition of Mr. Perkins through the day had been good and that he was conscious and it was anticipated that the wounds in his face would heal well. No x-ray pictures have been taken of the injury.

His injuries were received late Wednesday afternoon at a point on the Meriden-Middletown road, opposite Mt. Higby reservoir, as Mr. Perkins was driving alone in his automobile towards Middletown.

State Policeman Meilke of the Westbrook barracks and Officer Edward J. Hill of Middletown learned from witnesses that Mr. Perkins as he approached a turn in the road apparently was watching the scenery and did not notice an oncoming truck. John Bailey, operator of the truck, which was owned by the Welker Hopps Co. of Middletown, pulled the truck over next the right fence and blew his horn several times but Mr. Perkins did not see the truck until he was almost upon it. He struck the truck a glancing blow and went across the road into the fence, a rail from which came into the car and struck Mr. Perkins, afterward going out through the back of the car.

CONTESTS IN REPUBLICAN CAUCUS AT HAMPTON

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Sept. 11.—A hard fought contest developed in the republican caucus at Hampton tonight in which 122 votes were cast. The contest was for first selectman to which John I. Hammond was elected over Greene G. Hulling. The second contest was for second selectman with Chester B. Jewett as the losing contender against Richard Burchnall and the third contest was in the registrar of voters with Carl W. Jewett winning over Charles Chester. There was also a contest for grand juror. The slate as drawn up by the caucus was as follows. Assessor, C. F. Merrill; collector of taxes, Fred Surridge; selectmen, John I. Hammond, Richard Burchnall; registrar of voters, Carl W. Jewett; auditor, Fred Burnham; board of relief, W. W. Jewett; grand jurors, W. W. Jewett, Patrick J. Navin; constables, Oscar Barrett, Lloyd Edwards; library board, Rev. M. L. Muttart, Mrs. E. E. Chappel, school board, Mrs. A. D. Marsh, John Lewis; moderator, Charles E. Burnham; clerk, Judge Ray Fuller.

Charles S. Francis was chairman of the caucus and Arthur A. Dean, clerk.

CRIMINAL COURT SESSION TO BE IN NEW LONDON

Judge Christopher L. Avery of Groton will be on the bench for the criminal term of the superior court which is to open next Tuesday and the session is to be held in New London, which is a departure from the practice which has prevailed for years in having the September term of the court in Norwich.

There is a long docket of miscellaneous cases in which the accused will be put to plea on the first day of court, and on the second day a grand jury will be summoned in to take up the case of Stanley Bogue of Mystic, who killed two persons there on the night of Aug. 9. He is held in the jail at New London on a murder charge and the grand jury will be asked to find a true bill of murder against him.

Bogue's victims were Mrs. Eva Roberts and Ole Ostberg, both of Mystic, and it was jealousy of Ostberg which is given as the motive for the murder, which was done with an axe. Bogue, who was a lodger in the Roberts home, crushed the skulls of both his victims with the axe and then attempted to bury their bodies in the cellar of the house. However, he gave this up and went out into a field nearby where he slashed his wrists in an attempt at suicide, but when this failed he called up the state police barracks and is alleged to have made a confession to the officers who responded to his call.

ACTOR GILLETTE TO ATTEND OLD WHEEL RIDERS MEET

William Gillette, the eminent actor-playwright and novelist will leave his castle and personally-operated railroad at Hadlyme long enough on Saturday, Sept. 20, to attend the 45th annual reunion of the old guard of the Hartford Wheel club, which will be held at Keyrock inn on Lake Pocotopaug, East Hampton. Mr. Gillette was once an ardent and daring wheelman. No toreador was ever more nimble or agile in his mastering of a maddened bull than Mr. Gillette was in his leaps into the saddle of his 62-inch silent steed. Youths of today who know only the safety of low wheel bicycle have never tasted the spirit of adventure that was the lure of the great and graceful high wheel. Coasting now is nothing more than holding the feet rigid on the pedals, but coasting 45 years ago was as thrilling as jumping from a plane in a parachute and much more bumpy. There were no highways 45 years ago and we know them now. No pneumatic tires. Should a boulder suddenly appear there was no way of stopping, and over the handle bars the rider would go.

The bicycle Mr. Gillette rode was a Columbia light roadster which was the last word in man propelled transportation. The light roadster had tangent spokes and curved handle bars. Its predecessors were the Columbia Expert and the Standard — two much heavier models with straight spokes and straight handle bars. All the Columbias, of course, were the product of the Pope Manufacturing Co., of Hartford, and in those days Hartford, in the bicycle industry, was what Detroit is now in motor cars.

Mr. Gillette was an ardent wheelman all through his 20s — the years he was making his first successes in the Esmeralda, the Professor, and the Private Secretary. His first Civil war play, Held by the Enemy, was produced in the late 80s and it brought the author and star both added fame and profits. It was received with great favor south of the Mason and Dixon line, just as it was all over the north. It was the first war play to bring about an era of good feeling. Thomas Henry Bean (Mr. Gillette), a war correspondent for Leslie's, was madly in love with a southern girl who could see nothing good in any detestable Yank. During a big battle Bean lost an arm. The war was soon over but he tarried long enough to make one last play for the little southern rebel. She was blind to his pleadings until she noticed that he was leaving an arm on southern soil and then she capitulated only to find that the missing arm was still intact and twined around her waist.

Following a short retirement from the stage Mr. Gillette scored again in Too Much Johnson and then came Secret Service and Sherlock Holmes. There were other successes such as Clarice, Thirty Days and Dear Brutus, but the whole world constantly clamored for Gillette in Sherlock Holmes, just as was the case of Booth in Hamlet and Joseph Jefferson in Rip Van Winkle. Mr. Gillette's farewell tour as the immortal detective during the season of 1929-30 was successful far beyond his expectations. He was urged to make another tour the coming season but his railroad needs his attention. Talk of mergers is heard on all sides and Mr. Gillette may have his eyes on the New York Central.

Low And High Spots

It is far easier to induce the actor and playwright to relate the low spots in his career than it is to describe his triumphs. As stage director of The Gilded Cage, in Austin, Texas, he made a lamentable failure. It was in the 70s and he was very young. It was probably his first attempt at stage directing. The high spot of the play was a steamboat race on the Mississippi river. The favorite steamer —the sure winner—hove in sight to receive the wild plaudits of the crowded house. The second steamer— the sure loser—was unfortunate enough to hook onto a piece of dead scenery—a street scene showing a sizable building — and never got by. The street scene with the building looming as big as a mountain, came on apace. The second steamer never showed itself but the building moved madly on and on and easily beat the favorite steamer down the rushing waters. The youthful stage director received a call and a good one but not a curtain call.

The Hartford Wheel club was organized in 1885 when Mr. Gillette was dividing his time between bicycling and acting. Probably the box office gave him more worries at that time than did the prospect of headers and broken shoulders.

There are few bicycle clubs in the whole world today that are as old and as active as the Hartford Wheel club. Its reunions will probably continue as long as a single member survives. At its annual get together outings and banquets it has been favored with the presence of many notable figures, all of whom were wedded to the wheel in boyhood and never lost their love for bicycling. The reunion this year will draw the clans together from far and near. Members are coming from Georgia and the far west.

Gillette To Entertain

Mr. Gillette who is now as much of a boy as he ever was, will tell them things they never heard before and he will have a royal time.

Fred Atwater, of Bridgeport, a racing man in the 80s and later mayor of the Park City, will also be present and so will Walter Kendall, of Boston, the original Wheeling Around the Hub bicyclist. George M. Hendee, the Springfield boy, who upset the world when the Springfield meets were the American derbies, is an enthusiastic member of the wheel club and so is Senator W. J. Morgan of Newark, N. J., who brought the first team of English track men to America. A. Kennedy Child, who represented Colonel Pope in England before the advent of the safety, is another member who never misses a reunion. Mr. Child is Hartford's most notable orator. As a platform speaker he has few peers and has served the republican national committee in many presidential campaigns. He toured the country in a private car with the late Chauncey M. Depew in the McKinley-Bryan campaign of 1896.

The reunion this year will naturally center round the club's distinguished guest, Mr. Gillette. In 1889, Mr. Gillette rode his light roadster high wheel to the East Hartford races in July. Sitting in the grandstand he was asked to name the winner in the novice race. Giving the line up a quick once over he picked Harry Cornell, a gaunt loose-jointed youth who had just learned to ride. "He'll win in a walk," said Gillette and Cornell won. He also won two more races with great ease, defeating such veterans as Harding, Dresser and Reid. In the fall at Charter Oak park he won the state championship from a field headed by the former champion, Ludwig Forster. Cornell was a new comer in Hartford and was employed as secretary by the late Martin Bennett. He was not popular. He could do everything he tried to do—and do it too well. The following spring he resigned his position and started west on his bicycle. In Indiana he fell in with a tramp and gave the knight of the road 50 cents for a Louisiana lottery ticket. Reaching St. Louis Mo., he read in a newspaper that his ticket had drawn a portion of the capital prize—his portion being $10,000.

Cornell was a soldier of fortune — picked in an instant by the creator of Sherlock Holmes.

DRY ADMINISTRATOR DENIES ACCEPTING $100,000 BRIBE

SEATTLE, Wash., Sept. 11—(AP)—Roy C. Lyle, suspended prohibition administrator, in federal court here today denied he and three of his official associates accepted $100,000 in protection money from organized liquor runners.

Lyle also testified how he engaged Alfred M. Hubbard, former rum runner, as a dry agent, when the latter said he wanted to reform and "turn in" Roy Olmstead and his associates in a huge liquor ring.

Hubbard is a star witness for the government in the trial of Lyle, William M. Whitney, former chief assistant, and Earl Corwin and R. L. Fryant, deposed agents.

Denying Hubbard's charge he had known of regular collections of protection money, Lyle said the only bribe Hubbard told him about was $1,000 obtained from Sam Newman in the Zev rum ship case. This money was used as government evidence in the trial of the Zev conspirators.

$11,000,000 SUIT AGAINST FORD MOTOR CO. OF DELAWARE

TAMPA, Fla., Sept. 11—(AP)—Suit for $11,000,000 against the Ford Motor company of Delaware, was filed here today in federal court by attorneys for Fred William Furen, of St. Petersburg, who contends the Ford company has infringed on a patent he obtained for an outside intake pipe from gasoline tanks on automobiles.

A similar suit was filed some time ago, asking $2,000,000 but was thrown out when Ford company attorneys pointed out the company sued at that time, the Ford company of Michigan, did not make automobiles.

The amount asked now is greater because, attorneys for the St. Petersburg man said, the Ford company has made a vastly greater number of cars since the original suit was filed. A royalty value at $1.50 is placed by the complainant on each intake pipe placed on the new Ford automobile.

Backus Hospital Dismissals

Patients dismissed Thursday at the Backus hospital were the following:

William Boullia, 44 Summit street; Mrs. Arad Robinson and infant daughter, of Franklin; Arthur Belisle, Taftville; Mrs. George Young and infant daughter, Willimantic; Mrs. Marion Paul, Taftville.

GALES FERRY

The September meetings of the Woman's Home Missionary society of the M. E. church were resumed Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. John Harold, at the submarine base, following suspension during the summer. Eighteen adults and two children were present. The president, Mrs. Harold, conducted the program. This opened with the hymn, The Old Rugged Cross, and devotions led by Mrs. Courtland E. Colver. The recording secretary, Mrs. Morton E. Crawford, called the roll and the treasurer, Mrs. Colver, gave her report. A letter regarding the annual sale for the Silver Lake work was read by Mrs. Harold and any wishing to donate to this sale were asked to leave gifts with Mrs. Harold H. Critchlow by October 15th.

Letters from the corresponding secretary and president of the Norwich district, touching the work of the new auxiliary year, were also read by Mrs. Harold.

Mrs. C. Alton Chapman and Mrs. H. Winthrop Hurlbutt read selections and the hymn, What a Friend, was sung. A reading, Dan Beard, Chief Scout, Sizes Up Prohibition, was given by Mrs. Dudley C. Perkins. Mrs. Colver will arrange the program for the next session but the place of meeting was not decided upon. The mission enigmas were conducted by Miss Matilda Harold. Sandwiches, peach shortcake, tea and coffee were served by the hostess and her mother, Mrs. Marie Cathcart, assisted by Miss Harold and Miss Margaret S. Colver.

Miss Ethel V. Woodward, of Manchester, was a visitor the first of the week with Mr. and Mrs. Carroll S. Hurlbutt and was accompanied by Miss Ann Strickland, of Hartford.

Mrs. Delphine Fish left Sunday evening to visit her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Coleby Morgan, in Mystic.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl B. Lawson and children, Hester and Richards Lawson, of the village, with Mrs. Lawson's mother, Mrs. Fred E. Richards, of Long Cove, who have spent the summer at the cottage at Bluff Point, Groton, returned recently to their homes.

The Robison family, who returned to their home in Meriden for the opening of the school year, were back for a visit at their summer cottage over the week end.

Trustees Re-elected

The annual election of trustees of the Methodist church was held at the vestry Monday evening. Rev. Harold H. Critchlow was chairman of the meeting and Dudley C. Perkins was clerk. Nelson Parker was teller. Members of the board, whose term expired at this time, Peter Hoffman, Courtland E. Colver and R. Irving Hurlbutt, were re-elected for three years.

Miss Mary Brush, of Mount Vernon, N. Y., has been spending several days with Mr. and Mrs. Joseph H. Davidson in the Allyn's Point section.

Surprised Former Members

Members of the Z. M. W. club from the Methodist church, of Wakefield, R. I., paid a surprise visit one evening recently to Mrs. Carroll S. Hurlbutt, a former member of the club. There were 18 in the party who came by special motor bus.

Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Earp and children motored to Woonsocket, R. I. the first of the week.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard S. Towt and family returned to Hollis, L. I., Monday, after spending the season at their cottage.

Carroll S. Hurlbutt has completed the cellars for two cottages on his property in the village and has begun the erection of one of the bungalows.

Miss Bertha Hellon, of New York, who passed the season at the Oley cottage where she was joined for August by her sister, Mrs. Jack Williams and family, of Hollis, L. I., returned home recently.

LOSER TO CONTEST CONGRESSIONAL VOTE

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 11.—(AP)—While other losing candidates in Tuesday's democratic primary were congratulating their opponents, Representative James O'Connor announced today that he would contest the congressional vote in the First district.

The complete unofficial vote showed State Senator Joseph O. Fernandez the winner by a majority of 1,845 out of a total vote of 49,071.

The contest, Representative O'Connor said, would be based on the vote in St. Bernard parish, where he said 3,997 ballots were reported while only 1,743 poll taxes had been paid. Out of the total vote in St. Bernard, Fernandez received 3,681 against O'Connor's 250.

In the race for the nomination for the United States senate, almost complete unofficial returns gave Governor Huey P. Long a majority of 38,810 over Senator Joseph E. Ransdell. With only five precincts missing out of the whole state the vote stood: Long, 151,513; Ransdell, 112,703, in the total of 264,216.

Senator Ransdell sent a telegram to Governor Long wishing him success in Washington.

Representative J. Zach Spearing congratulated Paul Maloney, New Orleans business man, who defeated him in the Second district by approximately 20,000 votes. In the other contested congressional election, the incumbent, Representative Numa Montet, defeated Clarence J. Bourg in the Third district by around 5,000 votes.

SPANISH CABINET MOVES TO STABILIZE THE PESETA

MADRID, Sept. 11.—(AP)—The Spanish cabinet tonight took additional measures designed to stabilize the peseta and at the same time Premier Berenguer announced that the press censorship which had been in force since the advent of the Primo De Rivera dictatorship would be lifted next week.

With regard to the monetary unit the government came out definitely for a return to the gold standard on a basis compatible with the economic interests of the nation, while monetary reform will precede stabilization.

Those who charge more interest than provided by law will be heavily punished. Dealings in foreign currency have been centralized in the semi-official Bank of Spain and are limited to necessities.

The peseta, fluctuation of which in the last two months has caused much alarm, improved today after the regulations on foreign exchange transactions went into effect. It was quoted at 9:05 to the dollar, whereas a few days ago it set a record low of 9:75 to the dollar.

Some of the banks protested the arrangement, but the government said it was necessary to prevent speculation in the peseta.

The lifting of the press censorship will mean that Spanish newspapers for the first time since 1923 may voice their likes and dislikes in matters political. They view this as timely because of the political campaign preceding the parliamentary elections scheduled for December.

This also gives the right of free speech and assembly. Anyone may speak his opinion without hindrance providing that his remarks are based upon the truth.

TO DEMONSTRATE REMARKABLE NEW

RUPTURE INVENTION

If you are ruptured and wear a truss, now is your opportunity to get a FREE TRIAL of the most scientifically constructed Rupture Support ever invented.

William S. Rice, Adams, N. Y., originator of the Rice (Non-Surgical) Rupture Method, is sending his representative to the Wauregan hotel, Norwich, Conn., Monday, Sept. 15, to personally explain and demonstrate his wonderful New Rupture Invention entirely free to every man, woman and child who is ruptured.

It is absolutely guaranteed to hold any rupture, large or small, no matter where located and afford proper protection at all times.

It is positively the most comfortable for every day wear at all kinds of work and can be worn nights and at all other times with no discomfort.

It is guaranteed not to slip out of place under any circumstances and the pressure so easily adjusts itself to all positions and movements of the body that there is no cutting or chafing.

It has proven the only properly constructed Rupture Support ever supplied for ruptured women, can be worn with or without the corset and actually improves the abdominal outlines.

It is equally valuable for ruptured children as it allows for full normal growth and development without limiting youthful activities or allowing the slightest protrusion of the rupture.

Pads are made of soft, resilient material, light, durable and comfortable. Hug the flesh snugly yet do not irritate. They are designed and shaped to fit and give pressure at the right spot so the bowel cannot possibly escape.

Hundreds of thousands in use all over the civilized world, and thousands are throwing all trusses on the scrap heap after a brief use of this scientific Rupture Support.

THE FREE TRIAL

is for every man, woman and child who is ruptured. So don't fail to call and test the exceptional merits of this guaranteed Rupture and Weakness Support. It has no equal and is being recommended by physicians and hospitals everywhere. Call any time from 9 to 12 a. m., 2 to 5 p. m., or 7 to 9 evenings. The test, remember, costs you nothing. SEES WARNING TO DRYS IN MICHIGAN VOTE

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11—(AP)—Henry H. Curran, president of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, said in a statement today the defeats of dry republicans in Michigan and Washington "are direct warning to republican leaders to wake up and get at the real opinion of their republican followers."

"If they don't do it pretty soon, the democrats will do it for them on election day," he added.

He recommended that the heads of the republican national committee "sit down together and try to realize what is happening among republicans when three such stalwart republican districts as the 6th and 7th Michigan and the 1st Washington throw out the dry and replace him by a wet in a republican primary."

"Up in Vermont—the only state besides Utah which went for Mr. Taft in 1912—the rock-ribbed erpublican congressional district west of the Green mountains gives Mr. Drennan, the wet republican candidate for the nomination, 10,000 votes, while his opponent, Governor Weeks, the most popular man in Vermont since he handled flood relief, receives only 3,000 more to secure the nomination," he said.

ASHFORD

Communion of the Lord's supper was administered in connection with the service held in Ashford, Rev. George H. Reese, pastor, last Sunday afternoon, Deacon Gilbert S. Deane, of the Eastford church, assisting. Gabriel Kosa was received into full membership of the church.

Looks Young, Feels Fine

"Eight years ago before my last baby was born, I started taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I got such good results that I named her Catherine Lydia. I have six older children and five grandchildren, too. I am 44, but people tell me I look much younger. I am now taking the Vegetable Compound again because of my age. I eat and sleep better and I do all my housework, and my washing. I will do my best to answer letters."—Mrs. H. Dolhonde, 6318 York St., New Orleans, Louisiana.

VANCE PITCHES BROOKLYN TO WITHIN HALF GAME OF LEAGUE LEADING CUBS

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Sept. 11—(AP)—Dazzy Vance, veteran tow-headed ace of the Brooklyn pitching staff, hurled one of the great games of his long career today, striking out thirteen Chicago Cubs to give the Robins a 2 to 1 victory and a clean sweep of the three-game series with the slipping league leaders.

The Robins scored both of their runs in the first inning on Glenn Wright's home run into the left field bleachers. Hack Wilson's forty-eighth homer of the season sailed over the right field wall in the seventh for Chicago's only score and was the first tally off Brooklyn pitching in the three-game series.

The game marked Brooklyn's seventeenth straight victory and put the Robins only half a game out of first place. Vance's feat in fanning thirteen men was a season's record.

Guy Bush allowed Brooklyn eight hits in the seven innings he worked. Only one of Brooklyn's hits was necessary in the scoring, however, as Bush passed Herman in the first and then Wright sent his tremendous drive into the deep left center bleachers.

Until game time, the question of whether Vance would pitch was undetermined. He has been suffering from sciatica but once on the mound, he followed in the footsteps of Ray Phelps and Adolfo Luque, who had shut out the Cubs in the two preceding games. Vance struck out Taylor, Hartnett and Bell in the inning that Wilson hit his homer.

Babe Herman made a spectacular catch of Wilson's long fly in the ninth to cut short a rally, the Babe backing up against the concrete wall to take the ball. Today's game ended the season's series between the two clubs with the count standing: Chicago 14, Brooklyn 8.

CARDS BEAT GIANTS TO ADVANCE TOWARD TOP

NEW YORK, Sept. 11—(AP)—The St. Louis Cardinals bounded within one-half game of first place in the National league pennant race today, defeating the New York Giants 5 to 4 in a give and take affair. The victory gave the Cards a lead of 2 to 1 in the series and left the Giants still three games back of the Cubs, who lost to the Robins.

Chick Hafey's homer with two on base in the first gave the Cards a three run lead but a slow comeback tied the score in the fifth and kept it deadlocked until the eighth when St. Louis put over the winning run on a walk, a single and an infield play.

Although the score was higher, the third game was as close and as bitterly fought as the first two. "Wild" Bill Hallahan and Bill Walker waged a southpaw duel at the start with Hafey's homer which came after Adams had singled and Frisch had walked, started the Cards off with a big advantage that the steady Giant hitting and Hallahan's passes could not quite overcome. Two more Giant pitchers and one Card appeared before the game ended.

One run in the fourth and two more in the fifth, scored when Critz, Allen and Lindstrom singled in succession and Hallahan inserted a wild pitch, gave the Giants a 3-3 tie. Each team scored once in the seventh to keep the deadlock, then Hafey tallied again in the eighth on his pass, Wilson's single and High's hit to Critz, whose throw to the plate was too late.

The Giants in the final inning filled the bases against Jim Lindsey, who pitched the last three innings for the Cards, but some brilliant St. Louis fielding cut off the rally. The score:

PHILLIES TAKE THIRD STRAIGHT FROM REDS

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 11.—(AP)—The Phillies made it three straight victories over the Cincinnati Reds by winning today 15 to 7. It was a slugging match from start to finish, the victors blasting out 18 safe blows while the Reds piled up 14.

Cincinnati took the lead in the second inning by scoring three runs, but the Phillies came back and totalled five in the third and five in the fourth to clinch the verdict. Four home runs featured the slugging match. Hurst had two while Klein and Cucinnello had one apiece. The score:

IDEALS TO PLAY HOLY NAME TEAM ON SUNDAY

Tony Bernard, director of the destinies of the Ideals, has booked the fast Holy Name society team of Jewett City as the baseball attraction at the J. B. Martin field on Sunday afternoon. The Holy Name team which has made a very impressive showing this season will be considerably strengthened for the game on Sunday. Vachon, the wonder pitcher of Jewett City will probably toe the rubber for the visitors.

Manager Bernard is seeking to arrange a series with the Polish Citizens when the latter team completes its series with the New London Kaceys. The Ideals feel certain that they can take the measure of the Citizens even if they do win the county title.

McLARNIN KNOCKS OUT SINGER IN 3RD

YANKEE STADIUM, New York, Sept. 11.—(AP)—Young Al Singer, baby king of the lightweights, risked his prestige in a gamble for more tonight and fell a victim to the dynamite that lurks in the two hard fists of Jimmy McLarnin.

The Dublin destroyer, cherubic Celt who looks the meekest and mildest of warriors, caught up with Singer in the third round of their ten-round battle at catch weights, knocked him once to the floor for a count of nine and then finished him with one clean, whistling right to the chin. The third round lasted only two minutes and 21 seconds.

Thus was the name of Singer, newest of champions through his knockout conquest of Sammy Mandell early this summer added to the list that now holds the names of seven titleholders, who, either before or after gaining their crowns, matched fists with McLarnin and finished second. Yet McLarnin, uncrowned king of the welterweights, has yet to lick a champion at the class weight.

For two rounds tonight, while 25,000 of the faithful roared approval, it looked as though Singer, the 20-year-old Jewish boy who thirsts for the fame and prestige that was Benny Leonard's, would break the jinx which McLarnin holds over champions and, in fact, almost everyone else who fights somewhere near his weight. For two rounds Jimmy was outboxed, outsmarted and even outslugged, and $175,000 worth of cash customers bellowed in glee.

Then something happened to the sleek, finely muscled kid who deliberately sought a match with McLarnin to prove to the scoffers that he really could fight and punch. Careless perhaps at the easy way with which he blocked Jimmy's heftiest clouts and jabbed him off balance with a long, smart left hand, Singer tried to slug with the Irishman.

The result proved once more that you can't do that and keep your feet in the same ring with McLarnin. Al cocky and confident, drilled home a smacking right to McLarnin's chin over in Jimmy's corner and stepped back almost tauntingly. McLarnin blinked from between his two fists, cocked in front of his shoulders, and suddenly lashed out with a left hook that caught the youngster on the side of the head.

That punch really finished Al though he didn't realize it and neither did the roaring customers, most of them standing in their chairs. Jimmy crowded him along the ropes to a neutral corner and softened him a bit more with a half blocked volley to the head. They circled the ring to the opposite neutral corner, Singer hurt and in frantic retreat, McLarnin crouched and shuffling, a vicious killer stalking his prey.

He caught young Singer in the corner with another left hook to the beard and then lashed both hands—one, two, one, two—to the head. The champion crumpled to the floor, rolled over on his face and put both hands to his face.

He was so still that McLarnin, thinking the battle over, raced across the ring and turned a pair of cartwheels toward his corner, completely beyond the control of Referee Johnny McEvoy and his frantic seconds. At seven Singer crawled to his knees, at nine he came up, and staggered toward the celebrating Celt.

Al brought a right hand along with him as he came but the punch, tossed at a mark that loomed through a fog, missed McLarnin's chin but brought him back to his sense. Jimmy turned, measured the wavering titleholder with his left and drilled him clean to the chin with a crushing right. Singer went down and stayed down, again stretched out on his face, groggily beating the sides of his head in a feeble and perhaps instinctive effort to restore himself to consciousness. But he was still on his face at ten and McLarnin went into his cartwheel exhibition again without a detaining hand.

For two rounds Singer gave a gallant, surprising exhibition against one of the toughest two-fisted punchers in any division. He tipped Jimmy off balance with a long, darting left hand, whanged his head with whistling rights, and slipped inside most of McLarnin's huskiest punches. He seemed to have the knack of slipping inside the short right hand Jimmy tosses over an opponent's outstretched left and he shifted his pace from a boxing to a slugging attack so swiftly and easily that the time-biding Irishman seemed quite at sea. Most of the critics agreed that Singer had a clear edge in the first two rounds.

The Bronx youngster almost had the satisfaction of knocking McLarnin down when Jimmy slipped to one knee coming out of a clinch in the first round when he lost his balance. He was up immediately without a count.

Al apparently couldn't stand prosperity, though. At McLarnin's own game he was a swift victim in the third. In the time it takes to deliver a dozen punches the sleek champion was on the floor twice and on his way to the dressing room to join the Licked-by-McLarnin champions club, whose roster now includes the late Pancho Villa, Fidel Labarba, Louis Kid Kaplan, Jackie Fields, Jackie Thompson, Sammy Mandell and Singer, recruited from the flyweight ranks through the welterweights.

Singer gave a slight weight advantage to the Irishman, scaling 135 1-2 pounds, a half pound over the lightweight limit, while McLarnin balanced the beam at 140. Singer was a 7 to 5 favorite entering the ring.

PIRATES TURN ON BRAVES TO TROUNCE THEM 5 TO 2

BOSTON, Sept. 11—(AP)—The Pittsburgh Pirates turned on the Braves here today and plastered a five to two defeat on to the Tribesmen, in the second game of the series between the teams. The Pirates were led by Brame who pitched a steady game. Bool's double to right field in the second inning landed just too short for Richbourg to get and scored two men. This started the Buccaneers on their way to a win. Boston outhit the visitors but failed to bunch their blows. The score:

INDIANS POUND OUT VICTORY OVER YANKEES

CLEVELAND, Sept. 11—(AP)—The Indians avenged the defeats of the past two days at the hands of the New York Yankees today by pounding out a 9 to 5 victory in the third and final game of the series against the Yanks. The teams finished their season's play with 12 victories for New York and ten for Cleveland.

Clint Brown went the route for the Indians today and held the Yankee batters well in hand. He gave eleven hits, but kept them scattered and was in trouble only on few occasions. Cleveland jumped on Charley Ruffing for four runs in first inning to settle the dispute right at the start. Two passes and singles by Averill, Hodapp and Myatt along with Ruth's error gave them their big start. Altogether they nicked Ruffing and McEvoy for 14 hits, Hodapp leading the attack with 3 blows. BROWNS RALLY IN 6TH TO BEAT THE SENATORS

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 11—(AP)—The St. Louis Browns splurged in the sixth inning and scored four runs on the Washington Senators, taking the last game of a three-game series, 7 to 4 and winning the series here today. It was the Browns' pitcher, Walter Stewart's eighteenth victory.

O'Rourke, of the Browns started the parade in the sixth by walking, Stewart singled to right, and Blue singled to left, scoring O'Rourke. Gullic singled to center, scoring Stewart, and, on West's poor throw to third, Blue scored and Gullic reached second. Goslin singled and scored Gullic. The score:

BRESSLER BREAKS FINGER IN STOPPING WILSON'S DRIVE

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Sept. 11—(AP)—The Brooklyn Robins have lost the services of Rube Bressler for the remainder of their drive toward the National league pennant. The veteran outfielder fractured the middle finger of his throwing hand in two places while catching a line drive off Hack Wilson's bat in yesterday's encounter with the Cubs. For the remainder of the season, Harvey Hendrick and Ike Boone will share the assignment in left field.

KIRKWOOD BEATS SMITH IN BEST MATCH OF DAY IN P. G. A. TOURNEY

By BRIAN BELL
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

FLUSHING, N. Y., Sept. 11—(AP)—The Professional Golfers association championship today was narrowed to three former British subjects and one native American. In the semi-finals tomorrow, doughty Gene Sarazen will represent the United States with the rest of the next to last line-up made up of Charley Lacey, born in England, Tommy Armour, native of Scotland and Joe Kirkwood, who first saw the light of day in Australia.

Joe Kirkwood furnished the day's fireworks by eliminating the highly favored Horton Smith at the 36th hole. They had fought a nip and tuck battle all day, and Kirkwood had been up only once. He was one down after 18 holes but evened matters in the first nine of the afternoon and then pulled the match out at the last minute.

Lacey eliminated Harold Sampson, the slim Californian, four up and three to play, after the Pine Valley pro had gone to luncheon one down.

Sarazen, too, had to come from behind to win, two and one, for he was one down at the half way mark. He levelled the match at the 20th hole and never was down again. Armour went two up over smiling Johnny Farrell in the first 18 holes and held this advantage until the holes ran out on Johnny at the 35th.

Kirkwood and Smith played the best golf of the round on a day when good golf was hard to play. A fresh wind swept the long Fresh Meadow course, with its scores of yawning traps, making it more difficult than it had been at any time during the competition.

After halving the first five holes, Kirkwood broke through to win the sixth, but Smith came back to take the seventh and from then on it was war to the hilt. The tall Missourian was one up after 18 holes but the trick shot expert took the 25th, and the rest of the holes were halved through the 28th.

Smith went one up at the 29th with a birdie, and a par was good enough to make him two ahead at the 31st. Kirkwood, two down and only four to go after the 32nd was halved, was beaten by unanimous consent of the gallery but the Australian cast a dissenting vote.

He sent a No. 4 iron to within three feet of the pin at the 33rd and the resulting birdie three left him only one down. Joe then made a great shot at the 587 yard 34th. His drive left him in rough but he called on his bag of tricks to produce a good spoon shot, although he still was 160 yards from the green and behind a trap. Smith was on the back of the green with his third and Kirkwood had to make arrangements for a half or see his opponent go two up with only two to play.

It was not in the cards for Smith to become dormie today. Kirkwood sent a mashie shot high in the air and the ball dropped on the green and stopped dead. Kirkwood just missed his putt for a birdie four and the hole was halved in fives. He still was one down but two holes were left to play.

Then Smith lost control. He drove out of bounds, drove again and wasted a shot in rough and finally reached the green in five strokes. Kirkwood holed out in five and the match was square again.

After good drives at the 362-yard 36th, Smith pushed his second into a trap and Kirkwood placed his well on past the pin. Horton with his queer niblick, came out and on the green but 15 feet from the pin. Kirkwood putted to the edge of the cup and Smith had to hole his long one to keep the match alive. He missed by inches and Horton was out and Joe in.

Two of the last eight players started with a rush in the morning only to slump later. Sampson was four up on a very wild Lacey before the Jersey player won his first hole at the eighth. The Californian, however, grew weary and faltered, having only a one hole advantage after the first 18 holes.

Farrell won five of the first six holes from Armour, but Tommy came back and at the luncheon recess was two up. Johnny kept struggling, with his putting far below his normal standard, while Tommy was getting down some very useful five and six footers, and finally by winning three straight holes Johnny squared the match at the 32nd. Tommy still had something left, however, and won the 33rd and 34th when Johnny slipped a stroke over par at each hole.

Sarazen and Espinosa, two golf warriors who have fought many battles in the past, were never very far apart. Espinosa took a one-hole lead in the first nine holes and held it through the morning 18. Sarazen levelled matters at the second hole of the afternoon and at the 27th, the morning situation was reversed. Sarazen was now one up. He went three up for a few fleeting moments at the 31st but a brilliant birdie two for Espinosa at the 32nd reduced it again to two. They then halved holes until only one was left.

Tomorrow Lacey will play Armour while Sarazen meets Kirkwood.

The matches today:

Charles Lacey, Clementon, N. J., defeated Harold Sampson, Burlingame, Calif., four up and three to play; Tommy Armour, Detroit, defeated Johnny Farrell, New York, two and one; Gene Sarazen, New York, defeated Al Espinosa, Chicago, two and one; and Joe Kirkwood, Philadelphia, defeated Horton Smith, New York, one up.

LYONS WINS HIS 21ST GAME IN 12 INNINGS

CHICAGO, Sept. 11—(AP)—Ted Lyons won his 21st game of the year this afternoon when he got a 12-inning decision over the Boston Red Sox by the score of 4 to 3. Red Barnes drove in the winning run off Smith with a single to right after Watwood and Jolley had walked.

The Red Sox took an early lead but Reynolds' homer in the fifth with Watwood on base put Chicago ahead. Two pinch hitters connected for Boston in the eighth to tie the score.

It was the final game of the year for the two teams, Boston taking the season series with thirteen victories to nine defeats. The score:

THIRTEEN LETTER MEN FOR DARTMOUTH ELEVEN

HANOVER, N. H., Sept. 11—(AP)—Blessed with splendid material, Jackson Cannell, Dartmouth's young football director, hopefully faces the stiffest gridiron schedule ever arranged for the Big Green. The stern prospect of playing Columbia, Harvard, Yale and Cornell, all in five weeks, and then moving his team on to California to wind up the season against Stanford has been softened considerably by the return of 13 well-tried lettermen.

Dartmouth lost its great Al Marsters in last year's Yale game and the accident that ended his playing career convinced Cannell that it was unwise to center all of the Green's attack on his backfield keyman. It is safe to predict he will abandon the theory of a one-man attack and devise running plays for all of the backfield quartet.

Two factors will determine the success of such tactics. The first, and most difficult, is the development of a quarterback to succeed Marsters and the other is changing over the Dartmouth line play from its old knifing style to fast and hard charging.

Dartmouth appears assured of a powerful forward wall. Only two of last year's regulars are missing, "Ellie" Armstrong, who captained the last Green team while playing tackle, and Hal Booma, one of the east's best ends of 1929, who has returned to Hanover to work under Cannell, his uncle, as end coach.

Captain Hal Andres is starting his third season as varsity center and he will be flanked by two equally seasoned guards, Gab Bromberg and Paul Crehan. Hank Barber, 215 pound tackle, and Ed O'Connor appear assured of varsity berths. A good tackle was wasted last season when an attempt was made to change the latter into an end.

Cannell's backfield prospects, despite the absence of an outstanding ball-carrier, appear equally bright. Ed Sutton has returned for another whirl at fullback and his halfback running mates, husky Len Clark and Shep Wolff, are also available with such experienced reserves as Arne Frigard, Bill McCall, Robert E. Lee and Bob Wilkin. Sutton will probably share his line-plunging duties with Henry Johnson, who kept fit during the summer by playing in most of the major tennis tournaments.

It is likely that Cannell will start the season with Bill "Airmail" Morton as his quarterback. This clever passer rose to great heights late in the 1929 campaign, when Marsters was injured, and this rugged seasoning should give him the call over the Green's other outstanding signal-caller, Danny Rollins, of the 1929 freshmen.

The Dartmouth schedule: Sept. 27, Norwich; Oct. 4, Bates; Oct. 11, Boston university; Oct. 18, Columbia; Oct. 25, Harvard at Cambridge; Nov. 1, Yale at New Haven; Nov. 8, Allegheny at Hanover; Nov. 15, Cornell at Ithaca, N. Y.; Nov. 29, Stanford at Palo Alto, Cal.

TEN FAST AMATEUR BOUTS AT NEW LONDON TONIGHT

Ten amateur bouts will be staged this evening at the Thames Arena, Division and Woodbridge street, by Matchmaker Dick Gray and according to the advance information about the boxers listed to appear, the program will be one of those thrillers which will keep the spectators in suspense all the while. The first pair of glove wielders will start trading punches promptly at 8:30 o'clock.

Teams from New York city New Haven, Danielson, Bristol, Waterbury, are entered for competition on tonight's card and other ring performers are from New London. There will be an abundance of fine talent from which Gray will be able to line up a wonderful program and the fans will get their money's worth, from beginning to end.

Morris Cohen, New Haven Hebrew lightweight, is slated for action. The kosher kid has been a consistent winner in ring battles around the state and is being picked by many as a coming battler. Cohen by the way, is the only Jewish amateur boxer in the state. Besides Cohen, other boxers with the Elm City outfit will include Johnny Talmadge, Gene Gregory, Billy Johnson, Vincent Gullo, Johnny Beilus, Stanley Nick and Jack Renault.

Several boxers from New London have registered for competition on tonight's card. The outstanding performer is Mickey Ward, welterweight, who will be pitted against one of the New York boxers. Ward has been doing great things in the ring during the summer and has come through with six straight wins. He was a runner-up in the state tournament held in New Haven last year.

ACADEMY TEAM TO BE BUILT AROUND FIVE VETERANS

With the opening of school Wednesday, Academy fall sports coaches lost no time in sounding the first call for practice sessions. Football and cross-country are the sports affected and Coach Courtland Whitney of the gridders held the first drill Thursday afternoon at the campus while Matthew J. Sheridan, cross-country mentor, will have his charges out for the first time today.

About sixty men answered the football call while between 25 and 30 are expected for cross-country. Neither squads will get much actual work this week, the days remaining in the week being devoted merely to getting acquainted with the stiff work that is to come. The first day for the harriers will be devoted to a physical examination by Dr. David M. Sussler, it was announced by Mr. Sheridan.

Football will see five lettermen answering the call, as follows: Capt. Ernie Stevens, Les Crowell, Mike Abugie, Golembeskie and Bob Geer. The first three are linemen and the last two backs. In addition to these there will be Cotter, a back and Mack, a center, among those who showed promise on the squad in 1929.

Those lost by graduation included Capt. Chet Berghinzo, Gordon Cruickshank, Red Armstrong, Jim Mullen, Sherry, Frank Barber and Hayden.

The first game will be played Saturday, Sept. 27 with Chapman Tech at New London and is a league tilt.

In cross-country, Mr. Sheridan returns as coach after one year's absence during which he was enrolled at Yale Law school. He had unusual success with his cross-country and track teams during the two years he was at the helm here, culminating his efforts with a league championship track team in 1929.

PETROLLE SPRINGS SURPRISE BY BEATING CANZONERI

CHICAGO, Sept. 12—(AP)—Billy Petrolle, the old "Fargo Express," ripped a gaping hole in the lightweight championship situation tonight by defeating Tony Canzoneri, of New York, challenger for the title in a ten round battle in the Chicago stadium.

The battle was fought as a benefit for Patricia Harmon, the three-year old daughter of the late builder of the $7,000,000 stadium, Paddy Harmon, who was penniless at the time of his recent tragic death. The contest drew approximately $46,000, with a profit of $10,000 going into a trust fund for the little girl.

Petrolle climaxed his sensational ring comeback by decisively defeating Canzoneri in six of the ten rounds. He everlastingly tore into Canzoneri, ripping left hooks to the body and head, and had him pretty well damaged at the end of the engagement. Canzoneri was bleeding from an inch long gash over his right eye and from the nose and mouth.

Canzoneri shook Petrolle up in the second round with two left hooks to the chin that knocked him into the ropes, but after that Petrolle steadily forged ahead banging away with both fists meanwhile protecting himself by boxing cleverly. The gash over Canzoneri's eye was opened in the third round, and the constant flow of blood was troublesome. Petrolle weighed 134 3-4, and Canzoneri 132 1-2.

AGGIES START FOOTBALL PRACTICE WITH HIGH HOPES

STORRS, Sept. 11.—(AP)—With 22 members of last year's varsity squad—including ten regulars—back in uniform, the Connecticut Agricultural college today started its 1930 football practice with high hopes for a successful season.

In addition to the veterans from last year's squad, two 1928 stars, unable to play last year because of injuries, were out today to seek to regain their varsity status. They were Pinky McComb, halfback regular of two years ago, and Dan Chubbuck, sprinting and hurdling star, who played tackle on the '28 varsity. He is out for a backfield post this year.

The squad—totaling 35—spent most of the initial practice period in punting and running back kicks under the direction of Coach Sumner A. Dole and Captain Charles Murphy, of Putnam.

The Aggies will open their season at Reading, Pa., on Sept. 26, against Albright college.

Shymas Want Games

The Shymas are without a game for this coming Sunday and would like to hear from any fast team. The Shymas have run up quite a record this season and should put up a good game with any team in eastern Connecticut. For further arrangements call Shyma club 742 between 7 and 8 p. m. this evening and ask for manager of Shyma baseball team.

CEBERUS WINS FEATURE AT WOODSTOCK FAIR

(Special to The Bulletin)

SOUTH WOODSTOCK, Sept. 11.—A trotter, Ceberus, owned by Philo Watts and driven by Eddie Rowe, was the winner of the 2:30 class trot and pace at the harness events at Woodstock fair this afternoon. Ceberus won the second and third heats and came in fourth in the first. Other entries in the race finishing in this order were Miss Mozart, owned and driven by J Avery, of Dudley, Mass.; Mickey Todd, owned and driven by Henry Auge, of Putnam; and Belle Sunshine, owned and driven by Alphonse Dumas, of Putnam. The time was 2:45, 2:41, 2:43. This event was for all horses that have not previously raced for money.

The free-for-all trot and pace race was won by Red Chief, owned and driven by George Buxton, of Pascoag, R. I. The horse was first in the first and second heats and second in the third. Other entries were, and finished as follows: High Wind, owned by George Buxton and driven by Albert Buxton; Peter Jewett, owned and driven by F. M. Hawkins; Alvin Pointer, owned by Miss Ella Haven, of Southbridge, and driven by A. L. Euchre; Attain, owned by the Thread City Driving club of Willimantic, and driven by A. Girourd. The time was 2:22, 2:23, 2:22.

In the automobile races that followed a Brown special racing car operated by Bassett Brown crashed through a fence on the west side of the third-mile track while rounding a curve in the third heat of the last race of the day. The car knocked a guard rail off the fence, which was hurled into a mass of parked cars and did some damage to two cars which it struck. The driver was uninjured. At the time of the accident the car was traveling at about 45 miles an hour. Officials of the track, after an investigation, stated that the turn was not sufficiently banked to allow the car to successfully round it while traveling at such a high rate of speed. This proved to be the only casualty of the day.

CITIZENS HOPE TO WIND UP SERIES ON SATURDAY

The Polish Citizens, primed to make it three straight over the New London Kaceys in their inter-city series which will be resumed at the Academy campus tomorrow, are to have the services of all of their regulars. Because Rivalry is playing Saturday it was feared that Climkoski, West and Lamory would be unable to perform but everything was smoothed out Thursday and they will be in action in the big series. The Cits, who took the first game by 2 to 1 and the second 3 to 2, are slight favorites to cop the third one and end it all although there is still plenty of New London money around which says that although the Cits may win the series there will be nothing like a three-game sweep of it.

The following is a composite box score of the two games played. This shows Pete Finn, Citizen third baseman to be the leading hitter with four out of seven while Tony West has three in seven. Coyle, Kacey catcher is their leading sticker with two in seven. A curious fact is that Lloyd Jarvis and Charlie Lamory, two of the Citizens big guns have not as yet connected safely. Tony West is the leading fielder with 23 chances accepted cleanly.

WESTERLY

EXPRESS TRAIN NEARLY WRECKED AT WESTERLY

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, Sept. 11—The Westerly station of the New Haven railroad came near being the scene of another railroad wreck on Thursday morning when the east-bound American Railway Express train No. 28, and known as the "Admiral" was brought to an emergency stop near the West Broad street overhead dry bridge before 5:30. The train had been on a siding at Stonington and as it came on the main line tracks, the rear brakeman discovered trouble as one of the unoccupied day coaches appeared to be [illegible]. There were six of these "dead" coaches at the end of the 28-car express train and just ahead of the caboose. The brakeman made an unsuccessful attempt to signal the engineer ahead by the air line and as a last resort applied the air brakes bringing the train to a full stop.

Examination of the trucks of the head coach showed them to be the trouble makers and the brakes of the rear truck were entirely torn off. The lining and soft metal of the brake shoes had become so heated that large chunks of hard metal had become almost fused to the tread of the car wheel to the extent that with each revolution of the journal the truck and car body were alternately raised and lowered with a banging sound. The hard metal pounding the rails was in danger of damaging the rails and the rolling flange in momentary danger of jumping the rails.

With the aid of a heavy iron bar some of the metal was knocked off the wheel and the car could be moved with greater safety. An empty Railway Express car consigned for the Westerly freight yard to transport the automobiles of J. Frederick Byers, summer cottager at Watch Hill to his winter home in Pittsburgh, was placed on a freight siding and then the damaged coach was "set off" to await further repairs.

While the east bound main line track was blocked by the express the early morning east-bound accommodation and the New England express was "back-tracked" on No. 1 or west-bound track rails. Providence and Boston commuters and passengers took the train from the west shelter. The express train proceeded to Boston after a two hour delay.

On Thursday morning Sheriff Fred T. Mitchell of Washington county left Westerly for the New Jersey state prison at Rahway, N. J. His New Jersey trip was taken to re-arrest William Brown, wanted in Rhode Island for jumping bail. Brown was one of two men caught in Westerly a year ago for robbing telephone pay station booths. He was brought before Third District court on larceny charges and bound over to superior court.

Brown was released under bail and immediately disappeared. Last March he was located by Sheriff Mitchell in the New Jersey prison, where he was serving a short term for larceny. He will be turned over to Sheriff Mitchell to be returned to Rhode Island.

Governor Norman S. Case signed an extradition request on Wednesday.

Following the looting of the pay station booth in the Vars Bros. drug store on Bay street, Watch Hill, a clerk notified the Westerly police of his suspicions and the automobile containing the two men involved was apprehended in Dixon square. As one of the pair was being taken into the Westerly police station he broke away from the officer and made a wild dash for liberty. His being followed down the Pawcatuck river bank and final apprehension in the waters of the Pawcatuck river near Margin street formed at the time all the thrills of a three-reel movie of similar exploits.

During the Third District court trial representatives of the American Telephone and Telegraph Co. were present to observe proceedings for the company had suffered from similar troubles before.

Real Estate Transfers

Recorded in the office of the Westerly town clerk appear the following transfers:

Sept. 8. John H. Austin of Pawcatuck to Eleanor Quattromani certain real estate or parcel of land on the westerly side of the Norman Farm, bounded northerly and northeasterly by the Noosenock Hill road, westerly and southwesterly by other lands of the grantor and by land now or formerly of Andrew J. Holmes and easterly by land of the Smith Granite company.

Sept. 8. Grace Pearl Rose of New London and Mary W. Ludlow of Norwich, sisters of the late Frank E. R. Leete, who died a resident of Westerly on Aug. 8, 1930, to widow, Margaret Anna Leete, real estate in three certain lots of land, Nos. 32, 33, and 34, [illegible] Heights.

Favorable weather and a program of Italian musical selections contributed on Thursday evening to make the audience for the last and tenth concert by the Westerly band, Charles O. Gavitt, director, larger and more appreciative than some of the preceding concerts of the summer season from the band stand in Wilcox park.

Another automobile collision was added late Wednesday afternoon to the series of accidents at the corner of Elm and Cross streets when automobiles driven by Miss Eleanor Townsend of Worcester, Mass., and John Jenkins of Wickford collided. Both of the cars were considerably damaged, but no one was injured. Officer Paul McCarthy investigated the accident and summoned Miss Townsend to appear in court this (Friday) morning before Judge Oliver H. Williams.

On Thursday morning Miss Nancy West, 18 years old of Howorth, N. J., was arrested by a trooper of the Hope Valley barracks for operating her automobile at an unreasonable rate of speed on the Nooseneck Hill road in Hopkinton.

She pleaded guilty when arraigned before Clerk H. P. Clark at a special session of the Third District court and was fined $10 and costs. She paid and was discharged.

Friday noon Dr. Joseph Rosenblatt, assistant superintendent of the Wallum Lake Sanatarium, will conduct a chest clinic at the rooms of the Westerly Visiting Nurse association on High street between 10 and 1 o'clock.

Henry R. Palmer of Stonington resumed on Thursday his daily morning trips to Providence after a short vacation.

James D. Deaking who returned on Wednesday night to his Westerly home after a month's vacation at his summer cottage on an island off the coast of Maine, was a Providence visitor on Thursday.

John O. Mills and son, Olcott G. Mills, of the Westerly Furniture company, were Thursday visitors in Boston, in attendance upon the furniture exposition being held there.

Rev. E. E. Knapp will be the Tuesday evening speaker at the People's Mission, in Pawcatuck.

Sergt. Paul C. Merrill, U. S. A., Aviation branch, a former Westerly boy, now stationed in Hartford, was a Westerly visitor on Wednesday night and on Thursday attended the funeral of a relative in the Road District, Stonington.

Frederick O. Lanphear left Westerly Thursday morning on the New England express on a business trip to Boston.

Mrs. Irving Champlin was a Westerly visitor in Providence on Thursday morning.

Edmond Fanning has returned to Norwich after visiting relatives in Pawcatuck.

Rev. G. Edgar Tobin leaves Westerly the first of next week for Hanover, Vt., where his son, Jack, will enter Dartmouth college.

MONTVILLE

Miss Helene A. Crawford, of 62 Broad street, Norwich, charged with speeding had her case tried before Justice of the Peace Oscar E. Church Thursday morning and paid a fine of $10 and costs.

W. F. Reeves of New London, on a charge of speeding on the state highway at Uncasville was granted another continuance of his case, this time until Tuesday, Sept. 16th.

To Choose Delegates

Montville Post No. 112 American Legion will resume meetings this (Friday) evening when the members will hold a session in Uncasville school auditorium. The chief topic to be considered will be the completion of plans for sending delegates to the twelfth national convention of the Legion in Boston, Oct. 5-9. Efforts are being made by the committee in charge to charter a Pullman car in this district which will leave the New London station. Commander Henry W. Fermiss has requested that all members attend this meeting as all those who are planning to go will have to register with the committee. This will be the largest convention ever held, over 300,000 ex-service men and 225 bands will be in line. Each day there will be special historical trips in and around Boston.

John Paganoni of Uncasville, employed by the Robert Gair Co., cut his right hand Thursday morning while operating a slitting machine. The cut required several stitches to close, when Dr. J. J. Donahue, of Uncasville attended the young man.

Attended Convention

At the democratic convention held at the Griswold hotel, Eastern Point Wednesday evening and Thursday, those present from here were John Lynch, John Donavan, Jerome House, John Doyle, Earl Smith and Matthew F. Geary.

Miss Eleanor Shea has returned to Elmhurst, Long Island, following a "brief" visit with Mr. and Mrs. John Donovan.

Mrs. Howard Kelly and daughter Lucy of New London are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Howard Rogers.

Robert Daly has motored to Philadelphia to spend his vacation with relatives.

George McCoogan of Groton Long Point was a caller Thursday on Mr. and Mrs. Harry Carter.

BIG PARISH EVENT OPENS IN NEW AUDITORIUM

At a meeting held Wednesday evening in the new Uncasville auditorium by the committee for St. John's church annual bazaar, plans were made by Rev. Father Lynch to make this parish social affair a grand success, this being the first affair to be held in the fine new auditorium. Booths have been erected around the hall, artistically decorated in different colors and the owner has equipped each electric light with a Chinese lantern which is effective and beautiful when lighted. The pastor has also secured the services of a well-know nminstrel troupe to provide entertainment each evening. An added attraction is Shepard & Swanson and their Whaling City Boys, to furnish music for dancing each evening. The fair opened Thursday night with a fine attendance of enthusiastic parishioners and their friends.

RABBITS GOOD SIDELINE, FLORIDA FARMERS LEARN

TAMPA, Fla. (AP)—Serious attention is being given by truck farmers of south Florida to the rabbit industry as a sideline.

Sixty active members of the local rabbit breeders' association report good profits from their efforts, and S. E. Britton, president of the organization, points out that 250 other farmers in the vicinity of Tampa are growing rabbits.

The local demand for rabbit meat is greater than the supply, Mr. Britton said, and pointed out that there is always a good market for the pelts for use as furs. Rabbits can be grown in this section at a small cost.

BARGES FIGHT PERIL OF LOW WATER

MEMPHIS —(AP)— The reality of struggle between man and his earth has supplanted the legendary romance of racing packets and gay revel on the Mississippi.

Sometimes terrible in its moments of might, the river became a starved Father of Waters during the summer when drought drained it.

Barges crawled between strangely bare banks, or too often halted on bars and in channels where there was not enough depth to continue.

The drought brought a test of the barges' worth—and reminded those who had cried, "the romance is gone," that perhaps only the packets had gone.

If long watches in the night from many a pilot house, the same old drawling cry of "mark twain" from the leadsmen, and unceasing battle to move thousands of tons of river freight do not hold the seeds of romance, then romance has gone, too.

Because of record low stages, the biggest towboats could not pull their usual loads. Often barges touched bottom and had to be forced along if they were not halted, by most careful piloting.

Government dredges worked at low channels and dangerous bars, but there was many a curse from harassed pilots who spent sleepless hours in backing and twisting, squirming and struggling, through stretches where no dredge had succeeded in opening a clear way.

'RAREST' STAMP TO BE SHOWN AT WORLD SHOW BY AMERICAN

UTICA, N. Y.—(AP)—What is rated as the world's rarest stamp will be shown at the International Philatelic exhibition in Berlin September 12 to 21 by Arthur Hind of Utica.

The stamp, believed to be the only one of its kind in existence, is a British Guiana one-cent issue of 1856. It is valued at $50,000.

The stamp supply ran out in British Guiana in 1856, and new supplies from England were overdue. To meet the emergency the postmaster designed this stamp, and copies were run off in a printshop there. To prevent counterfeiting postal clerks initialed each stamp as it was sold.

When a new supply of regular stamps arrived, the makeshift issue was destroyed. Sixty years later a boy found one in his father's attic and sold it for $1.50. Then it was sold to an English dealer for $125, and again to an Austrian count for $500.

During the war the count's collection was seized by France as contraband and sold at auction. Hind bought the Guiana stamp for $32,500.

Hind's stamp collection has been called the greatest assemblage of rare stamps in the world, and he refuses to estimate its value.

Whenever the stamps are taken from their vault they are insured against every conceivable manner of loss. Premiums paid during a few weeks run into thousands of dollars.

A part of Hind's collection was insured for nearly $1,000,000 a few years ago, an amount declared to represent less than their actual value.

MIDDLE HADDAM OBJECTS TO HAVING MAIN HIGHWAY

A petition signed by eighty-one citizens of the picturesque little village of Middle Haddam urging that the state do not make the state-aid road through the village a main thoroughfare has been presented to Highway Commissioner John A. McDonald. The petition requests that the state use some other route remote from the village to connect with the Haddam Neck-Moodus road now under construction. The route over Hog hill is mentioned and this road has been surveyed for a road.

The residents say it would be a shame to have the trees along the village street cut down and the quaint homes moved back, as well as having their rest at night disturbed by traffic. They say they would sell their homes and move if the change were made. The petition was circulated by the Misses Mary and Jesse Brainerd and Mrs. Lawrence Fellows, who conferred with Commissioner McDonald in Hartford.

Middle Haddam, once the business section of the town of East Hampton, suddenly ceased to be active, the ship-building industry stopped, factories closed and business moved to East Hampton village. There is only a store and post office left. Steamboats used to stop at the Middle Haddam landing, but stopped a year ago.

The first signer of the petition was Ferdinand Richter, retired Hartford broker, who owns a fine estate on the river.

CURIOSITY IS CAUSE OF MANY ACCIDENTS

A study of the causes of motor vehicle accidents in Connecticut has shown that curiosity is one of the chief reasons why there are frequent lapses from good driving habits, according to the state motor vehicle department. Many persons have been unduly inquisitive while in traffic and the result has been much damage and injury.

This subject was discussed in an article prepared by Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Robbins B. Stoeckel and read this afternoon from WTIC, the Travelers station, in the interests of safety on the highways.

While there are many things, known to every driver, which will arouse curiosity," said the commissioner, "one of the times when it is most dangerous to exhibit this trait is when something has happened on the highway. It invariably occurs when a car is stuck in the mud or has skidded into a tree or fence, that the cars traveling both ways stop in the roadway, all the people get out, and the crowd which gathers actually hampers those engaged in rescue work. The real danger lies in the fact that accidents of this type usually occur in bad places, such as curves or near the top of a hill. Those standing around are liable to be struck by approaching cars, the drivers of which, by reason of the natural hazards of the location, have no means of knowing that a crowd has gathered there. Again and again people and vehicles have been hit in such circumstances.

"There are exceptions, of course, to the rule of non-interference. There are cases where an exhibition of humanity is called for by every moral law and one must stop and give aid. There is no reason, however, why under every unusual circumstance inquisitiveness, having no end to gain, should be exhibited and indulged in. The misfortune of another ought never to be a spectacle.

"Curiosity causes accident largely because it induces less attention to the job on hand. If the mind of a motor vehicle operator is distracted by a happening in which he has no immediate part, it is easy to see that his car may be poorly driven while curiosity has hold. Even an instant is enough in some circumstances.

"Sometimes the results of curiosity are unusual. Recently a car being towed was stopped in a certain street. A crowd gathered. One woman ran to see what had attracted the crowd. She fell over the tow rope and hurt her head. As she was being picked up another woman arrived in a hurry and also fell over the rope. They occupied adjoining cots in the hospital."

NEW CLUES UNCOVERED TO WHEREABOUTS OF CRATER

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—(AP)— New clues to the whereabouts of Supreme Court Justice Joseph F. Crater, who vanished 35 days ago, sent detectives today to Washington, D. C., and the Adirondacks.

Police Commissioner Mulrooney announced that investigation in Atlantic City, N. J., indicated a woman in Washington might have news of the justice. He refused to divulge the woman's name or possible connection with the case.

A proprietor of a lodge in the Adirondacks identified a picture of the judge as that of one of two men, calling themselves "Smith" and "Jones", of Albany, who spent part of August 30 and all of August 31 at his lodge. Meanwhile police here declared unfounded rumors that the missing man is hiding in New York city.

W. L. CROSS IS THE DEMOCRATIC NOMINEE

his, for state vice chairman, and of Joseph M. Tone, a former senator from New Haven, as secretary. The place of assistant secretary was not filled as Mr. Cross had no name in view.

In this way the long services of James J. Walsh, of Meriden, as state chairman and of A. S. Lynch, of West Haven, as secretary, came to an end in those capacities. The incident was surrounded by interest of the delegates which was far keener than that provided in the making of a ticket or the writing and adoption of a declaration of principles upon which the campaign will be fought.

Confusing Situation

As political history it has been the custom of the state committee, after the convention which confirmed the district election of members, to choose its officers, such being by tacit agreement a chairman and secretary acceptable to the nominee for governor. It has been an unwritten rule that the nominee be consulted as to the men who should run his campaign but today the situation was so acute that a resolution was offered in the convention, later withdrawn, which would have instructed the committee to conform its action to the wish of Mr. Cross. Such a demand was without precedent in the party. In the convention the resolution came very nearly breaking the thunderstorm which had threatened and John A. Walsh, member from the Norwalk district, threatened to resign because he regarded the resolution as "an insult to every member of the committee to allow Cross to tell it what we can and what we can't do."

In the committee meeting later, Walsh offered his resignation from the floor but it was not recognized as the motion before the members was to adopt a motion of David E. Fitzgerald, of New Haven, to cast a ballot for the three officers desired by Mr. Cross. The motion prevailed and election was unanimously made.

Troup Averts a Storm

After the near approach to a storm on the floor of the convention which was stopped precipitately by withdrawal of the resolution by Philip Troup, its author, the delegate and spectator interest was in the committee meeting. Members had had lunch so good fellowship was restored on all sides.

Mr. Cross was invited into the meeting over which State Chairman Walsh presided for the final time. He also was asked to speak which he did, first telling anecdotes to illustrate how he felt in being so suddenly thrown into the whirl of politics. Then he said he was starting out "on a great campaign" and because success of such a campaign was based on co-operation, hard work and loyalty to party principles he asked every member to give of their best to aid the ticket. He also said, that from his view point it was an absolute necessity that the nominee for governor should have his campaign, and that of his associates on the ticket, handled by those who would be very close to him. Mr. Cross said he had nothing against Chairman Walsh or Secretary Lynch. They had put in years of hard and faithful work. At the same time he felt that it was right and best for him personally to name those who would be close to him in affairs this fall. He held belief that the nominee should have this right to have his own personal managers.

Cross Picks O'Sullivan

Taking a slip of paper from his pocket, Mr. Cross said he asked the committee to elect Mr. O'Sullivan as chairman, Mrs. Welch as vice chairman, and Mr. Tone, as secretary. He had no one in mind for assistant secretary.

Mr. Fitzgerald, who in the night conferences, had argued with Mr. Cross on the point that the committee ought to have the right to elect its own officers, at once said that he recognized Mr. Cross' request as one rightly made, and he hoped the committee would accede to it. He moved that Secretary Lynch cast a ballot for all three names.

Objections by Walsh

W. R. Palmer, of Oxford, spoke highly of the services of Chairman Walsh, and he especially emphasized what Mr. Lynch had done as secretary expressing hope that the latter would be continued in office. But Mr. Lynch replied that it was his desire to retire, but he appreciated the kind words that had been said of him. Mr. Walsh of Norwalk, in a few vigorous words objected to committee action and offered his resignation from the committee which Chairman Walsh said was out of order by reason of the pending motion. Efforts of others to interject points of order brought from Chairman Walsh the remark that the convention had been the best he had attended in thirty years and he hoped no one would raise "technicalities" and spoil the whole thing.

The three officers were elected and Chairman Walsh before vacating the chair, gave a short review of his services, and he declared that he was "just as good a democrat today as he ever was, and I intend to work just as hard as I ever did and I hope to have a part in many campaigns." He received a great hand from the members. Then he asked all to give 100 per cent loyalty and labor to the party and "the very best in them," to bring about a victory.

Mr. O'Sullivan came in and took the chair as did Mr. Tone and Mrs. Welch in their respective offices. The new chairman said that he had a great job on hand, one he had not expected, but he was sure that if every one gave the same loyalty as Jim Walsh had given "we will win."

The committee then adjourned, and the day's labors were over.

In Conference With Leaders

The committee action brought to attention of delegates that their nominee for governor has a great deal of determination in his make-up. Last night he was in several conferences with leaders who were termed "the old guard" who wished him to select the existing organization to run his campaign.

Some of those who were in the discussions, with Mr. Cross in his pajamas, found that he was determined to name the chairman and secretary. Once with his back against the wall, he declared that if the committee refused to elect those whom he wanted he would not be a candidate for governor, and he added: "If I am nominated and the committee will not elect whom I want I will decline the nomination."

This was the situation up till a few minutes before the convention came together again. Then it was that those who had opposed Mr. Cross's wishes bowed to what seemed the inevitable, and cleared the way to a smoothly running session, until the very end when Mr. Troup brought the matter to an issue before the delegates by his resolution.

An angler had a four-hour tussle with a huge salmon before he was able to land it. When at length he had made sure of his catch he took it home and related his triumph to his wife, and laid special stress on the time it took and the energy he had to expend before he could land the salmon. After he had finished, he waited anxiously for praise. For some moments there was silence; then, with a puzzled expression, his wife looked up from her knitting.

"But, my dear," she said, "why didn't you cut the string and get rid of the brute?"—Santa Fe Magazine.

PORTUGUESE COLONIES PETITION MOTHER COUNTRY

Colonies of Portugal in Africa which have petitioned the Portugese Government for an autonomous status, constitute the bulk of the Portuguese world possessions, according to a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic society.

"Portugal, and the Azores and Madeira Islands which constitute an integral part of the Republic, cover a slightly larger area than the State of Maine," says the bulletin, "but the Portugese African possessions, if merged would be large enough to absorb 26 Portugals with many additional square miles to spare.

"Angola, the largest African Portuguese possession, is nearly twice the size of Texas or twelve times larger than the homeland; Mozambique in East Africa, could accomodate about ten Virginias with about 500 square miles to spare; Portuguese Guinea is slightly larger than the state of Rhode Island; and St. Thome and Principe Islands cover an area slightly more than five times that of the District of Columbia.

"But Portugal's domain is not confined to Europe and Africa. Since the sixteenth century the small European Republic has held territority in Asia, although altogether, these Asiatic possessions do not cover an area as large as that of New Hampshire. Timor, in the Malay Archipelago, the largest Portuguese Asiatic colony, constitutes about seven-eighths of the Republic's Asiatic holdings; Goa, India, is a bit larger than Rhode Island; Damao, India, is about twice the area of the District of Columbia; while Macao, at the mouth of the Canton River, China, adds only four square miles to Portugal's extensive foreign holdings. The small island of Diu off the west coast of India, is another Asiatic holding.

"Spacious Brazil was once under the Portugese colors. Cabral, in search of a route to the East sailed westward to avoid difficult ocean currents and winds. He touched Brazil and claimed it for the then Portuguese King. Today, Portugal's sovereignty has passed, but her language and customs remain.

"The vast colonial domain of Portugal is populated by 14,777,477 people, including races from black to white and nearly all the varying skin hues between them. In Africa are the blacks and browns; in India, browns and in the Malay Archipelago and Macao, browns and yellows. Diminutive Macao has 152,000 yellow-skinned orientals and only 600 inhabitants of other races.

"When one takes into account the voyages of intrepid Portuguese seamen of the fifteenth century, Portugal's possessions of today seem comparatively small in area. Henry of Portugal sensed the development of seamenship of his subjects along the long Portuguese littoral. He furnished maps and instruments for those who would search the seas for new lands and new trade. In 1433 Cape Bojador, down the West African coast oposite the Canary Islands was doubled. A flourishing, profitable slave trade was developed which gave impetus to exploits of other mariners in search of new wealth.

"Ten years before Columbus started westward the African Congo was discovered, and meanwhile the Azores and the Madeiras were becoming the profitable sugar bowl and wine barrel of the Monarchy. In 1488 Diaz, a Portuguese mariner rounded the Cape of Good Hope proving that the Indian Ocean was accessible by sea and that the East was within Portugal's reach.

"Diaz triumph started the ball of Portuguese conquest and settlement rolling at top speed. In 1500 Cabral accidentally touched Brazil. Forty-one years later a Cabral ship touched Madagascar and a short time thereafter Portuguese mariners were sailing the waters of the Red Sea and the Persian Gulf. A trading station had been set up at Calicut in 1501 and about 10 years later Goa, still held by the Portuguese, came under Portuguese domination. The next years saw the Portuguese flag planted at Malacca.

"Canton, China, trade was opened by Portuguese sailirs in 1517 and Japan was accidentally discovered in 1542.

"In little more than a half century North America was the only known continent (Australia had not yet been discovered) which the Portuguese mariners had not touched."

WAS BOUND, GAGGED AND TORTURED WHILE HUNTING

BATESVILLE, Ark., Sept. 11—(AP)—James Swain, 65, a farmer, told authorities today that two roughly dressed men late yesterday accosted him while hunting, tortured him for 12 hours, then bound and gagged him and fled with $2,000 in bank cashier's checks and his automobile. He was not seriously hurt.

Swain said the men tortured him continually by sticking pins in his flesh and threatened him with death unless he divulged the hiding place of a supposedly large sum of money he kept.

They finally released him from a tree but took him to his own garage and bound and gagged him, he said. There they got his automobile and fled.

BURNS FROM EXPLOSION OF STILL PROVE FATAL

STAMFORD, Sept. 11—(AP)—Joseph Sarge, of New Rochelle, N. Y., died tonight in Stamford hospital from burns suffered Tuesday night in a still explosion which caused damage estimated at $25,000.

Stamford police who discovered four large stills, ten vats and large quantities of alcohol and mash in the fire wrecked interior of the building, tonight said they expected to make an arrest soon.

LIGHTSHIP FIRE ISLAND IS MAKING 5,000 MILE TRIP

NEW YORK, Sept. 11—(AP)—Lightships as a rule lead a dull, monotonous existence, staying in one spot for years. It remained for the new lightship Fire Island to vary the monotony by setting a new kind of record for vessels of her kind.

Built on the Pacific coast, the Fire Island is making a trip of over five thousand miles via the Panama canal from San Francisco, which she left August 14. Upon her arrival here next week she will replace the old lightship Fire Island, stationed nearly 50 miles off New York harbor. The old ship was built in 1897.

AMBASSADOR MORROW IS TO RESIGN IN OCTOBER

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 11—(AP)—Ambassador Dwight W. Morrow today announced definitely that he will leave for the United States Sept. 17, going via Nogales, where he expects to arrive four days later.

Mr. Morrow intends to have a short vacation in a spot yet to be chosen, perhaps in New Mexico. He expects to return to Washington the first week in October to resign his present position and undertake his political campaign.

In a final press conference today, it was announced that Mr. Morrow would take a leading part in Mexico's Independence day celebration Sept. 16.

11 YEAR OLD BRISTOL BOY DIES FROM HYDROPHOBIA

BRISTOL, Conn., Sept. 11—(AP)—George Hodgkinson, Jr., 11, died tonight in a hospital here from hydrophobia after doctors had exhausted all efforts to save his life in a vain 48 hour battle.

The boy was bitten by a rabid dog on August 5 while he was peddling papers. He responded readily to treatment and was thought to have been cused. He went to school on Monday apparently none the worse for his experience. But on Tuesday he became violently ill and the next day was removed to the hospital. His condition grew steadily worse despite all medical skill could do.

THE FARMER'S TALK TO FARMERS

CAN FARMING BE MADE TO PAY?

(Written Specially For The Bulletin)

Most of the old farmers of 70 and 75 years ago would be looked on as "moss-backs" or "slow-coaches" or "old fogies" even by the other farmers in the stockyards at a country fair, if they could come back in form and fashion as they were.

They would be classed, instanter, as "behind the times." They might be stared at but they'd never be listened to in any discussion of "the farm problem."

We should set them down as so far beneath us in knowledge and skill and education as to be wholly out of the count.

They wouldn't even understand what we were talking about when we debated the value of silage, or the points of a balanced ration, or the comparative worth of nitrates and phosphates in our fertilizers, or the relative economy of tractors and horses in plowing. They fed their cornstalks whole and gave their cows carrots and corn-meal and relied on stable manure and plowed with oxen.

And yet they raised good crops; they kept their farms in A one condition; they went on adding to their acreages as opportunity afforded; they brought up big families of children, fed, clothed and educated them; they even saved and laid by a little money for the proverbial rainy day.

All this on the very same farms which we, their superior descendants, are gradually abandoning because we "can't make a living" on them.

There's the old Stanton farm in my own town. Seventy-five years ago it was an independent and self-sufficing principality. Its 400 or 500 acres were divided judgmatically into plow-lands and pasture-lands and wood-lands; its buildings were adequate, substantial and weather-proof; its flocks and herds were prize-takers at the fair; its crops were bounteous and of accepted high quality. Today the big old house is a "hunting-lodge" occupied half a dozen times a year by its city-dwelling owner, and the larger part of its land is a game preserve, grown up to trees and bushes, and only serviceable as covert for partridges and pheasants. Its total production would hardly pay the land taxes levied on it.

Then there's the Sparks farm. It was only a small holding when old Captain Sparks took charge of it some hundred years ago. When he died, far past his 80th year, it comprised considerably over a thousand acres, all bought and paid for from its own income. And its flocks of sheep covered many a hillside. Today it isn't considered "worth working."

Nobody knows how many acres were held by old man Walker and his four husky sons. But they used to grow and sell potatoes by the carload, and year after year bought more land on which to grow more potatoes. Now their best fields are growing up in sedges and weeds, which are not even mown.

When a fellow thinks over such things, as we octogenarians can and do, he's sometimes sorely put to it to know how to answer the wondering query, why the difference?

Those old farmers were "queer" and they were "close" and they didn't know a proteid from a carbohydrate.

But, somehow, they knew how to farm.

They pulled through where we fall down and don't even "go boom," but just squash.

I know one small farm whose owner told me, more than 60 years ago, that his total money income didn't reach $300 any year. Yet on that and the produce of his land, he maintained a family of five persons, fed them, clothed them, gave his three children an adequate education, contributed substantially to the church and, in all ways, bore the burdens of a good citizen. His farm could be recognized as far as it could be seen, by its exceptionally good tilth, even by the lusher greenness of its hill-tilted pastures. Buildings and fences were kept up. None of his crops ever wasted under leaky roofs and none of his stock ever got out to the damage of his neighbors. At the same time, he twice added desirable accretions to his small holding, and kept a bit of reserve in the savings bank to meet unexpected but possible emergencies. Fifty years later his son was getting $1,800 income from the same farm but never had enough surplus to buy even a square rod of additional land, or lay by a dollar for the future.

What's the explanation?

Well, anybody is entitled to his say. Mine is no better than yours, and yours is probably no better than mine. But I've got a bit of "pull" with The Bulletin folks. They let me say almost anything I want to, so long as I keep within the limits set by the libel law and the society for the suppression of vice. Perhaps they'll permit me to hazard one possible explanation which impresses me, every year, with greater and greater force.

That is the fact that the old farmers expected their farms to provide practically all their needs, while the 1930 farmer seems to regard his as merely a means to get money wherewith to buy his living from somebody else.

Those old fellows knew the value of money as well as we do, perhaps better, since it was less plenty and harder to get. They were economical to a degree which we would regard as stingy. It was about as difficult to wring a dollar out of them as to squeeze sap out of a cobble stone. Once they got it, they hung to it like a bulldog to a tramp.

Instead of spending it for the first whim that took them or the first appetite they felt they dropped it into the old pigskin wallet and either went without what they wanted or hunted up some farm-grown substitute to take its place. They didn't buy grapefruit for breakfast, but took applesauce from their own trees. They didn't buy porterhouse steaks but lived on home-grown pork and veal and home-corned beef. They didn't buy Nabisco wafers but filled up on johnnycake. They didn't buy ice-cream by the quart or the cone, but glorified their otherwise frugal dinners with jellies and jams made from their own fruits. They bought very little wheat flour, preferring,—as some of their descendants vainly do,—a steaming loaf of "rye-'n-injun." They seldom bought even sugar, relying for "sweetenin'" upon the syrup and sugar from their own maple orchards. And so on through the whole list.

They discriminated very sharply between what they merely wanted and what they actually needed.

Things which we have come to consider necessities, they looked on as wasteful luxuries.

Conveniences which we should feel lost without, they ignored as tending to effeminacy.

That's one reason why, with smaller incomes than ours, they managed to save more money and "get ahead" farther.

Another explanation is to be found in the fact that the old farmers looked on farming as a Life, while we are constantly being enjoined and exhorted to treat it as a Business.

They regarded the farm as something on which to spend and be spent.

The modern idea of a farm is a sort of dump out of which to rake the wherewithal to spend elsewhere.

The old idea was to Give,—give of labor and of thought and of sweat and of trouble and of hardship; the modern idea is to Get,—and to get with as little trouble and labor as possible.

The one put heart into its work; the other thinks chiefly of its stomach.

The one looked ahead and outside itself; the other looks only inside and cares chiefly for the present.

The one considered farming as an end in itself; the other regards it only as a means to something more desirable.

Great-grandfather Phineas sweated and calloused his big hands to clear up fields and build stone walls around them from the stones laboriously cleared off, and bring them into productive cultivation; great-grandson John Henry sees them growing up with brambles and bushes because they are too remote or too uneven to plow and plant.

Which is another reason why "farmin' don't pay no more."

A successful factory is one where workmen labor to make gadgets which will sell for more than it costs to make them.

A successful farm is one which makes a home and a family and men and women.

It's just as absurd to attempt to factorize the farm as it would be to farmerize the factory.

I recognize just as clearly as you doubtless do the futility of trying to stem the current of the times. It is proverbially foolish to try to sweep back an Atlantic tide with a kitchen broom.

But there's a certain relief in just blowing off steam when the pressure gets unduly great. Perhaps there aren't any of my readers who will share my sentiments. That may be my bad luck,—or theirs. We don't either of us know which.

Perhaps, on the other hand, there may be a few who feel with me more or less irritation over the almost universal attempt to transform what was once an honorable vocation into a sordid money-making proposition.

How can farming be made to "pay?"

In dollars and cents it can't.

In things which dollars and cents won't buy it can, if we have the grit and the gumption to make it.

THE FARMER.

HEBRON

Mr. and Mrs. Harold L. Gray and daughter, Mary, and Mrs. Gray's mother, Mrs. Sherwood A. Miner, all of Hebron, and George Wood of Marlborough motored Sunday through Middletown, Wethersfield and Hartford. While in Hartford they visited Brainard field.

SHELL

If you try to decide which gasoline is the best by what its makers say—you might as well put the names of all brands in a hat. pick one out, and trust to luck. : : Every refiner boosts his own product. We sincerely believe that SHELL is the best. But what we believe and what we say won't push pistons in your motor. : : To get the plain truth—ask any motorist who has changed to SHELL. Norwich Produce Market

Furnished by Bureau of Markets Conn. Dept. of Agriculture

Elberta week is now in full swing, the peak of the marketing of this variety arriving in accordance with predictions of growers last week. All cities of the state were liberally supplied, all other farm products taking second place to peaches. Fruits other than peaches were particularly neglected, both buyers and sellers being too busy with peaches to have time for others.

The arrival on the market of increased supplies over last week resulted in prices declining to lower levels on all grades. Apples of all kinds were moving slow.

Tomato offerings are decreasing with a slightly firmer tone. Sweet corn was active and a little higher in price generally. Lima beans remained moderate in supply and firm for good stock. Cabbage offerings were lighter. Late varieties are now on the market with a firmer tone prevailing. Potatoes were steady to firm at prices slightly higher especially in native stock. Prices have developed an upward movement at important shipping centers, resulting in sharp decreases in importations.

EASTERN VOLUNTOWN

Mr. and Mrs. William Bitgood had company Sunday, from Pachaug, Lisbon, Jewett City and Plainfield.

Mr. and Mrs. Lee Remington and children, of Oneco, went to Sandy Point, Sunday. There was quite a crowd from Oneco.

Thomas Lewis, of Green, R. I., has been at Mr. Bitgood's for a few days. He has left there and gone to Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Fenner's, at Bailey pond. From there he will go to Green, where he has work. He has been having a bad cold but is much better at this writing.

Mr. and Mrs. James Congdon and Freddie Congdon, of Portertown, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Congdon and son, of Mount Misery, went to Sandy Point, Sunday, quaging. They had a very nice time. Mrs. James Congdon is doing lots of canning. She now is canning peaches.

Carl Gallup has bought what they call the Charles James place, northeast of William Bitgood's, Tuesday.

Carl Gallup, of Plainfield, called at William Bitgood's, Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Lee Remington, of Oneco, carried William Bitgood and Lizzie Maynard to Kingston fair, last Thursday.

Sabra Baker, of Campbell mill, is quite lame. She has to go with a crutch.

Mrs. William Bitgood is quite lame so she has to go with a cane.

Albert Dawley, Jr., was a caller at the Pine Grove farm, Monday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Dawley and two grand children were in Norwich, Saturday.

A hard thunder shower passed over Eastern Voluntown Saturday night between 12 and 1 o'clock. The lightning struck a tree in front of Vine Barber's house, not far from Mr. Bitgood's place. No one lives in the house. Mr. Barber lives in Voluntown.

Last week there was a piece in the paper how long Mr. and Mrs. William Bitgood had been married. It said 23 years the 25th, of June. It was a mistake. They had been married 59 years the 25th., of last June. Nine years ago the 25th., of last June they had their golden wedding.

Leonard Kinnie and Raymond Frink, of Voluntown, called on Mrs. William Bitgood recently. She has known Mr. Kunie a long while and also Raymond Frink. Mrs. Bitgood knows his grandfather and grandmother well.

One of the doubtful states is that of matrimony.

COLD WAVE FORCES ISLANDERS TO DRESS

SAN FRANCISCO—(P)—While wide sections of the temperate zone were seared with heat and drought, a freak "cold wave" swept the tropical South Sea islands.

Natives even took to ear muffs and flannels.

At Suva the "coldest" weather recorded in a century was experienced, with a temperature of 55, and many islanders who never before had worn clothes donned scanty garments.

MYSTIC

When Phebe Packer Rathbun tent, Daughters of Union Veterans of the Civil War, met in G. A. R. hall Monday evening, Mrs. Arlene Bradley presided. Plans have been completed to celebrate the 20th anniversary of the founding of the tent, Monday evening, Sept. 22. The tent was organized by Mrs. Nellie B. Orchard, of New London, and special invitations will be sent out. Invitations will be sent the G. A. R. post, Sons of Veterans, Ann Rogers tent of New London and Harriet B. Stowe tent, Westerly.

PRINCE PREFERS RESORT WHERE HE'S NOT NOTICED

LE TOUQUET, France —(P)— This fashionable beach resort is the favorite of the Prince of Wales— because here nobody pays undue attention to him.

He makes frequent short visits, usually arriving in his own plane just in time for a late tea. He is out on the golf course for a practice round before dinner.

The prince's last visit continued five days. He spent the time playing golf, walking in the woods and motoring with friends.

FRENCH PRESIDENT GETS STEED, BUT DOESN'T RIDE

PARIS —(P)— President Doumergue's Arabian steed has arrived from Algeria—but he doesn't ride.

The horse was presented to him when he visited Algeria's centenary exposition and probably will be presented in turn to a favored military leader.

Marshal Joffre's horse, which the marshal has not been able to ride for two years, is among the star boarders in the state stable where the president's horse has been placed.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Impy Runs Away

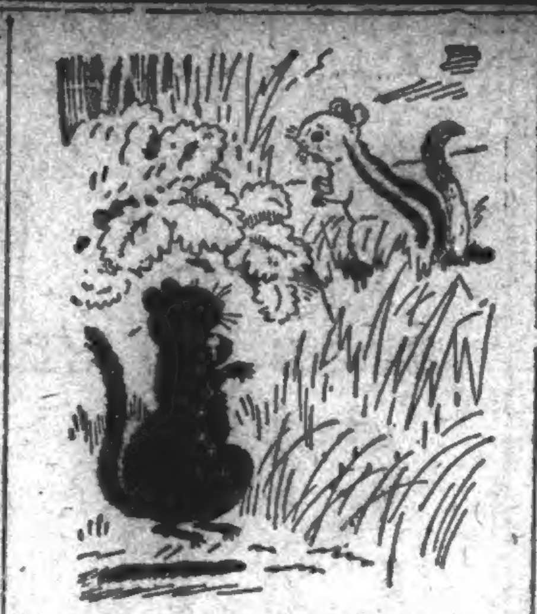
Occasions come when there can be
No stigma on the ones who flee.
—Impy the Chipmunk.

"I guess I'm the unhappiest Chipmunk that ever lived," moaned Impy as he lay in his bed and nursed his wounds and thought of his first fight and how he had lost it. "I feel as if I never want to see any one that I know," he continued. "I want to go way off where nobody knows me and I don't know anybody. Oh, dear! Oh, dear!"

The next day Impy felt a little better. Still, he was very far from happy. For a long time he sat very close to his doorway. He had no appetite. The sun was shining brightly, and usually Impy rejoices in bright sunlight. It warmed him, but it didn't make him happy. After quite a while he ventured to go look for something to eat. He was very stiff and lame; also he was very nervous. Every unexpected little sound made him start. Constantly he was looking over ever first one shoulder, then the other. As a matter of fact, Impy really was afraid. He was afraid that that stranger with whom he had fought might appear again.

He wanted to see little Miss Frisky; yet he didn't want to see her. He felt that in her eyes he was disgraced. He tried not to think of her, but he couldn't help thinking of her. "She won't even look at me now," thought he. "Probably she's gone off with that stranger. Oh, dear! Whatever did he come around here for? Some day, when I'm a little older and bigger and stronger, I hope I'll meet him again. Then we'll see who'll run away! It wasn't fair. No, sir; that fight wasn't fair. He was too big for me."

Just then Impy heard a rustle of leaves. It was very faint; it was the rustle made by small feet. He looked hastily in the direction from which the sound came. He caught a glimpse of another Chipmunk. One glimpse was enough. It was the stranger with whom he had fought the day before. The stranger didn't see Impy, and Impy was glad. Very quietly, carefully, so as to make no sound whatever, Impy began to steal away. Presently he began to run. Nervously he looked behind him. The stranger wasn't coming. Impy ran and ran and ran. He didn't pay any attention to where he was going. He had but one thought, and that was to get away from the neighborhood of that big strong, fierce Chipmunk.



It was the stranger with whom he had fought the day before

All the time he was running away Impy was feeling more and more ashamed. He didn't want to run away. He wasn't running because he was a coward; he was running because he knew that to stay would be worse than useless. He knew that in another fight he might be killed. So he didn't want to fight. All he wanted now was to live in peace. Never had he ached so in all his life; never had he been so stiff and lame and sore. But all this was nothing to the soreness of his heart. He wanted little Miss Frisky, the prettiest little Chipmunk in all the Great World. At least that is what Impy thought. And he had lost her because he had lost that fight.

After a while Impy found that he was not being followed and he stopped running. He sat down to try to make up his mind whether to go on and search for a place for a new house or whether to wait until toward night and go back to his own house and wait until he felt better able to make a new home.

"I guess that is what I will do," said he to himself. "I don't feel much like digging now. I don't believe I could dig now."

NAVY WILL SCRAP VESSEL HOLDING HIGHEST AWARD

NORFOLK, Va.—(AP)—The battleship Utah will steam to the scrap heap with the highest engineering awards of the United States navy.

The dreadnought, now in European waters as a member of the midshipmen's squadron, has been awarded the "White E," most coveted engineering trophy of the fleet. She also has received the "Red E" for the greatest gain in engineering efficiency since the 1929 presentation.

But by fate's irony the 1930 warship considered the most efficient from an engineering standpoint is to be scrapped under terms of the London conference for limitation of sea armaments.

MAYOR BANS LOAFERS; NOW TOWN HAS NONE

MILLEN, Ga.—(AP)—There are no loafers in Millen. Mayor Walter Harrison has seen to that—personally.

Millen has had a law against vagrancy for several years, but not until recently was it so rigidly enforced. As cotton fields became white and ready for harvest, Mayor Harrison sent out a decree that every able-bodied person must have regular employment or go to jail.

Cotton growers seized on the idea and sent trucks to Millen to convey its unemployed population to their fields and to remunerative work.

DROUGHT HELD PRICE AID TO DAIRYMEN'S PRODUCTS

STILLWATER, Okla. — (AP) — The summer's drought has been beneficial to dairymen, believes Dr. P. H Stephens of the agricultural economics department at Oklahoma A. and M. college.

"With sluggish business conditions reducing the demand for dairy products, an into-storage movement would follow, hurting prices of these commodities for years," he says.

"With the number of dairy cattle increasing, and the amount of milk produced per cow also growing larger, the stage was set for a large overproduction of dairy products this fall, similar to the conditions now being experienced by meat producers."

COTTONLESS FARM DEFIES DRY WEATHER IN ALABAMA

BARACHIAS, Ala.—(AP)—The way to farm successfully during drought years is to plant no cotton.

That is the reasoning of Josh Gillespie who manages a large farm near here, where no cotton is grown.

Gillespie turns his attention to pastures, gardens, poultry and cattle. There are vegetables that grow under extreme dry weather conditions, he says, and there is hardly any time of the year that the Gillespie garden does not furnish something for the table.

HERE'S A BEAN FIELD TO RIVAL JACK'S STALK

HOUSTON, Tex.—(AP)—The beanstalk that Jack climed has nothing on the beans raised by Fowler McDaniel of Mitchell county, Tex.

In this case, however, it's the length of the rows rather than the stalk's height.

McDaniel has two fields containing 280 acres, all planted in pinto beans. There are only six rows in the fields, but three of them are approximately 180 miles long, while the other three each are 72 miles long.

They are, it should be explained, planted in circles.

Huge Output Of Prunes

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The average total world production of dried prunes in recent years has been about 470,000,000 pounds.

POETRY

Fervency

O soul,
See the flame in the heart of the rose!
Know the peace that the setting sun breathes!
Hear the carols of joy by the birds,
And the whispers of praise in the trees!

Insentient and voiceless,
All common things are?

Stay! Is aught as dumb
As the spirit of man?
Where is there, in all the world,
A creature so ferventless?

The stars all do shine,
The streams are aglow,
The mountains and seas have charm;
The night has its solitude,
The day its dance;
The butterflies, bees are fleet.

Go, soul,
Let love make your life
All fragrant in holiness,
And attuned to the joy of hope!
And learn how to worship God!
—By Melville A. Shafer

HUMOR OF THE DAY

Ann—It makes me so mad to think that I walk in my sleep.

Nell—Why?

Ann—Why? When dad has three cars I can use any time.—Detroit News.

Mrs. Brown—Does your husband help you with the dishes?

Mrs. Smith—Not any more. We found it cheaper to hire a maid.—Inverness Courier.

Daughter—Daddy, would you buy Jack's car?

Father—Certainly not—I have two cars now to get along without with.—Brooklyn Eagle.

"My dentist was a fine fellow. Each time he extracted a tooth he gave me a glass of whiskey."

"Don't you go to him any more?"

"I haven't any teeth left."—Sentinel.

Seaman—I see where Miss Snickpoff has broken her engagement with Ensign Hongchester. I think he deserved it, myself.

Boatswain—Me too. The ensign's a good guy.—Army and Navy Journal.

Isaac (at spiritualistic seance)—I vant you to call up the spirit of Chorge Washington.

Medium—I have him.

Isaac—Good. Now ask him where that dollar landed that he threw across the Potomac river!—Exchange.

The curate's nose was long and red, and mother noticed her little boy staring at it. Fearing the child was about to make some comment, she gave him a disapproving glance.

"All right," came the reassuring response, "I'm not going to say anything. I'm only looking at it."—Yorkshire Post.

A Negro parson held forth one Sunday with a fine sermon and he was sympathetically received by the entire congregation. He was about to close. "Brudders and sistern, Ah want to warn yo' against de heinous crime of stealin' watermellions."

At this point an old Negro rose, snapped his fingers and sat down again.

"Wharfo', brudder, does yo' rise up an' snap yo' fingers when Ah speak of watermellion stealin'?"

"Yo' jes' reminds me, pahson, whah Ah done lef' mah knife."—The Pathfinder.

KALEIDOSCOPE

A bird's eye is protected by three eyelids.

The world's largest pecan center is Albany, Ga.

Cotton was first used in making paper about 700 A. D.

The number of persons lying ill in hospitals in the United States averages about 726,000 a day.

Northern outpost of Canada received 100,000 pounds of mail and express by airplane last winter.

In acid soil, hydrangeas bear blue flowers, whereas in neutral soil they bear the "normal" pink blossoms.

The ermine, or weasel, wears a brown coat in summer and white in winter to hide it from its enemies.

A substance, said to be harmless, for preserving the green color of vegetables has been discovered in England.

Trees and shrubs sometimes become "sunburned" when whitewashed or light colored walls reflect the heat of the sun intensely.

A cable station in the mid-Pacific known as Midway island, is 1,500 miles away from the Hawaiian islands, but is included in Honolulu county.

In the first twenty-four hours' service of the new radio-telephone line linking New York, Santiago and Buenos Aires, fifty-one calls were received.

The citizens of Dante, Va., feasted on fish caught in a peculiar manner. Following a hard rain, Clinch river at Dante was filled with trash and cinders and the cinders got in the gills of the fish, causing hundreds of them to flop out of the water to the land.

While Dorothy Betty Levy celebrated her first birthday on June 10, her mother, Mrs. Isadore I. Levy, received her degree of Bachelor of Science at Johns Hopkins university, Baltimore, Md. Mrs. Levy, who before her marriage was Miss Jeanette Blum, entered the university, four years ago, and even the advent of a daughter failed to halt her scholastic career.

The Georgia court of appeals ruled inferentially that it is not only the right but the duty of a woman to assist her husband by back seat driving. Mrs. R. H. Pickard, of Atlanta, had sought damages for injuries received when an automobile driven by her husband was struck by a street car. The court found that Mrs. Pickard had seen the car approaching and did not warn her husband. "By the exercise of ordinary care she could have avoided the accident," the opinion, granting a nonsuit, read.

Munich held its breath as the most perfect pianissimo was softly weaving through the hall at a concert by the New York Symphony orchestra under Toscanini's baton, when suddenly a loud, purring sound set in, and continued most insistently—until one of the musicians jammed his instrument against his side with fury. He had brought one of those small pocket alarm clocks which belong in the pocket of every real tourist who has seen Europe. He had forgotten all about it until the little clock did its duty, purred conscientiously, but at the wrong moment.

LEADERSHIP ISSUES IN STOCK MARKET CLOSED A LITTLE LOWER IN DULL SESSION

NEW YORK, Sept. 11—(AP)—Stocks in New York and grains in Chicago were heavy today, although there appeared to be little connection between the two movements.

The share market was obviously weary from its recent rallies through the July highs and settled back to pocket its profits. To keep the speculative fires burning, professional operators bid up some of the utilities and independent steels in the last hour, but the stocks to which the market looks for leadership closed a little lower. American Telephone, United States Steel, General Motors, General Electric, Atchison and Westinghouse Electric lost one to two points net.

Weakness of wheat, based on the September 1 estimate of a crop 13,000,000 bushels larger than last year's, sent some futures to new lows for the season on losses of about two cents, although there was a partial recovery from the bottom. Closing quotations were 1 1-4 to 1 5-8 lower. The department of agriculture's figures on corn were more bearish than had been expected. Corn closed off 1 3-8 to 1 7-8 cents, somewhat higher than the day's low. Cotton lost about a dollar a bale. [illegible] line prices in Chi[illegible] steel scrap in Pittsburgh were taken as favorable straws in the wind. Reports that the Oklahoma supreme court had vacated the injunction obtained against that state's corporation commission prohibiting it from enforcing crude oil pro-ration in the case of the C. C. Julian Oil and Royalty company helped sentiment in the oil group and Standard of New Jersey and Mexican Seaboard rallied in the late trading for one point gains.

Omission of Calumet and Heckla's dividend added but another to the long list of unfavorable actions on disbursements by copper companies so far this year, and further similar steps would not be surprising unless conditions in the industry improve. Southern Railways directors declared the regular quarterly payment on the common, taking the dividend from last year's earnings, as announced sometime ago. The stock rose more than a point on the actual declaration, but lost its gain.

The increase of $33,000,000 in brokers' loans was the largest for any week since July 16, emphasizing the bullish activity in the stock market during the period covered by the report. Out of town banks increased their loans by $150,000,000 as funds withdrawn for the month end settlement returned to New York.

Federal Reserve discount of bills, representing the borrowings of member banks from the system, dropped $48,000,000 in the week ended yesterday and there was a decline of $37,000,000 in the outstanding total of reserve credit. Holdings of government securities were stationary, while open market purchases of bills, apparently in assistance of the money market, increased $23,000,000.

Call money held at 2 1-2 per cent at the stock exchange loan desk, but funds were available in large amounts in the unofficial market at 2 per cent.

European exchange rates eased, but the Latin Americans rallied moderately after a slight setback.

MONEY

NEW YORK, Sept. 11—(AP)—Call money steady; high 2 1-2; low 2 1-2; ruling rate 2 1-2; close 2 1-2 per cent. Time loans steady, 30 days, 2 at 2 1-4; 60 days, 2 1-4 at 2 1-2; 90 days, 2 1-2 at 2 3-4; 4 months, 2 3-4 at 3; 5-6 months, 3. Prime commercial paper, 3 at 3 1-4. Bankers' acceptances unchanged.

COTTON

NEW YORK, Sept. 11—(AP)—Futures closed barely steady, 17 to 28 points lower; spot quiet; middling 11.30.

Treasury Balance

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11 — (AP) — Treasury receipts for September 9 were $9,072,066.67; expenditures $25,333,[illegible]; balance $43,960,904.96.

THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 11—(AP)—The advance in curb market shares faltered today, but for the most part, recent gains were well maintained. Price trends drifted uncertainly as traders marked time pending the testing of recent levels. The day's turnover fell a little below 400,000 shares.

Utilities, in particular, were well supported. Profit taking was in fair volume at times. But market sponsors of these issues were disinclined to let them slip. Among the more active issues American Super Power closed unchanged, Electric Bond and Share was off 1-8, and Niagara Hudson, up 1-8. United Light A and United Gas each eased 1-4. American Gas and Electric and Insull Utility Investment lost a point each. American and Foreign Power warrants gained 1-2.

In the industrial and specialty group, Novadel Agene rose 3 points to a new high and Aluminum company jumped 8 points. Crowley Milner, however, dropped 4, and Flintkote A, 2 points to new lows. American Cyanamid B, lost a fraction in active trading. In the merchandising issues, Lane Bryant gained 2 points, and Safeway warrants rose 3 to 18, a new high.

Investment trusts were mixed. Atlas Utilities and Prudential Investors rose fractionally in a fair turnover. Goldman Sachs and National Investors slipped back fractionally. Oils likewise moved irregularly and narrowly. Cities Service was steady. Humble lost nearly a point, while Gulf gained as much. Darby Petroleum lost a point, reaching a new low, on unfavorable dividend action. Texon was bid up a point.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 11—(AP)—Utility and industrial bonds were the favorites in today's market, and the average price of ten representative issues in each group went to a new high. Rails held quiet and firm, featured by the St. Paul adjustment 5s and by the strength of several other secondary obligations.

Apparently because of the competition afforded by large new offerings, trading in listed bonds declined rather sharply from yesterday's volume, but the market showed ability to make progress despite the counter attraction of several new utility loans and one railroad flotation. The treasury's decision to retire its 3 1-2 per cent notes next March 31, with the obvious intention of replacing them with securities bearing a lower interest rate was received cheerfully.

The St. Paul 5s closed 3-4 of a point higher on a large turnover. Directors of the road reduced the interest payment, due October 1, to 1 1-2 per cent from the 2 1-2 due, but a larger reduction would not have been surprising and the bonds soon attracted a following.

Other firm rails included Western 4s, Chesapeake and Ohio general 4 1-2s, Great Northern 7s, Erie 5s, New York Central 5s, Pere Marquette 4 1-2s, Frisco prior lien 4s and the Southern and Pennsylvania groups. A few of the gilt edge carriers eased. Canadian Pacific 5s made a new high.

Interest in the industrials embraced Bethlehem Steel purchase money 5s, Cuyamel Fruit 6s, Goodyear Tire 5s, International Paper 5s, General Baking 5 1-2s, McKesson and Robbins 5 1-2s and Shell Union Oil 5s. Gains of a point were scattered through the group.

American Telephone debentures showed strength, while Postal Telegraph 5s, Pacific Gas & Electric 5s and United Electric Light and Power 5s, were considerably higher.

In the convertible division, American I. G. Chemicals 5 1-2s equalled their year's high. Baltimore and Ohio 4 1-2s, Parmlee 6s and Texas corporation 5s, were firm, Reading Coal and Iron 6s, recently strong, eased slightly.

United States governments made progress but turnovers remained small.

Foreign obligations continued irregular. Argentines scored fair advances, but Buenos Aires 6s of 1961, broke more than 2 points.

Formal offering is being made tomorrow of a $40,000,000 issue of Corporation Securities company, of Chicago serial gold notes, bearing 4 1-2 and 5 per cent coupons. The yield is 4.50 to 5.75 per cent.

NEW YORK, Sept. 11—(AP)—General Motors corporation reports that its common and preferred stockholders of record for the third quarter rose to the unprecedented total of 249,175, of which 19,644 were holders of the senior issues. The number of stockholders has increased steadily since the stock was split up two years ago. From the second to the third quarter the increase was 5,747. From the third quarter a year ago, the increase was 109,062. Increases in the number of stockholders is interpreted in Wall street as indicating the passage of stock from brokerage accounts to investors strong boxes.

Elisha Walker, chairman of the Trans-America corporation Giannini Holding company, today confirmed reports that Banca D'America D'Italia, controlled by Trans-America, and operating 29 branches in the principal cities of Italy, had arranged to acquire Banco Italo Britannica, controlled in London, and operating 7 branches in Italy. The B. I. Holding Company, Ltd., and the British Italian Banking Corporation, Ltd., which controlled the acquired bank, will participate in the capital of the Giannini bank. The acquisition becomes effective October 1.

The prospect of another stock split-up was seen by Wall street late today in an announcement by the New York Stock Exchange that it had received notice of a proposed increase in the authorized capital stock of the Columbian Carbon company from 800,000 shares to 2,000,000 shares.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, Sept. 11—(AP)—Weakened by government crop reports much more favorable than anticipated, prices of all grains declined sharply today, with deferred deliveries in wheat hitting new bottom prices for the season. Traders were discouraged by official crop estimates issued by both the United States and Canadian governments which indicated greater yields of wheat and corn than the prevailing estimates by private crop observers and heavy sales of both grains forced values down. All deliveries of wheat at Liverpool sold at new low prices for the season and Winnipeg quotations also were sharply down.

Wheat closed weak at 1 3-8 at 5-8c net lower than yesterday's finish. Corn closed unsettled 1 3-8 at 7-8c down, oats 1-2 at 5-8c off, and provisions ranging from 12c decline to a 10c advance.

Provisions were easier because of scattered selling induced by breaks in grains.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Broadway Theatre

In addition to being first in the hearts of many a romantic-minded feminine film-fan, Gary Cooper enjoys the distinction of another "first" honor.

He is the first moving picture star ever to appear on the cover of the Saturday Evening Post.

In one of the May issues of the famous weekly founded by Benjamin Franklin, Cooper is seen in Western costume, being "made up" by a typical Hollywood make-up man for a scene in his picture, "The Texan" which has since become one of the big successes of the past year in theatres everywhere.

The cover was the work of Norman Rockwell, celebrated magazine illustrator, for whom Cooper posed especially in Paramount's Hollywood studio.

Cooper's latest Paramount screen play is "A Man From Wyoming." It is an exciting romance of soldiering in the A. E. F.

"A Man From Wyoming" closes it's local engagement at Warner's Broadway today.

International Yacht Races

The New England Steamship company has completed arrangements to run a special observation steamer service to view the International Yacht race scheduled to be held off Newport on Monday, September 15.

The steamer "City of Lowell" will be used for this special excursion, leaving New London at 7.30 o'clock Monday morning, eastern standard time, and returning direct to New London immediately after the race. The steamer will follow the contending yachts over the entire course, affording an exceptional opportunity to see the race from the best possible point of vantage. A table d'hote luncheon, and a la carte service also will be available to the excursionists.

Ticket agents at Railroad Station will give information regarding special motor coach service to New London.

What Is Going On Tonight

Columbian commandery, No. 4, K. T., meets in Masonic temple.

Norwich lodge, No. 950, L. O. O. M., meets in Moose home.

Strong For Ice Cream

WASHINGTON —(AP)— The consumption of ice cream in the United States last year was three gallons per person. The production reached a grand total of 365,448,000 gallons.

This beats Reno. Records in chancery court as Birmingham, Ala., show that nearly 40 per cent. of the divorces granted in Jefferson county are at the expense of the taxpayers. Approximately $14,000 is owed the county by persons gaining their "freedom" via the channels of divorce. Jefferson county does not require a "down payment." The bill for services rendered is sent later.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS OF THE TOWN OF WINDHAM

In connection with the audit of the records of the Town of Windham, authorized by the Board of Selectmen under contract date of July 28, 1930, it is requested that all those having claims against said Town furnish particulars thereof to the undersigned firm of accountants appointed to conduct the audit. This applies to Bonds, Notes, or any other and all evidences of indebtedness. Said claims should be submitted on or before September 14, 1930. It is important that the holders thereof indicate the following:

1. Date of Issue.
2. Description of Obligation
3. Rate of Interest.
4. Amount of Obligation.

This information is requested for purposes of verification.

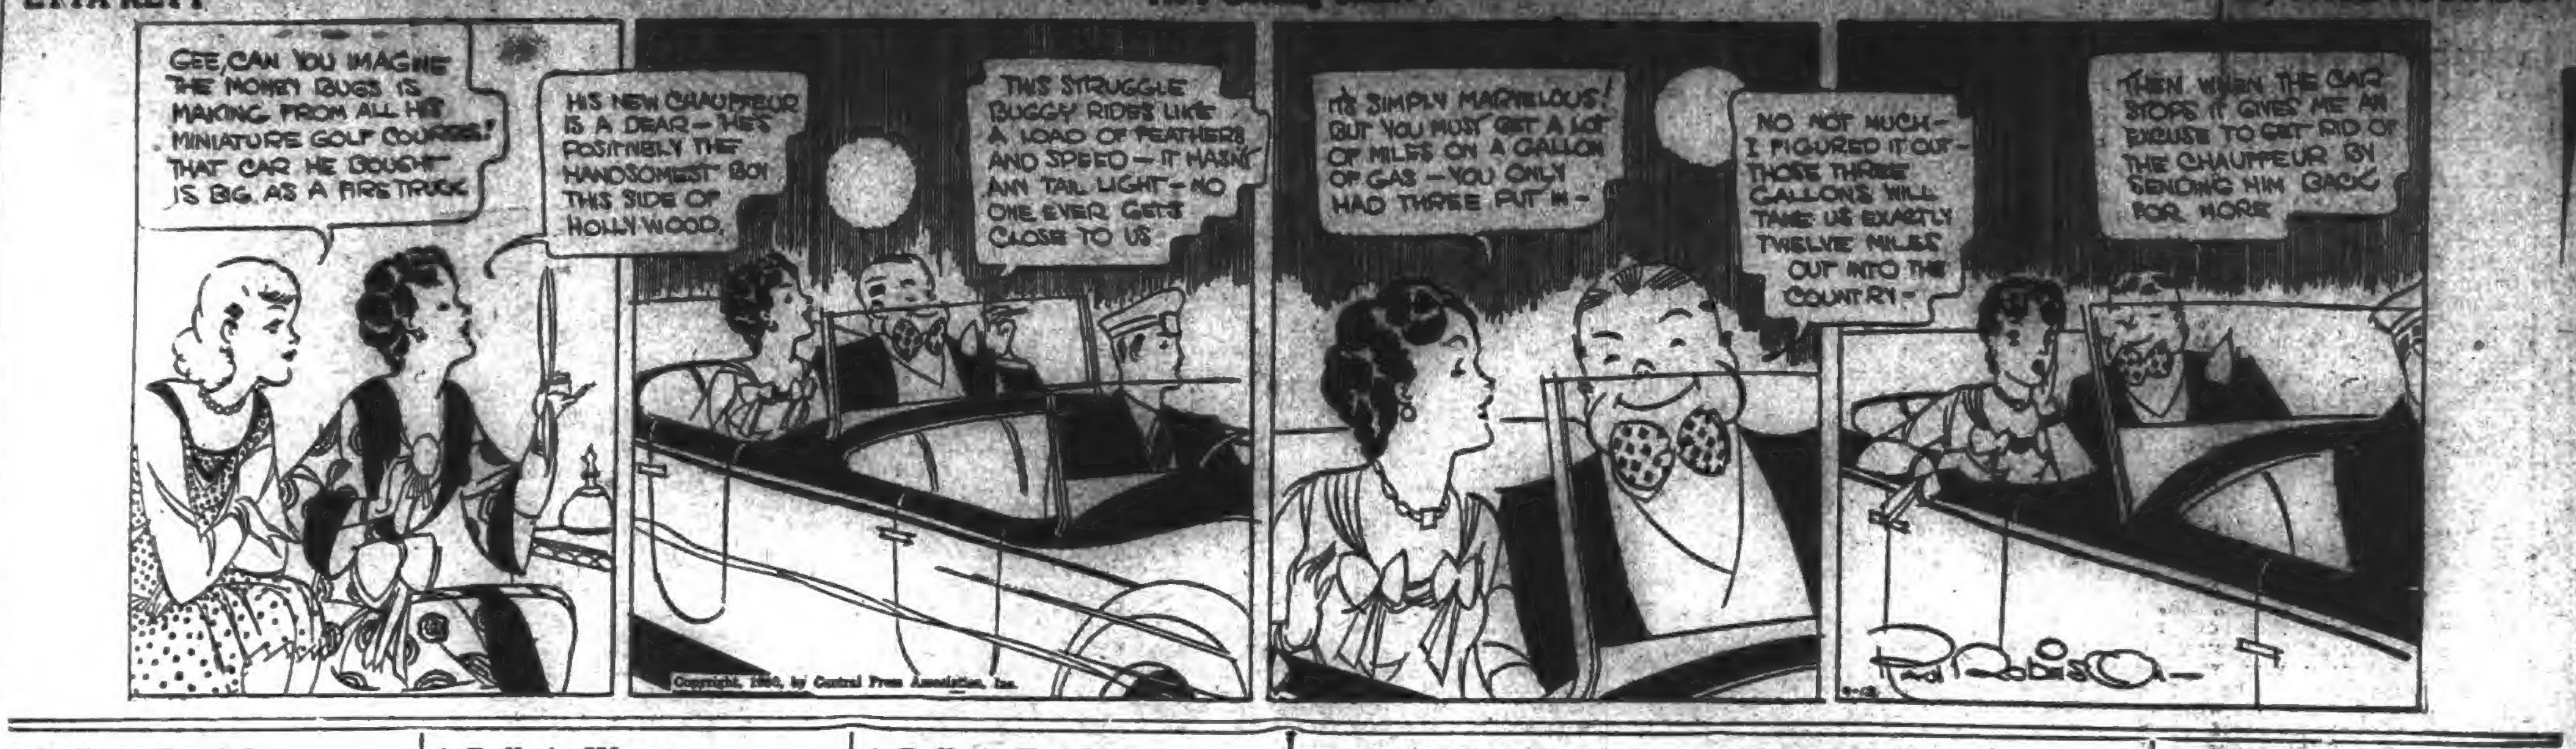
ETTA KETT He's Getting Smart! —By PAUL ROBINSON



GEE, CAN YOU IMAGINE THE MONEY BUGS IS MAKING FROM ALL HIS MINIATURE GOLF COURSES! THAT CAR HE BOUGHT IS BIG AS A FIRETRUCK
HIS NEW CHAUFFEUR IS A DEAR— HE'S POSITIVELY THE HANDSOMEST BOY THIS SIDE OF HOLLYWOOD.
THIS STRUGGLE BUGGY RIDES LIKE A LOAD OF FEATHERS AND SPEED— IT HASN'T ANY TAIL LIGHT— NO ONE EVER GETS CLOSE TO US
IT'S SIMPLY MARVELOUS! BUT YOU MUST GET A LOT OF MILES ON A GALLON OF GAS —YOU ONLY HAD THREE PUT IN—
NO NOT MUCH— I FIGURED IT OUT— THOSE THREE GALLONS WILL TAKE US EXACTLY TWELVE MILES OUT INTO THE COUNTRY—
THEN WHEN THE CAR STOPS IT GIVES ME AN EXCUSE TO GET RID OF THE CHAUFFEUR BY SENDING HIM BACK FOR MORE

There was a hailstorm in the vicinity of Rockland, Me., and an enterprising youngster scraped up almost two pailfuls of hailstones. Then the lad's mother hastily got together the materials for making ice cream. Later their neighbors were treated to some ice cream frozen with hailstones in the month of May.

OKLAHOMA FARMERS PROFIT FROM FREIGHT RATE CUT

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP)— Approximately $1,200,000 was placed in the pockets of Oklahoma farmers by the interstate commerce commission's decision lowering freight rates on wheat and cotton, the two principal sources of agricultural income in the state.

The Oklahoma Cotton Growers' association estimates the new rates will save nearly $1,000,000 in transportation costs on cotton, and J. T. Sanders, head of the agricultural economics department of the Oklahoma A. and M. college, believes they will add $200,000 to Oklahoma wheat farmers' incomes.

Measure Force for Plough

LONDON (AP)—A mixture of soil paste forced through a long, narrow tube measures fairly well the force a horse or tractor must exert to pull a plough through the soil sampled. This work is done at the experimental station, Harpenden, England.

A survey of soils on every farm in Montgomery county, Ala., has been completed.

MANSFIELD DEPOT

Mrs. E. B. Thompson gave a surprise birthday party for her daughter, Gladys, Saturday afternoon. Present were Mrs. Arthur Caisse, Mrs. John Lynch, Mrs. Harvey Gergler, Misses Ella and Edith Gergler and Freda Wilson. Games were played and refreshments were served. The color scheme was pink and green. Miss Thompson received a number of gifts.

Freda Wilson entered the Monson State hospital and training school, Monday, as a student nurse.

Visitors Sunday at Mr. Gerbit's were Mrs. Grace Perkins and daughter Doris, of Mystic, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Brown and Mr. and Mrs. George Harrington, of New London.

Rev. and Mrs. F. H. Howell returned home from their vacation Friday.

Miss Gladys Thompson and Miss Freda Wilson spent Friday afternoon in Palmer.

Merritt Thompson has been suffering from an infected knee.

The Masons held their first fall meeting at the Masonic hall, Merrow, Saturday evening.

Rev. and Mrs. F. N. Howell and Don Brigham are spending the week in Vermont.

Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Davoll, of Fair Haven, Mass., Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Davoll, of Mansfield Center, Mrs. Myron Green and children had a hot dog and corn roast at The Ravine, Saturday.

Ellsworth Gergler is attending the Trade school in Willimantic.

The Reynolds grammar school opened the fall term Wednesday with Miss Alice Vermier, of Willington, teacher of the 6, 7 and 8 grades and Miss Leary, of Willimantic, teacher of 3, 4 and 5. The first grades are transported to Eagleville; they are Fay McCollum, Julia Lynch, Marie Richardson and Martha Magunica and William Gordon.

The following students returned to Windham high school, Wednesday: May Komer as senior, Audrey Gergler and Helen Botham as juniors and Marion Botham as sophomore.

Services were held at Eber Dunham Memorial church, Sunday, after the church being closed for a month.

A number from here attended the first fall meeting of the Order of Eastern Star at Masonic hall, Merrow, Wednesday.

Miss Helen Bowers, R. N., has returned from a trip to Montreal.

Guests Sunday at Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Bowers' were Mildred Bowers, R. N., of the Eye, Ear and Nose Dispensary, Boston, Margaret Prue, R. N., of St. Joseph's hospital, Willimantic, Blanche Taylor of Hartford and Mildred Taylor of Wethersfield.

SCIENTIST TRICKS CROWS INTO REVERSE MIGRATION

WASHINGTON (AP)—Why birds fly north in spring and south in autumn may be answered as a result of tricking cows into a reverse migration.

Dr. William Rowan, of the University of Alberta, in reporting to the national academy of sciences his experiments with crows, says the supposedly invariable migratory instinct appears due to some hormone. This is an extremely important chemical substance released in the blood stream by one of the glands of internal secretion which is believed activated by the length of day.

Through use of artificial lights he changed the "seasons" for a group of crows so far as day and night were concerned. Released from their specially equipped aviary, the birds, for the most part, took an opposite route from that followed by another group of crows held captive under natural conditions and set free a few hours earlier.

WOMAN CONDUCTS TOUR BY AIRPLANE TO BOOST LEGUMES

CLARKSVILLE, Tenn. (AP)— Airplane advertising has reached the farm in Tennessee.

Led by a woman, president of the Montgomery County Lespedeza association, pioneers in the growth of the giant types of that legume sent a plane on a three-day tour of Indiana, Missouri, Arkansas and Texas.

Mrs. P. A. Meriwether, president of the farm association since its organization three years ago, headed the plane party of five. Speeches were made at stopping places and two radio broadcasts were made.

Kobe and Korean lespedeza, becoming important crops in Montgomery county, were sponsored in this section by the extension department of the University of Tennessee. These varieties yielded 250 pounds of seed at 30 cents a pound from 2,000 acres in 1929, giving the growers at $75,000 cash income.

This year the county increased its acreage by more than 5,000.

Two tons of hay to the acre and a seed production of from 300 to 500 pounds are not uncommon. The plant is similar to alfalfa in protein content and nitrogen left in the soil.

Twin Chicks Are Perfect

TULSA, Okla. (AP)—A perfect pair of twin chicks is owned by Mrs. L. B. Killian near Tulsa. The chicks, hatched from a Buff Orpington egg, are perfectly formed.

JOHN DAVIDSON, NEW LONDON, STRUCK BY MERCHANTS' EXPRESS, LOSING LEG

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 11.— John Davidson, about 60, employed by the Thames Towboat company at its shipyard north of the New Haven railroad bridge as a spare painter, was maimed for life this evening when struck and crushed beneath the wheels of a New Haven railroad train. Davidson suffered the crushing of the right leg above the ankle, lacerations of the head and abrasions of the right knee.

Davidson, it is believed, has no relatives in this country, he being a native of Sweden. He went to the lumber pier of the F. H. & A. N. Chappell Coal Co., shortly after 7 o'clock where several boats are moored, presumably for the purpose of seeking acquaintances. He started to leave the pier and in order to reach the street it was necessary for him to cross the tracks. Just as Davidson was crossing the Merchants' Limited, due to pass through New London from Boston to New York, approached, slightly behind schedule. Davidson succeeded in crossing the east-bound tracks, but when almost across the west-bound rans he was struck by the pilot of the locomotive and hurled against a fence. The body rebounded and Davidson's right leg went beneath the wheels of the locomotive. The engineer did not see Davidson being struck and the train continued. Martin O'Keefe, watchman at the coal yard who had passed Davidson on the lumber dock, was informed that a man was lying beside the tracks, and hurrying to where Davidson had been struck, communicated with police headquarters. Patrolmen Arthur Feeley and Frank Philopena were dispatched to the tracks in the police ambulance and with Lieut. David Marks, railroad police, placed Davidson in the ambulance and rushed him to the hospital. Davidson was taken to the operating room where the crushed member was amputated about midway between the ankle and the knee.

Davidson was conscious almost until being operated upon, although he was visibly becoming weaker, so much so that he could not be questioned as to the whereabouts of relatives or friends. He had been employed at various times by the towboat company, but had not worked duirng the last two weeks.

MINE PLANTER BAIRD TO JOIN FLEET FOR THE RACE

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 11. — The United States army mine planter planter General Abselam Baird, stationed at this port, will be included in the fleet of government boats that will be at the opening international cup race between the Enterprise, the American entry, and the Shamrock V, the British challenger owned by Sir Thomas Lipton, off Brenton's Reef Saturday. The mine planter will leave New London at 4:30 Saturday morning and with guests will proceed to Newport where additional guests will board the steamer, which will leave for the race course at 10 o'clock. The nine coast guard boats from this port that will be on duty at the course cleared from here today; they were the destroyers Wilkes, Tucker and Shaw, the 125-foot patrol boats Eagle and Marion and four 75-footers.

Candidates File Expenses

Two candidates who sought election as members of the city council at the election Monday, have filed their list of expenditures at the office of the city clerk. They are Francis DeGange and William M. Nordenhold, both of whom were eliminated. DeGange spent $24.30 and Nordenhold expended $48.

Mrs. Victoria Regalbuto, 313 Montauk avenue, today made complaint to the police that a typewriter and an electric fan had been stolen from the cellar of her home. Mrs. Regalbuto did not know when the theft was committed, for she had not entered the cellar until today in several weeks.

The New London and state police have been requested to be on the lookout for James Dunn, who escaped from the Howard, R. I., state prison this noon. Dunn is described as being about five feet tall and has bushy hair. He wore a torn white shirt, brown knickers, faded golf stockings and brown sneaks. He did not wear a hat.

William F. Habekotte, 651 Main street, was arrested this afternoon by Patrolman Clyde Murphy, charged with violation of the city's traffic rules, and posted a bond of $2 for his presentation in the police court tomorrow. Habekotte parked his automobile in such a manner as to block a fire hydrant on Bank street.

Carmine Cutillo, Hope street, Niantic, was arrested today by Groton state police, charged with driving while under the influence of liquor. He will be in the East Lyme justice court within a day or two. Cutillo was driving an automobile near the Niantic bridge last Saturday night and he had been drinking. The car collided with a machine driven by William Powers, of Bank street, this city, and the latter auto was forced to the wrong side of the highway, where it collided head-on with a car driven by James Buck of Niantic. Cutillo's auto crashed through a state highway fence and landed in the mud flats at the edge of Niantic river. Powers' and Buck's autos overturned and altogether seven men and women sustained injuries which resulted in their being brought to New London and taken to Lawrence-Memorial Associated hospital. Cutillo was one of those injured and today when he was about to be discharged he was arrested.

William Gladstein, Hartford, has quit-claimed to Rose P. Gladstein, also of Hartford, all title in a house and lot on Ocean View place, Ocean Beach. The deed was filed for record today at the office of the city clerk.

FINES OF $425 AND COSTS FOR JOSEPH PIERO, BOOTLEGGER

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 11—Joseph Piero, proprietor of a drinking resort at 24 Goshen street, was in the police court this morning charged on two counts of violation of the liquor law, keeping with intent to sell and illegal possession, besides being charged with violation of the gaming law. On the liquor law violations, Piero was fined $200 and costs on each count and on the charge of violating the gaming law the accused was fined $25 and costs. A raiding force, Sergeant John Courtney, Motorcycle Officer George Cockell and Patrolmen Arthur Feeley and Frank Philopena, provided with a search warrant went to the Goshen street house late last night and a search of the premises resulted in a quantity of liquor and a slot machine of the twenty-five cent type, being found and seized.

Joseph Mahoney was charged with intoxication and breach of the peace. He was given suspension of judgment. Mahoney was arrested last night at 13 Truman street by Patrolmen Louis Wheeler, and Joseph Sullivan after he had caused a disturbance.

Laicyville Girl Detained

Theresa Rusnock, 21, of Laicyville, Pa., was charged with vagrancy. The case was continued to tomorrow. The young woman was taken to the police detention room to remain until court convenes tomorrow. The Rusnock girl was arrested last night by Patrolman Frank Philopena when the officer obtained information that she was without funds or a place to sleep. She is known to have sent a message to New York asking a friend to send her money, but the request was not granted. The girl is said by the police to be of the type who seek the companionship of sailors.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Palace Theatre

"The King of Jazz," the most elaborate revue which has ever been produced, will be shown at the Palace theatre today and tomorrow on the double feature bill which combines it with "Double Cross Roads," a story of regeneration.

Paul Whiteman, who is famous the world over for his music, is the star of "The King of Jazz," but he is supported by such a large cast of notable theatrical people that the list is too long to mention.

The music for the "King of Jazz" is fine, "The Song of the Dawn" perhaps being the most popular. George Gershwin composed many of the scores and this feature combined with Whiteman's playing indicates the high quality of the production.

"Double Cross Roads," the other feature on this bill, tells the story of a crook who tried to reform. He falls in love with a girl who seems to him the most wonderful thing on earth. There are many startling revelations and the picture ends with a thrilling climax.

Among the stars of "Double Cross Roads" are Robert Ames, Lila Lee, Montague Love and Ned Sparks. Here is a picture which is full of surprises and combined with "The King of Jazz" makes one of the finest double feature shows ever presented in Norwich.

Al Jolson will make another appearance in this town on Sunday, when he will be shown in his latest production, "Big Boy." Needless to say, every Jolson fan will rejoice and be prompt to see the old favorite again.

Westerly Ind. vs. Boston Tigers.

The Westerly Independents will play the second game of a series with the Boston Tigers on White Rock field, Sunday. The Indies were to play the Boy Scouts with a Boston battery, but these could not be procured until later. The Tigers are booked for this game at the request of numerous fans who enjoyed the playing antics of the visitors. The Indies have games booked with the Sea Scouts, the Kaceys of New London and the Philadelphia Colored Giants.

WAUREGAN INDIES TO PLAY CHEPACHETTE FIRE TEAM

The Wauregan Independents have what is called a hummer for this coming Sunday when they will meet the fast Chepachette Fire team, and Manager Deloge of the Indies expects to use all his best men so as to win. He expects to pitch Messier, who for the last three games has not allowed more than four hits in each game. The game will be played on the Wauregan grounds and there is expected to be a good crowd.

Lomski Kayoed

CHICAGO, Sept. 11.—(AP)—King Levinsky, Chicago light-heavyweight, knocked out Leo Lomski, the Aberdeen, Wash., Assassin, in the fifth round of their ten-round bout in the Chicago stadium tonight. Lomski was knocked down 12 times—six times in the first round.

Mississippi will have 100 community fairs, 25 county fairs, six district fairs and one state exposition this year.

THE BIRTHDAY PARTY

For the third time Clara found herself meeting the smiling and certainly interested eyes of the blond young man facing her from three Pullman seats away. Utterly furious with herself, she plunged her gaze out of the window, vowing not to look in his direction again. But she sighed a little, as she watched the fleeting wintry landscape. He did look as though he might be very interesting and amusing.

Two more days before reaching Chicago. And today was her birthday! She tried to console herself somewhat by planning the details of a delayed but gay birthday celebration upon her return home. Suddenly she became aware that the train had stopped and that the conductor was making an announcement to the effect that owing to a washout two miles farther on the train would be held up for several hours.

"Well, that's nice!" exclaimed Clara. "Anyway, I'm going to get out and take a walk. Anything is better than sitting in this old train. What a squalid little town!" she shuddered, as she strolled along. "Think of people living here!"

In front of the dingiest house of all she came up a little girl, her head bowed upon a low gate past, sobbing broken-heartedly. Clara paused. The next instant her arms went about the child's shaking body. "What is the trouble? Won't you tell me, dear?"

A thin, wisplike woman came down the front steps. "Josie is crying because today's her birthday and I had promised her she could have a party, but her father's been laid off a long time and there isn't any money—"

"Why, Josie," laughed Clara, "it's my birthday, too!" at which the child looked up with wide, tear-drenched eyes. "Now, let's see; what can we do about it? With two birthdays on hand, we've just got to celebrate!"

She hastened over to the ramshackle old building that did duty as a hotel for infrequent traveling salesmen and held a short but highly successful conference with Mrs. Arndt, the proprietor's wife. Clara could have free use of the dining room for her party, and Mrs. Arndt insisted that she would furnish the cocoa, as well as cook it. On the way to purchase the cake Clara informed the now hopeful Josie that she was to invite all her little girl and boy friends and their mothers to be at the hotel at 1 o'clock.

Two minutes later, turning a corner she bumped—almost—into the blond young man of the train. He smiled so quickly and so eagerly that she did not have the heart to ignore him. She told him about her plan for Josie's party.

"Say, that's great," he exclaimed. "Now, what can I do to help? Oh, I know. We ought to have some kind of a little show to amuse the poor little tads. We could put it on just before the cocoa and cake. I'll go back to the train and see what talent I can rout out."

Before 1 o'clock the big bare combination office and hotel parlor was filled with restless, wondering-eyed children and their mothers. The blond young man was, at Clara's insistence, master of ceremonies.

Three college girls, with their "ukes," sang and played short little songs. An obliging radio tenor rendered feelingly some old-time favorites for the mothers. A bewitching, golden-haired little fairy in frothy pink tulle pirouetted onto the floor and half spoke, half sang, eight verses of "I'm Somebody's Little Girl," accompanying it with lilting steps and eloquent gestures, the children all staring at her with awed, fascinated eyes.

But undoubtedly the pinnacle of the entertainment was the performance given by two young chaps about 18 years old, made up as sailors, who sang, rolled their eyes at the youngsters and acted so crazily and rollickingly that the children slid off their chairs and shrieked with glee.

Clara smiled appreciatively at the blond young man, who evidently found it necessary to be right at her side every minute. "I had to wake them up from a sound sleep to get them to come here," he grinned. "But when they understood about your party they got ready in a jiffy."

In the midst of all the gayety came the three blasts from the train as a warning signal, and Clara hurriedly took leave, her eyes misting as she came to Josie. "Oh, lady," breathed Josie out of a full heart, "this is the best birthday I ever had!"

Across the wide, bare old room Clara saw the blond young man waiting for her. "And Josie," she whispered with a happy little laugh, "it's the very best birthday I've ever had, too!"—Chicago News.

TILDEN REACHES SEMI-FINAL BY BEATING JOHNNY VAN RYN

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Sept. 11—(AP)—The old regime in American tennis has not fallen. Frank Hunter, 36 year old veteran, was beaten today by young Johnny Doeg in the quarter final round of the national singles championship, but Big Bill Tilden at 37, gave Johnny Van Ryn a tennis lesson and is still the favorite to capture the title for the eighth time.

The strapping Doeg overcame his stubborn foeman in five hard sets, 11-13, 6-4, 3-6, 6-2, 6-4, and will clash with Tilden in the semi-final round tomorrow. It will be a battle of services as Doeg has one of the three or four fastest deliveries in the world and Tilden's famous cannonballs piled up a total of 20 aces as he downed Van Ryn 4-6, 6-2, 6-4, 6-4, before a gallery of 9,000 this afternoon.

Young America laid its challenge squarely across the path of the champion when a pair of sensational youngsters still in their teens came through to the semi-final round in the other half of the draw.

Frank Shields, stalwart New York youth of 19, played world beating tennis in streaks to defeat Gregory Mangin of Newark, N. J., 3-6, 6-8, 6-2, 6-1, 6-1, and Sidney Wood, 18 year old star from the same city showed a stroke mastery rivally that of Tilden in eliminating Clifford Sutter of New Orleans, the national intercollegiate champion, 6-4, 6-3, 2-6, 7-5.

PHILLIES BUY TWO PLAYERS FROM FT. WORTH

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 11.—(AP)—The purchase of Pitcher Lil Stoner and Second Baseman Leo Mallon from the Fort Worth club of the Texas league was announced tonight by the management of the Philadelphia Nationals.

The purchase price was given as $25,000 cash "and players," but it has not been decided what players will be sent to Fort Worth. Stoner and Mallon will report to the Phillies next year.

Stoner formerly played with the Detroit Americans and the Pittsburgh Nationals. He led the Texas league pitchers this season with 14 victories and five defeats. He is 29 years old.

Mallon is 24. Up to Sept. 1 he had played in 146 games this year with a batting average of .332 and a fielding average of .966.

The Bulletin.

Norwich, Friday, Sept. 12, 1930

THE WEATHER

Conditions

Pressure is high over the Hudson bay region and off the middle Atlantic and southern New England coast and off the north Pacific coast while low pressure prevails elsewhere over north America.

The temperature has risen in the southern plain states and the northeastern states.

There will be considerable cloudiness over the Washington forecast district during the next two days and showers are indicated over the greater part of the district.

Temperature changes will be unimportant except that cooler weather will overspread New England and northern and Central New York.

Winds

North of Sandy Hook—Moderate to fresh southwest winds shifting to northwest over north portion and mostly overcast weather with showers over north portion Friday.

Sandy Hook to Hatteras—Moderate southerly winds over north portion and moderate east or southeast over south portion and increasing cloudiness, probably followed by showers over south portion.

Forecast

For south New England—Increasing cloudiness followed by showers in northern Massachusetts Friday; Saturday cloudy and cooler, probably showers.

TAFTVILLE

A hot dog roast was held in the woods on Mrs. Joseph Caron's premises Wednesday evening. Everybody roasted their own hot dogs and toasted marshmallows, after which games were played. Those present were: Teresa Benoit, Dolores Seneeal, Doris Pepin, Claire St. Germain, Loretta Breault, Lucy Proulx, Pauline Brodeur, Clement Proulx, Charles Benoit, Roland St. Germaine, Henry St. Germaine, Andrew Benoit, Leo Labreque, Andy St. Germaine.

The monthly meeting of the St. Jean Baptiste society was held Sunday afternoon at their meeting rooms on Merchants avenue, with the president, Henry Phaneuf, in the chair. Recording Secretary Theodule J. Snow read a number of communications which were accepted. He also disclosed a number of sick benefits which were ordered paid. Ralph C. Dion, treasurer, made a report of the disbursements and available assets of the society which revealed it in a very healthy state. After progressive remarks had been made by David Lambert and Joseph Rondeau, the meeting adjourned, after an announcement that the next meeting was to be held on the first Sunday in October.

Mrs. Archibald Torrance, of North Third avenue, and her daughter, Mrs. Bruce Riggs, of Hollis, Long Island, have returned from a short stay in Clinton, Mass., where they motored to visit relatives.

Mrs. Milton Lane, who has been visiting friends in town for the past few days, motored back to her home in Wethersfield Wednesday.

Letters advertised at the local post office this week are for Catherine McNally and Joseph Bush.

Curtis A. Hedler, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gustave Hedler, of Terrace avenue, is entered in the freshman class at Worcester Polytechnic institute.

Mr. and Mrs. William Morrisette and family have moved from Merchants avenue to North B street.

Leonard Pingree entertained 12 friends at a party at his home on North C street Monday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Alphonse Paquette and family, who have been residing on Merchants avenue, are moving to a house on South Fourth avenue.

Bernard Hasler, of Merchants avenue, has been on an automobile trip to Canada this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Romeo Gauvin and family, of the Proulx apartments on Merchants avenue, have moved to Versailles.

There is a bumper crop of hazelnuts this year and great quantities of them are to be seen drying in the sun in the yards of many of the village residences.

Arthur Belisle, of South A street, has been a patient this week at the William W. Backus hospital following an operation for the removal of tonsils.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Laramie, of Plainfield, have been visiting Mr. Laramie's brother-in-law and sisters, Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Smith and Miss Lillian Laramie, of North B street.

AUTOMOBILE DRIVERS ARE SUMMONED FOR HEARINGS

AUGUST BUSY MONTH IN STATE HUMANE WORK

The September meeting of the board of directors of the Connecticut Humane society was held at the headquarters building in Hartford Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock, President Charles A. Goodwin presiding. Reports from the department heads for the three summer months showed an unusually busy season.

Mrs. Nellie T. Brent, director of the children's department, reported that during the months of June, July and August 253 new complaints were received and investigated. In addition to these 277 other families were under investigation and 78 complaints were received regarding families previously under investigation. Her report continues as follows: "We had under supervision 901 children, 718 were reported because of medical, moral or physical neglect; 74 because of improper guardianship, 47 because of physical cruelty, 20 were deserted by their parents and 42 were delinquents. Seventy-nine children received hospital or medical care, 38 were temporarily placed, 105 were placed with relatives, 71 were aided by towns or agencies and in 14 instances homes were re-established. Four children were legitimatized, 80 families were referred to other agencies for further supervision and living conditions were improved in 139 homes. Twenty-seven undesirables were returned to other states.

Besides this 58 adults were reported because of sickness or neglect. Of this number 16 were given hospital or medical care, 27 were cared for by relatives or aided by towns. Twenty-eight petitions were filed for the commitment of children to state care, 21 were committed to the county homes, 2 to the selectmen, 3 to Long Lane farm, and two to the Mansfield State Training school. Two petitions were brought before the court for the removal of guardian and guardians reappointed. Forty-five persons were prosecuted for crimes or offenses committed against children which resulted in 62 penalties and seven cases are still pending.

The director of the animal department, Reed W. Hitchcock, reported for four months. A summary of his report shows that there were 1957 complaints of cruelty received during that time. These consisted of such offenses as beating, overloading, working when lame or suffering from harness galls, without food or shelter, abandonment, cruel transportation, poisoning, unwanted, unlawful exhibition, etc. First aid was provided for 78 injured animals, food and shelter for 655, veterinary care for 125, horses taken from work 96, poultry crates thinned out 30, injured small animals cared for 310, advice was given to 745 and warnings issued to 338. During the same period 357 animals were cared for at the shelters; homes were found for 252 dogs, 55 cats, 4 rabbits and 2 guinea pigs. One horse, 51 dogs, 15 cats and 1 bird were returned to their owners. Of the animals destroyed there was 433 dogs, 621 cats, 52 horses and cattle.

The publicity director, Ernest A. Legg, reported that from January 1, to Sept. 1, 232 new members had joined the society and that the receipts for that period were $1173.32 more than for the same time in 1929.

The general manager, J. Seth Jones and the director of the animal department, Reed W. Hitchcock, are planning to attend the annual convention of the American Humane association at Niagara Falls, Oct. 6-9 where Mr. Jones is scheduled to read a paper on "The Incorrigible Parent."

DIES AFTER FALL FROM SILO AT COLCHESTER

A few minutes after 6 o'clock Thursday morning, Edward Minor of Ansston, died in this city at the W. W. Backus hospital where he had been a patient since falling off a silo at Colchester Tuesday morning. Death was caused by systemic ailments and injuries received in the fall.

He had been afflicted with stomach trouble and it is believed that he was seized with an attack while at work on the silo and lost his footing. With his two sons, he was engaged in painting a silo at the John Wade farm at Colchester and was working from a ladder when he fell. He did not regain consciousness.

HUNTING LICENSES BROUGHT $99,959.75 TO THIS STATE

A total of 36,537 hunting licenses, netting the sum of $99,959.75, was issued by the state of Connecticut during the 1929 calendar year, according to figures just compiled by the bureau of biological survey of the department of agriculture at Washington.

Of the total number of licenses granted for hunting in Connecticut, 35,936 were issued to residents and 601 to non-residents or aliens, the report shows.

At 8 o'clock in the evening the annual dinner was served and during the dinner the prize winners were announced. Community and group singing enlivened the dinner, which brought the annual gathering to a most successful close.

HORSE RACES FEATURE AT PACHAUG GRANGE FAIR

The tenth annual fair of Pachaug Grange Fair association opened Thursday with a very good attendance. All day, exhibits were being arranged in the houses, and outside concessions of various kinds were getting busy. The school children were given the afternoon in which to visit the fair, and many availed themselves of the privilege, a large number walking over from Jewett City, the entrance to the grounds being free to them. The Junior 4-H club and canning club exhibit is really wonderful, there being over 300 jars of canned fruits and vegetables, besides flowers, needlework and vegetables and bees. Miss Margery Brewster is in charge of this house, and Ledyard, Preston, Pachaug, Franklin and Lebanon 4-H clubs exhibited. Poquetanuck school has a fine exhibit of class work. R. W. Whaples from the county headquarters in Norwich was present on Thursday. The flower house is in charge of Miss Susie Morgan, with Mrs. Ellen Young, assistant, and the display is gorgeous. In this building the Jewett City Hardware Co., John LeClaire, manager shows Philgas stoves, Charles Ruszenas has on exhibition Stewart-Warner, Brunswick and Philco radios, with a loud speaker located outside for announcements. Thursday, Harry Alexander and Arthur Chase of Hartford assisted. The Ashland Realty Co. show a large map of its layout, Miss Priscilla Smith in charge, and will give a fishing set away. Mrs. Charles Downing has charge of the clothing house, Mrs. Thomas Brown is in charge of the fancy work, Mrs. Hattie Edmond has the arts exhibit, notable among which are tinted pictures and other work of Miss Grace Olin's and metal novelties made by Rev. Harold Arnold. Mrs. A. J. Herrick has on sale articles made by blind people in this state, the proceeds of which go to each individual who made them. Mrs. A. J. Peararsall sells Indian moss plant. Miss Mabel Frink is in charge of the antiques.

The dairy and farm products are in charge of Mrs. Eino Karjalo, assisted by Elna Elmgren. Frank Mix is at the fair again as is his custom each year making fancy jewelry. M. H. Bartlett, assisted by R. H. Young and Miss Clara Hyde as secretary is in charge of the vegetable house with a large display of every variety of vegetables. W. P. Holmes shows a Kohler electric plant, an electric pump, Superfex milk chiller and agricultural implements. Byron Kinnie assisted by Raymond Campbell is in charge of the poultry and pets. The Jewett City Bottling Co., John Zielinski and Albert Duda in charge, Mr. and Mrs. Stanton Brown at an ice cream booth and C. H. Williams of Niantic with his special pop corn crispettes and candy do a fine business.

Ponies to ride and amblers amusements provide fun for the children. Mrs. Charles Hebbert sells jewelry in one of the houses, and S. Frank Palmer dispenses Health O' Quality Goods. The refreshment booth is in charge of the Pachaug church and the fair association under the care of Mrs. William Bitgood and Mrs. Victor Campbell, Mrs. F. E. Newton, Mrs. Charles Campbell, Grace Campbell, Mrs. George Whipple and Mrs. Patrick Weaver. Ashland Boys band played at intervals during the afternoon and a sleight of hand magician entertained.

Horse races were run in the afternoon, the judges being J. T. Kelly of Norwich and R. E. Nelson of Voluntown. The first race was won by Colonel in 47 seconds with Clarence Webster rider against John Donohue on Blaze. The second won by Molly in 40 seconds with Lewis Latham riding against Charles Latham on Chateau. Colonel won in 40 seconds, ridden by Clarence Webster against Donohue on Blaze. Chateau won in 41 seconds, Charles Latham riding against Lewis Latham on Molly. The final race was Chateau which won in 39 seconds with Charles Latham riding against Webster on Molly. At the gate are Mr. and Mrs. George Palmer, Susan Terry, Everett Thornton and Walter Hyde.

DONATES PRIZES FOR GRANGE FAIR POULTRY

The poultry department of the Norwich grange fair, consisting of Miss Ella Lester, chairman; William T. Lillie, Charles P. Bushnell, Mrs. Joseph Higgins and D. Thurston Lillibridge, has received a number of extra prizes which will be placed on single birds and pairs. A gift of five $1 special premiums was received from Charles P. Bushnell. They are: Best Rhode Island Red pullet, best Barred Rock pullet, best Light Brahma pullet, best White Leghorn pullet and best Black Minorca pullet; the sum of $10 in cash from H. F. & A. J. Dawley Co., also to be placed on single birds and pairs; Norwich Grain Co. has donated one bag mash, one bag Scotch feed; Yantic Grain Co. has donated two bags laying mash; A. E. Shedd, one bag Lay-or-Bust laying mash; Eaton-Chase Co., a flashlight. These are all to be distributed as the poultry committee decides and will announce later.

The Norwich Grain Co. also has kindly offered its truck for moving the pens from storage to the Norwich Grange fairgrounds, between West Town and Sturtevant streets.

Given Handkerchief Shower

A pretty handkerchief shower was given Wednesday evening for Miss Gertrude Hathaway by Mrs. James K. Bushnell of 160 Laurel Hill avenue.

Almost any man can induce the world to sit up and take notice if he has the right kind of press agent.

RADIO TALK ON SEX INSTRUCTION IN SCHOOLS

In a radio talk Thursday over station WTIC, Hartford, by Dr. Henry P. Talbot of the state board of health he discussed sex education in schools.

In part Dr. Talbot said:

Perhaps it is of some disadvantage that this talk comes at a time when the regular high school schedules are well under way and the principals and various instructors are already at work. However, it is hoped that there are parents, community leaders, and private social organizations that will be reached who will consider and study carefully this question of sex education in schools.

Dr. Bigelow of Columbia university defines this education as follows: "Sex education in its largest sense includes all scientific, ethical, social and religious instruction and influence which directly or indirectly may help young people prepare to solve for themselves these problems that inevitably come in some form into the life of every normal, human individual." Note the carefully guarded phrase "help young people prepare to solve for themselves these problems" for, like education in general, sex education cannot possibly do more than help the individuals prepare to face the problems of life.

The most popular subject in which this topic has been developed is in the course of biology. Other subjects are social studies, hygiene, physiology, psychology and physical education, home economics and general science.

I do not intend to point out at this time just how or in what subjects this information should be brought out, for that depends a great deal as to setup in each individual school. But sex instruction can be and should be given a regular place in the curriculum. Such instruction should be made as inconspicuous as possible, though true facts should not be omitted for the sake of prudery. Youth will get information along these lines and probably in an unwholesome way if it is not given to them properly.

Social diseases would not be the problem they are today if the lid of prudery was lifted and education of this nature given the proper place in the schools. It is with this grim conviction that the health of youth and parenthood alike will benefit with a sound and wholesome knowledge of sex facts.

GIRL SCOUT WORK IN NORWICH IS GROWING

Although the Girl Scout work in Norwich is comparatively new, in a few months it has increased enormously and there are now eight troops of Girl Scouts and one troop of Brownies (girls from six to ten years of age) well organized and new groups are constantly making application to the Girl Scout council for assistance in organizing.

In April, the Girl Scout council of Norwich was organized by Miss Ruth Hedlund, field secretary for New England. The personnel is as follows: Mrs. Marcus Leith, commissioner; Miss Marion Lee Bishop, deputy commissioner; Mrs. Benedict Pullen, secretary; Mrs. Edwin V. Ross, treasurer; Mrs. James J. Dutton, chairman of publicity, and Mrs. Teresa McMahon, chairman of the educational department; councillors, Mrs. W. C. McKean, Mrs. Frank Rinella, Miss Nancy Tomlinson, Miss Margaret Bridgers, Miss Anna Plante, Miss Marguerite Foley, Mrs. Walter T. Clark, Mrs. Hugh B. Campbell, Mrs. R. W. Perkins, Mrs. Alexander H. Abbott and Mrs. Albert W. Chase; honorary members, Arthur L. Peale, Henry Powers and William S. Murray.

On next Tuesday, Sept. 16, at 4 p. m., the Scout Leaders association for the captains and lieutenants of troops will be formed at the home of Miss Bishop on Broadway. This association will make it possible for all troops to follow a uniform programme for the year.

The patrol leaders, of whom there are 23, are already well organized and have been meeting every two weeks until the summer months.

During the summer months a day camp under the direction of Miss Catherine Sullivan, assisted by Mrs. Frank Grieve, has been held twice a week for the Girl Scouts. This venture was a new one but showed very plainly the great need there is in this community for a camp for the girls as there is no opportunity for local girls to enjoy camp life and really camp out.

Last week end a three-day training course was held at Camp Merritt, Hartford, under the direction of Miss Nellie West. Courses in camp leadership, tramping and trailing and troop management were given. This course was attended by Mrs. Frank Grieve, Miss Catherine Sullivan, Miss Margaret Leith and Miss Esther Evans.

The council has much work planned for the winter season and has arranged for a leaders' and councillors' training course to be given in Norwich by Miss Ruth Hedlund on Nov. 3, 4, 5, 10 and 11.

ALERT MOTORMAN SAVED COLLISION WITH WAGON

An alert motorman and brakes that acted promptly and effectively were all that saved an old white horse and his white-haired driver from catastrophe on Franklin street about noon on Thursday.

The trolley car was proceeding along the street at a good gait when near the corner of Chestnut avenue the old man in the wagon pulled his slow-stepping horse squarely across the track in front of the trolley. But the motorman was on the job and the grinding brakes brought the car up standing with just enough margin to avoid boosting horse and wagon off the track with the possibility of an ambulance call to take care of the nonchalant driver who proceeded on his way as if nothing had happened.

HIGH ANIMAL DEATH RATE THROUGH AUTOMOBILES

Motor vehicle operators in Connecticut are causing a high death rate among the lower animals, according to the reports for 1929 of 853 animals killed by automobiles. Most of those reported were domestic animals but unofficial reports indicate the slaughter of wild animals was even greater.

"While it is a matter of course that drivers must take care to avoid hitting animals," said Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Robbins B. Stoeckel in an article prepared for WTIC, the Travelers station, and read Thursday afternoon, "it must also be remembered that there are specific laws dealing with accidents to animals. The statutes require that 'every person operating a motor vehicle who shall knowingly cause injury to any other person or to property shall at once stop and ascertain the extent of the injury and render such assistance as may be needed.' Domestic animals, certainly, must be considered as property within the meaning of this act, when ownership can be established.

"Another Connecticut statute applies to the disposition of deer killed on the highway. Under the law, the driver of a car which kills a deer must report the fact, within 24 hours, to the state board of fisheries and game, or to the game warden of the county in which the accident occurs. Sixty-four deer were killed by automobiles last year.

"The Connecticut motor vehicle department receives many complaints of wanton destruction of domestic animals, particularly in regard to dogs. The policy has been to summon the offender for formal hearing and give full consideration to the matter. Discipline in some cases has resulted in suspension of licenses. A policy is necessary, aside from ordinary humane considerations, in view of the increasing number of domestic animals, which are of real and sentimental value to thousands of owners. Unless the killing and maiming of animals decreases, it is highly probable that new legislation, with severe penalties, will be enacted to coincide with public opinion. Regardless of what may happen, at least it would be humane to extend the rules of common kindness to animals now."

COAST GUARD BOATS TO BE YACHT RACE PATROL

Nine coast guard vessels from the New London base and one other from Baltimore left New London Thursday for Newport. They will be part of the patrol force for the international sailing races between the America's cup defense sloop Enterprise and Sir Thomas Lipton's challenger Shamrock V. They were to join other vessels of the service at Newport, which will be the headquarters of the patrol fleet. The first race will be sailed Saturday.

The New London vessels are the destroyers Wilkes, Shaw and Tucker, the 125-foot patrol boats Eagle and Marion, and the 75-foot patrol boats CG-148, 283, 268 and 289. The cable ship Pequot is the Baltimore based craft. She came to New London recently and had been moored at the coast guard academy. The Pequot will be used for radio broadcasting.

Comdr. J. S. Baylis, commanding the coast guard receiving unit at New London, went to Newport Wednesday night. He will be assigned as coast guard representative aboard the navy destroyer Kane during the sailing races.

SEASON BEGINS FOR PARENT-TEACHER ASSOCIATION

The yearly meetings of the Poquetanuck Parent-Teacher association for the year 1930-1931 were resumed Wednesday evening, after the summer vacation.

The following were elected: President, Mrs. Harry Beckwith; vice-president, Mrs. John Taylor; secretary, Mrs. Appleton Main; treasurer, Rev. T. H. M. Ockford; publicity committee, Mrs. James F. Connolly.

Reports of the secretary, treasurer and auditor reflected splendid progress of the association during the past year. Plans were made for activities for the coming year.

NORWICH TOWN

Rev. Charles E. Reeves, of Norwich Town, will occupy the pulpit at the First Congregational church Sunday morning.

The first fall meeting of Ever Ready circle of the King's Daughters connected with the Congregational church, will be held Wednesday evening, Sept. 17th, at the home of Mrs. Walter Heath, Elm avenue.

Miss Irene Welch, of Arlington, N. J., has been the guest for several days recently of Miss Virginia Young of West Town street. Miss Welch had been on a most enjoyable motor trip to the northern part of the state with the Misses Young of Norwich Town and their cousin, F. H. Redden, of New London.

Having been suspended during July and August, the Sunday school at Sacred Heart church resumed sessions Sunday last. The choir at this church is rehearsing this week in preparation to begin its regular duties Sunday, Sept. 14th, following the summer vacation.

Eight from Norwich Town attended Thursday evening the delicious succotash supper at Montville Center church, Kirk Wilcox, Miss Rosa Wilcox, Mr. and Mrs. George Geer, Mrs. Josephine Parker, Otto Miller and Dr. and Mrs. Charles H. Lamb. The supper was served by the Ladies' Aid society of the church, Mrs. William C. Vallett, president.

Honored On 83rd Birthday

Mrs. Josephine Parker, of Plain Hill road, who reached her 83rd birthday Thursday was the honor guest Wednesday when the Ladies' Aid society of Baltic Methodist church, of which her daughter, Mrs. George Geer, is president, held its first fall meeting in the church parlor. Mrs. Parker was presented a handsome pair of gloves by the society which also served a lunch of potato salad, cabbage salad, sliced tomatoes, rolls, tea, cake and ice cream. About twenty were in the company. Mrs. Parker, who resides with her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Geer, is most active for her years.

A dairy cow which produces 200 pounds of butterfat gives only 8 per cent. of the value of her product to the owner and the rest goes to pay her feed bill, according to figures released by dairy specialists at Michigan State college. However, the cow that produces 400 pounds of butterfat a year pays her owner 34 per cent. of the sale value of her butterfat, he says.

NOROTON SOLDIERS' HOME COSTS ARE INCREASING

Faced with the necessity of providing additional quarters and more funds for the support of the Fitch Home for Soldiers at Noroton, a considerable increase in the appropriation for the Veterans' home commission for the next biennium was forecast following a hearing before the budget committee of the state board of finance and control on the commission's budget requests Wednesday afternoon. Commissioner of Finance Edward F. Hall said, following the meeting, that the need for quarters is evident, but that no decision has been reached on whether to expend more money at the present site, or seek a new site for the soldiers' home.

The budget committee will hold another meeting with the representatives of the Veterans' home commission to discuss the matter further before making its budget recommendations, he said.

The budget committee also heard the requests of Long Lane Farm, which total $325,000 in addition to the regular budget, and of the Mystic Oral school, where an expenditure of approximately $225,000 for capital outlay is requested.

The Veterans' home commission two years ago requested an appropriation of $85,000 for the erection of a new dormitory and recreational building at the home, but this appropriation was not recommended in preparing the state budget for the biennium. The commission was granted an appropriation of $90,000 for the erection of a new service building and the purchase of laundry equipment.

The amount of space at the present site of the home which is available for the construction of additional housing facilities for the soldiers is distinctly limited, it was pointed out Wednesday, and considerable time was spent in the discussion of various layouts of buildings within the area. Several arguments for moving the home to a more central and less valuable site were also discussed, as was the potential population of the home, which will be an important factor in the decision. According to unofficial estimates based on the experience in past wars, the population of the home may reach a total of 1,400 as compared with the present population of slightly less than [illegible].

The requested appropriations for Long Lane Farm include $150,000 for three cottages, one of which will replace one of the three present dormitories, and a second to take care of the overflow of the farm population; $150,000 for a new school building; $15,000 for a new cottage for the superintendent and $10,000 to provide for the remodeling of the administration building.

ECONOMIC CONDITIONS IN EUROPE ARE DEPLORABLE

In Review of Its Past Year's Work the L. of N. Assembly Finds Many Defeats to Mourn and No Great Victories—Attempts At a Tariff Truce Have Failed—Customs Barriers Have Grown More Formidable in Several States—The Few Remaining Free Trading Nations Are Being Driven Into Adopting a Very High Tariff Policy

GENEVA, Sept. 12.— (AP) — The League of Nations assembly reviewed its past year's work today and found that the movement for cooperation in the economic field, launched twelve months ago, has many defeats to mourn and no great victories to celebrate.

Spokesmen for various countries, following each other before the international gathering of statesmen, are agreed that Europe is now on a state bordering on economic anarchy and that some joint remedial effort is a vital need for world peace and prosperity.

The assembly was told by its own leaders that attempts at a tariff truce had failed. That customs barriers instead of crumbling actually had grown more formidable in several states; and that continuation of the growth of its protectionist spirit threatened to drive the few remaining free trading nations into adopting that very high tariff policy which all loudly deplored.

Beelaerts Van Blockland, of Holland; Peter Munch, foreign minister of Denmark; Premier Hertzog, of South Africa; Foreign Minister Schober of Austria, and Paul Hymans, Belgium's minister of foreign affairs, raised their voices in a composite demand for that "shortsighted nationalist polices" in the economic field be abandoned for some form of concerted international action.

While agreed as to the diagnosis, the speakers were not so much in accord as to what this "some form" should be. All insisted that concerted movement should take place within the bosom of the league. But a clear-cut program of operations was lacking. Perhaps the plan of the Austrian leader was as well defined as any. Dispairing of attaining cooperation even on the limited European basis, Premier Schober reverted again to the possibility of regional economic treaties by small groups of states holding common interests. This he called "the organic and synthetic method" of economic collaboration.

"A case in point is that of Central Europe where it is desirable to conclude arrangements between countries exporting agricultural products eastward and their nearer or more distant neighbors who absorb their agricultural export surpluses and who in exchange grant them facilities for transportation of their industrial products.

"The cooperation of eastern agricultural exporting countries is an example of those new methods of commercial policy and economic agreement between states which must prepare the advent of Pan-Europe."

After hearing today these confessions of failure and demands for remedial action, the assembly awaited with interest the declaration tomorrow by the man who started this drive for concerted economic action—William Graham, president of the British board of trade. Graham, Mr. Henderson has promised, will have something to say of importance regarding the critical economic situation.

While speakers today recognized the existence of a grave economic crisis, especially in Europe, a number of them echoed Mr. Henderson's words of yesterday in urging closer application to the league's original and primary purpose, namely a scheme of general disarmament. The value of the London naval conference was noted but this was said to have realized only partially those fair hopes which had flourished a year ago.

The assembly was exhorted to press forward the disarmament program through its preparatory commission and lay a sound base for the general conference next year.

The council today extended an invitation to soviet Russia to take part in the contemplated conference on drugs and narcotics.

Russia had not been among those originally invited, a fact which had aroused strong protests from the anti-narcotic workers at Geneva. The conference will be held October 27.

The first American citizen ever to address the league council in person stepped before that body today and before the delegates realized what was happening, had said his few words and left the room. He was Charles B. Eddy, of New York, chairman of the league's Greek refugee committee. He thanked the council and the Greek government for their support of his committee, whose work now is nearing completion. The incident caused considerable animated discussion.

DECREASE IN DEATHS FROM AUTO ACCIDENTS IN CONN.

HARTFORD, Sept. 12—(AP)—Less than half as many persons were killed in Connecticut during the week of August 31 to September 6 inclusive than in the same period last year, despite the fact that Labor day was included in the period, it was announced by the state motor vehicle department today. Seven accidents claimed one victim each this year while last year 14 fatal accidents cost the lives of 15 persons. The death rate in automobile accidents continued to decrease with the result that this year but 262 persons have been killed since January 1, while last year 297 persons had been killed between January 1 and September 6.

Accidents reported during the week to the department also decreased more than 100, the total in the state being 371 of which 176 were reported within the limits of incorporated cities. In the same period last year there were 493 accidents in the state, of which 256 were within the limits of incorporated cities.

Seventy accidents were reported on Labor day, and 62 accidents on Sunday, August 31 and on Tuesday, September 2.

GENERAL PERSHING 70 YEARS OLD TODAY

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13—(AP)—"Twelve years ago today—yes, twelve years almost to the hour, the battle of St. Mihiel was won," General Pershing said.

He sat at his desk in the dim, quiet office that has been restored to him from presidential occupation, an office rich with carved and painted reminders of another, more stately day. He looked eastward from the deepest window over the green beauty of the white house grounds, over the white house itself topped by the gently swaying folds of the flag to which John Pershing has given with soldierly devotion all the years of his manhood.

Tomorrow's sun will peer over that far horizon to see Pershing at his desk as the 71st year of his life opens. Friends and high officialdom will come trooping to do honor then on his birthday to America's great captain of the World war.

COSTE AND BELLONTE TO STOP IN HARTFORD MONDAY

NEW YORK, Sept. 12—(AP)—Major George Witten, manager of the Coste Bellonte national good will tour, announced tonight that the trans-Atlantic fliers would stop at Hartford, Conn., for lunch Monday on their way to Boston.

Major Witten said Coste and his companion, Bellonte, would tarry in Hartford for an hour and a half but would not leave the flying field. Hartford was originally not listed as a stopping place on the tour. Neither was Trenton, N. J., but it was announced that the fliers will halt there for lunch, on Oct. 10, the last day of their flight.

LIVINGSTON LEADING IN RELIABILITY AIR TOUR

WAUSAU, Wis., Sept. 12—(AP)—John Livingston, of Aurora, Ill., winner last year, led the reliability air tour into Wausau this afternoon landing at 3:31, after a flight from Davenport, Ia.

Livingston took an hour and 30 minutes for the hop of 230 miles, having taken off at 2:01 p. m. He was followed, five minutes later, by Art Davis. Wesley Smith landed at 3:38 and [illegible]

ULTIMATE FATE OF IRIGOYEN A MYSTERY

BUENOS AIRES, Sept. 12.—(AP)—The status of Hipolito Irigoyen, deposed president of the Argentine republic, tonight was as much a matter of speculation as it has been in the six days since he was overthrown from the seat directing the destinies of this nation.

Two ministers of General Jose Francisco Uriburu's provisional cabinet told the Associated Press today that the aged former executive was still in Argentine waters aboard the cruiser Belgrano—on which he was placed yesterday—and that he was under arrest. This was in answer to reports that he would be landed in the neighboring nation of Uruguay soon or that he would be transferred to a steamer bound for Europe.

Hence his destination or his ultimate fate appears a mystery at present.

He still is under Argentine jurisdiction and is a prisoner aboard one of the naval vessels he once directed.

TRACES OF END OF THE FRANKLIN ARCTIC PARTY

FORT McMURRAY, Alta., Sept. 12—(AP)—New traces of the tragic end of the attempt of Sir John Franklin and his party of 129 men to find the Northwest passage in 1845 were described here today by W. E. Gilbert, pilot on the Burwash aerial expedition to King Williams Land and the north magnetic pole.

Gilbert said he and Major L. T. Burwash, dominion government explorer, found graves which he believes were those of some of the victims, and numerous relics of their expedition. The burial mounds were arranged in orderly fashion, indicating, he said, that the men had died one by one from scurvy and starvation and had been buried by their comrades.

CONVICT ON EVE OF RELEASE STABBED PRISON GUARD

DANNEMORA, N. Y., Sept. 12.—(AP)—A Clinton prison convict who was to have been released tomorrow morning, stabbed a prison guard today. The convict, Joseph Fink, 21, was believed to have become suddenly insane and was removed to the state hospital here for observation. His victim, Leo F. Kilroy, 41, with three stab wounds in the neck and two slashes in his back, was expected to recover.

Kilroy was watching a checker game in the tuberculosis hospital within the prison walls when Fink, a New Yorker, doing three and half to seven years for robbery, approached from behind and attacked him with the knife.

TO SIFT CLUES TO MISSING NEW YORK MAGISTRATE

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—(AP)—Clews which police have found insufficient to solve the mystery cloaking the disappearance of Supreme Court Justice Joseph Force Crater will be sifted Monday by a grand jury.

District Attorney Crain announced today he will have the grand jury attempt to discover whether the disappearance or continued absence of the jurist, missing since August 6, "is due to a criminal act on the part of any named or unnamed persons."

Police were still in the dark today after exhausting fresh tips.

Mrs. Lilly Knox, widow of the late Senator Philander Knox of Pennsylvania, died in the City hospital in Atlantic City, N. J.

Restrictive measures decreed by Marshal Joseph Pilsudski since he reassumed power as premier recently have caused tension throughout Russia and foreign observers see indications of trouble Sunday.

Carpenters employed in the construction of the new Brown block in the center of Waterbury went out on strike in protest to iron workers being employed to lay the trussed steel bars joints on the new structure.

Benjamin Powers, Negro, 17, yesterday was bound over in Norwalk to criminal term of superior court on charges of criminal assault on two white women. Bond was set at $5,000 which Powers was unable to raise.

The appointment of James E. Wheeler, New Haven attorney, as receiver for the Connecticut Mortgage and Title Guarantee company, was confirmed by Judge Carl Foster, in civil term of superior court in New Haven.

Lina Basquette, film actress and dancer, whose first husband was the late Sam Warner, of the Warner Brothers, motion picture producers, has been divorced by J. P. Everall Marley, cameraman, who charged her with jealousy.

Senator C. C. Dill, of Washington, member of the senate campaign investigating committee, said yesterday he had been informed a detective employed by Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick has been looking up his record in Spokane, Wash. and elsewhere.

Wilbur Glenn Voliva, who contends the earth is flat, has strengthened his political hold on Zion City, Ill., a religious colony founded by John Alexander Dowie, whose widow recently has sought to regain control of the sect, by having Zion made a separate township.

Senator Wesley L. Jones, sponsor of the stringent "5 and 10" law against prohibition violators, said yesterday he would feel justified in working for submission to the people for direct action of a congressional proposal for modification or repeal of the 18th amendment if such a request were made by the people of his state.

Yacht Enterprise Is 2 To 1 Favorite

Will Today Sail First Race of Series With Shamrock V For America's Cup

NEWPORT, R. I., Sep[illegible]—Shamrock V and Enterp[illegible] house of Lipton and the hous[illegible] erbilt, British seafaring ski[illegible] merican nautical ingenuity, [illegible] ued sentiment and white[illegible] ficiency.

They compris[illegible] parent ingredients of the n[illegible] sic of the year—the sailing [illegible] America's cup, most prized of [illegible] he world's yachting trophies, in t[illegible] series starting tomorrow nine miles southeast of Brenton Reef lightship.

Literally it is a race between Sir Thomas Lipton's Shamrock V, flying the burgee of the Royal Ulster Yacht club of Belfast, Ireland, and the Vanderbilt-Aldrich syndicate's Enterprise, chosen representative of the cup-holding New York Yacht club, whose roster of members reads like a substantial portion of Who's Who in America.

From the viewpoint of the popular interest manifested, the race represents probably the last bid of the gallant old Irish baronet, a prince among sportsmen, to lift the "old mug" that he has sought in vain since Shamrock I went down to defeat before the fast-flying Columbia in 1899.

This is the 14th renewal of the British-American yachting rivalry that sprang from the victory of the schooner America around the Isle of Wight in 1851; the fifth successive British challenge sponsored by the 80-year-old tea merchant and former Glasgow grocery storekeeper who has spent millions in one of the most spectacular sporting quests of all time.

"Will he win?"

They were debating that question tonight along Newport's narrow, old-fashioned streets, in the mansions of aristocratic America lining the rocky shores of the bay and among the old salts who have spent their lives on the sea.

The answer is an almost universal expression of sentimental support for "Old Tommy" and the fifth of his famous line of Shamrocks. Popular hopes are with the challenger. Conviction, whenever it is candidly expressed, favors the sleek American defender Enterprise, a 2 to 1 favorite in the betting and unquestionably the finest racing yacht this country has ever produced.

They are hoping for a "good blow" tomorrow and they probably will have it unless there is a marked switch in the prevailing weather of the past week. Brisk southwesterly winds kicked up the surface of the sea this morning. The breeze dropped off from around 25 miles to 15 by late afternoon and showed signs of shifting to the eastward quarter, with the possibility of stormy weather by the time the warning signal is hoisted at 10:30 a. m. (eastern standard time), for the start of the first race.

The lighter the blow, however, the better the chances of Shamrock V, in the opinion of the English experts, who have sized up the merits of the two rivals. The challenger admittedly is a faster sloop before the wind but not so good as Enterprise against the wind.

STATEMENT BY LIPTON ON EVE OF THE RACE

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 12.—(AP)—On the eve of his fifth attempt to lift the America's cup, Sir Thomas Lipton tonight gave the following statement to the Associated Press:

"I feel strongly that this time we have a fairly good chance, as conditions are now in every way as equal as they can be. My motto after 30 years of chasing the elusive trophy still remains: 'May the best boat win,' and perhaps I might add: 'May the best boat be the Shamrock V.'"

Harold S. Vanderbilt, skipper of Enterprise, expressed hope for a keen race and emphasized the feeling of good sportsmanship existing between the sponsors of the two yachts.

RADIO TO CARRY ACCOUNT OF YACHT RACE TODAY

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—(AP)—Radio is to carry a running account of the America's cup yacht race off Newport, R. I., tomorrow.

Using short wave equipment aboard a dirigible balloon, two coast guard cutters and the U. S. destroyer Kane, the Columbia and National networks have made plans to give a full account of the races.

At intervals during the broadcast of the yacht race, the CBS chain will give detailed reports of the finals of the men's national tennis singles from Forest Hills, L. I., lasting from 12:30 to 3:30 p. m. (E. S. T.).

Prohibition Bureau Needs $2,200,000

Increase of Appropriation Asked By Director Woodcock At Budget Hearing

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—(AP)—An increase of $2,200,000 in the appropriation for the prohibition bureau was asked today by Director Woodcock at a hearing before the budget bureau.

The prohibition director asked the additional funds principally for use of 500 additional agents. He now has 1,475 agents.

Asked if he could "dry up" the nation with the increased staff, Mr. Woodcock replied, "I don't know."

The total appropriation for prohibition enforcement including funds for the coast guard and department of justice prosecution activities now amounts to $15,000,000.

PROHIBITION LIVE TOPIC IN WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12—(AP)—Prohibition continued to command attention today in the capital, with Senator Burton K. Wheeler saying conditions under it had forced him to the opinion that the 18th amendment had failed.

The Montana democrat recalled having voted for the dry law in his state. He advocated leaving liquor traffic regulation to each state. Aside from his prepared statement, he predicted the democratic party would nominate an opponent of prohibition in 1932.

F. Scott McBride, superintendent of the Anti-Saloon league, said his organization had "never counted Burton Wheeler as a dry."

"This is simply a case of a wet changing his mind as a wet and is in line with that of Chairman Raskob and other party leaders whom he has supported before," he said. "It is no loss from the dry standpoint that I know of."

McBride said the newly announced stand of Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York brought "the wet issue into the next political campaign."

"In view of the fact that he has been mentioned as a possible candidate," he said, "it looks as if he makes the statement to clarify his position as a candidate."

With the wet and dry controversy apparently gaining in intensity, attention tonight centered upon the law enforcement commission which has been instructed to inquire into prohibition.

If the issue is forced into the presidential campaign two years hence, it is believed President Hoover will be guided by the report of the commission.

Both republicans and democrats are openly divided over the issue.

TWO WAYS FOR MODIFICATION OR REPEAL OF DRY LAW

LONGVIEW, Wash., Sept. 12.—(AP)—Two ways are open for modification or repeal of national prohibition, United States Senator Wesley L. Jones said in a letter to an editor here today, reaffirming his faith in the dry cause.

The law can be changed either by modification or repeal, in the same way it was adopted, or by "a national convention pursuant to the terms of the constitution," the senator suggested.

Speaking of "the national convention" he declared "no one thinks of, or has suggested anything of this kind."

SMALL THE GUBERNATORIAL NOMINEE IN NEW HAMPSHIRE

CONCORD, N. H., Sept. 12.—(AP)—The conceded unprecedented nomination of Albert W. Noone, picturesque 84-year-old Peterboro manufacturer, as democratic candidate for governor and U. S. senator, was upset today by official figures which gave the gubernatorial nomination to Frederick E. Small by 193 votes.

The official tabulation with but four small towns missing gave Small 4,733 and Noone 4,540. Small believed he had set some sort of a precedent in "spending no money and in asking no one to vote for me." He will oppose John G. Winant, republican gubernatorial nominee, in the November election while Noone will contest the senatorial fight with Henry W. Keyes, republican incumbent.

LITTLE CHANGE NOTED IN EMPLOYMENT CONDITIONS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.— (AP) — Summarizing employment conditions for August, the labor department said today there was little change as compared with July but added a brighter outlook developed near the close of the month with regard to the next 30 to 60 days.

"Advertising the Most Important Factor."

Speaking of present day conditions Roger W. Babson told the National Business Men's association that "the need of the hour is to increase the circulation of money. He added that it could be accomplished by reduced overhead, giving better measure to customers, discovering new products and uses for present products and spending more money on advertising."

Concerning advertising Mr. Babson had this to say: "Advertise more. Now is the time to increase advertising appropriations. During the past two years I have consistently refused to recommend increased appropriations for advertising. Now, however, the situation has entirely changed. Advertising today is performing a very important economic function. More advertising can now render a great and needed service in connection with speeding up the circulation of money. I believe that all business concerns can help themselves and help the country as a whole today by increasing their advertising appropriations. Newspaper advertising...can now perform a very patriotic service from which everyone may benefit. Of the four suggestions, perhaps advertising is the most important factor of all. Certainly advertising should go hand in hand with the three other factors."

Such advice from a noted economist cannot be passed over lightly. Let the advertising columns of The Bulletin help you.

A HURRICANE IS MOVING UP THE ATLANTIC COAST

Cape Lookout, Off the North Carolina Coast, Reported Wind of 120 Miles An Hour at 5 P. M. Yesterday—At 7 P. M. Communication With Cape Hatteras Was Lost—At That Time the Wind Was 60 Miles An Hour, With Barometer Falling Fast—Telephone Service At Morehead City, N. C., Was Disrupted

MANTEO, N. C., Sept. 12—(AP)—At 5 p. m. Cape Lookout reported a wind of 120 miles an hour, southwest. The only damage mentioned was unroofing of the radio compass station.

Communication with Cape Hatteras was reported lost at 7 p. m. At that time the wind was 60 miles an hour. The barometer, falling fast, was 29.40.

12 BUILDINGS DESTROYED BY WIND AT CAPE LOOKOUT

NORFOLK, Va., Sept. 12—(AP)—A radiophone message to coast guard division headquarters here at 9:25 o'clock tonight from the coast guard station keeper at Cape Lookout, North Carolina, reported that twelve buildings were demolished by the hurricane that struck there this afternoon, and that the coast guard station also was badly damaged.

No injuries or loss of life were reported. The message said approximately a hundred refugees from the storm were being cared for in the damaged coast guard station. All wires were down and land communication with Cape Lookout and adjacent stations was cut off.

HURRICANE MOVING IN NORTHEASTERLY DIRECTION

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12—(AP)—Forecaster C. L. Mitchell said today the hurricane central this morning off Frying Pan Shoals would pass inland near Cape Lookout, N. C., and continue up the coast in a north-northeasterly direction.

The forecaster said reports received at his office indicated the storm had traveled approximately 100 miles since 8 o'clock this morning, progressing at the rate of 16 miles an hour with wind of hurricane velocity.

He said the wind would rapidly decrease in force after striking land but that winds of stiff gale force probably would be felt in eastern North Carolina and Virginia, lower Chesapeake Bay and the southern tip of Maryland. The storm will pass inside Cape Hatteras and close to Norfolk and Cape Henry.

STORM WARNING BY THE WEATHER BUREAU

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12—(AP)—The weather bureau this afternoon issued the following storm warning:

"Advisory: Southeast storm warnings displayed north of Virginia Capes to Sandy Hook, New Jersey, 4 p. m., disturbance of small extent but with winds of hurricane force near center approaching North Carolina coast near Cape Lookout 2 p. m. Center will pass not far from Virginia Capes tonight moving north northeastward. Winds will reach gale force on and near coast but will not likely reach hurricane force except Cape Lookout region. Hurricane warnings down 5 p. m. south port to Beaufort.

HURRICANE DISRUPEC TELEPHONE SERVICE

CHARLOTTE, N. C., Sept. 12—(AP)—Telephone company employes reported impaired at 1 p. m. and interrupted about an hour later from Newbern, the nearest telephone station to the coast city. At Newburn a heavy rain and wind storm was said to be in progress this afternoon, but no damage had been caused. Wilmington, to the south, reported no evidence of a storm.

"LOVE INJUNCTION" WRIT ISSUED IN CONCORD. N. H.

CONCORD, N. H., Sept. 12—(AP)—The first "love injunction" known to be on record here, has been granted by Judge Joseph S. Matthews in Merrimack superior court.

The order restrains James Huntington Niles, 24, from visiting Frances Keene, 17, daughter of the petitioner, Mrs. Erwin F. Keene, of Concord. Niles is the son of the late Edward C. Niles, former chairman of the public service commission, whose family has long been prominent here.

The girl's mother alleged that Niles visited her daughter in the Keene home and refused to leave when the parent requested. She demanded that Niles' courtship of her daughter cease. Under the court order, Niles is prohibited from speaking to the girl at any time or place. Mrs. Keene said her daughter and Niles were friendly.

Miss Keene is a graduate of St. Mary's school, an exclusive educational institution, and is preparing to enter college.

DROP IN JOBS FOUND BY FREE EMPLOYMENT BUREAUS

HARTFORD, Sept. 12.— (AP) —A slight drop in the percentage of jobs found for applicants by the eight free public employment bureaus in Connecticut, was cited today in the August report of Commissioner Harry F. MacKenzie, of the state bureau of labor.

A total of 4,732 persons applied for employment at the bureaus, of which 2,558 were given jobs, the report said, a ratio of 54 per cent compared to 54.3 per cent in July. Women fared better than men again with 1,309 out of 2,093 applicants or 62.5 per cent being supplied with situations. This was a gain over last month, when the percentage was 61.3. Only 47.3 per cent of the 2,639 male applicants were found jobs compared to 48.3 per cent in July.

Hartford and Waterbury led in the number of jobs supplied with 488 and 461, respectively. New Haven was third with 407.

"BUYERS' STRIKE" CAUSE OF BUSINESS DEPRESSION

WELLESLEY, Mass., Sept. 12.—(AP)—What was described as a "buyers' strike" brought about by a pessimistic attitude as to the future, was cited as the cause of the present business depression by Creighton J. Hill, labor expert, speaking at the 17th annual national business conference, here, today.

"For nearly a year," he said, "there has been a buyers' strike which was brought about by an enforced attitude of apprehension over the outlook, together with the constant threat during the first seven months of unemployment and wage reduction. The average citizen has restricted his buying until he could see how things were coming out."

He continued that now is the psychological time for retailers to go after business and for manufacturers to do more advertising.

BODY OF A WOMAN WAS FOUND IN NORWALK HABOR

NORWALK, Sept. 12.—(AP)—Police tonight had made scant headway in their attempts to learn the identity or cause of death of a middle-aged woman whose body early today was found on the West beach of Sheffield Island in the Norwalk harbor.

The woman, clad only in underclothes and with her face cut and battered, had been in the water several days, investigators said. The only possible clues to her identity were a trademark on the chemise worn by the woman and markings in her shoes. No jewelry was found except a four-leaf clover pin which apparently had failed to bring good luck to the wearer.

Police inclined to the belief the woman had ended her own life though they declined to say what evidence they had to support that theory.

GOVT. ASKS REVIEW OF THE CUNNINGHAM CASE

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—(AP)—The government today asked the supreme court to review the decision of the court of appeals which held that Thomas W. Cunningham, of Philadelphia, could not be removed to the District of Columbia for trial on a charge of failing to answer questions of a senate committee.

Cunningham, former sheriff of Philadelphia county, Pa., refused to tell the senate campaign funds investigating committee the source of $50,000 which he gave toward the candidacy of William S. Vare, who was barred from the senate because of excessive expenditures.

Cunningham was indicted but he fought removal to the District of Columbia for trial. A district court ordered him removed but the judgment was reversed by the circuit court of appeals. It held the indictment had failed to charge a crime because the questions Cunningham refused to answer did not appear pertinent.

In asking the review, the government contended the questions asked were pertinent and said that, unless reversed, the court of appeals decision might stand as a precedent in such cases.

TWO CRASHES OF PLANES, WITH NO ONE INJURED

DAVENPORT, Iowa, Sept. 12.—(AP)—Mrs. Frank Hawks, wife of the holder of the transcontinental air speed record, and three others escaped serious injuries in two crashes of planes landing with the Ford air tour today.

Mrs. Hawks was riding in a plane piloted by Lee Schoenhair, assistant scorer of the tour, when it nosed over in landing. The wings and propeller were damaged.

In the other crash, the plane occupied by Captain Ray Collins, manager of the tour, and piloted by Walter Leese, keeled over when the brakes locked, demolishing the left wing. The plane will remain here indefinitely for repairs.

All the occupants of the damaged planes except Leese took off with the tour in other planes. Leese remained to make repairs on his ship.

BIELEFIELD DEM. NOMINEE FOR MAYOR OF MIDDLETOWN

MIDDLETOWN, Sept. 12.— (AP) — Mayor Frederick J. Bielefield today was chosen as the democratic standard bearer in the mayoralty contest to head Middletown's city election on Oct. 6. The incumbent will be opposed by Richard E. Mylchreest, who was nominated by the republicans last night.

Mayor Bielefield was nominated by acclamation at the party's caucus tonight with no candidates in the field against him for the nomination.

Charles A Chaffee won the nomination for city treasurer with 577 votes to 302 for James F. Connery, his only opponent. Another contest, for a place on the town school board, gave the nomination to Rev. George B. Gilbert, who polled 555 votes. John J. McDonnell his unsuccessful opponent, received 321 votes.

WOULD HELP DOMINICAN GOVT. TO RAISE MONEY

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.— (AP) — President Hoover said today that this country would cooperate in every way possible with the attempts of the Dominican government to raise money for hurricane reconstruction work.

The president said this country would not stand in the way of the proposed loan flotation for money to meet the hurricane emergency.

Under a long-standing agreement the Dominican republic may not increase its exterior indebtedness without consulting the United States.

It is seeking a $3,000,000 loan of which $1,000,000 would be used for public works and reconstruction, and $2,000,000 for limited private loans to individuals.

MEDFORD WOMAN APPEALS WHEN FINED IN COURT

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Sept. 12—Fined $5 and costs in police court this morning on a charge of failure to give the right of way, Mrs. Mary M. Connors of Medford, Mass., gave notice of an appeal to the superior court. A pleasure car driven by Mrs. Connors figured in a collision earlier this week with a truck operated by Joseph Szatkowski of this city, at the junction of Main and Windham streets. A similar charge against the local driver was not pressed. Police Officers Ralph Burchnall and Roderick Lariviere, Szatkowski, Mrs. Connors, Mrs. Ellen Brown of Hartford and Captain Frank W. McLean were the witnesses in the case. Mrs. Connors testified that a truck parked near the intersection obstructed the views of both drivers and that the truck emerged from the side street about one car length in front of her own machine, making it impossible for her to avoid a collision. She stated that her principal witness, Lloyd R. Williams of Cranston, R. I., was away on a business trip and could not be located. Captain McLean testified that Szatkowski had come to police headquarters after the accident and said that he would settle for damages, but later withdrew his agreement after consulting with Attorney Arthur T. Kelley.

OBITUARY

Antonio Insalaco

Antonio Insalaco, 79, died at his home on Windham road about 10 o'clock this morning. He leaves his wife, and six children; Charles, Richard, Vincenzo, Carmelo Insalaco and Mrs. Josephina Parla of this city and Mrs. D. Carleho of Lynn, Mass.; three brothers, Salvatore, Diego and Carmelo Insalaco of Italy; and two sisters, Mrs. Maria Russo of Italy and Miss Anna Insalaco of this city.

Mrs. Katherine D. McGillicuddy

Mrs. Katherine Doyle McGillicuddy, aged about 80, widow of the late Florence McGillicuddy, and resident of 12 Oak street, died in St. Joseph's hospital late Thursday afternoon after a week's illness. She was born in Ireland and is survived by one son, Florence, and several grandchildren residing in this city.

The motion of Alderman Eugene B. Lewis at the special alderman meeting Thursday night that ways and means of establishing a dog pound be considered, brings to mind the fact that Dog Warden John T. Meikle already has a bill against the city amounting to $730 for keeping dogs on his own property during the past five or six years. Some of the city officials are of the belief that the town of Windham should bear all or at least a major part of the cost of a dog pound and warden expenses inasmuch as all dog licenses are paid to the town, the city not receiving any income therefrom. If a dog pound is established within the city limits it will probably be located on a secton of the extensive city yard property on West Main street.

Samuel Spry of North street, a machinist at the Rossie Velvet company plant, is the builder of a splendid miniature of Sir Thomas Lipton's Shamrock V. Mr. Spry has been at work on the model for the past three months. It is made to scale and measures 42 inches from stern to bow. The sail measures 50 inches and the ship has a five pound keel. Strips were used exclusively in its construction, the entire ship weighng 7 1-2 pounds. In a water test at Pleasant View, R. I. it met all sailing requirements. The model, painted in the famous green of the Irish gentleman's contender is on display in a show window of Mac's cigar store on Main street.

Plans to stage a benefit whist and other matters relating to the progress of the new ffe, drum and bugle corps were the major topics at the regular meeting of James J. Shea post, No. 19, American Legion held at the legion rooms on Jackson street, Thursday night. The corps committee, George B. Robinson, Earl Mastin, Engelhart Johnsn and Stephen Young reported on the progress of the organization. Finance Officer Edmund J. Peckham reported on a budget plan for the organization and Chairman Wilfred Moreau of the degree team was authorized to select eight members to make up the team.

The new Willimantic-Storrs cement highway is now fully completed as far as the Charles G. Hall property, one-half mile north of Mansfield Center. From that point northerly to Storrs concrete has been laid on one half side to the home of Herbert A. Gillette, north of the town hall at Spring Hill. This one-half section will be completed to the terminal at Storrs before the other side is laid. With good weather conditions prevailing the contractors expect the highway to be open to traffic by the middle of October.

Eugene St. Hilaire, 20, of lower village, was arraigned in police court today charged with assault on his mother, Mrs. Edward St. Hilaire. He pleaded guilty through guardian ad litem, William V. Palmer, Sr., and was given a suspended jail sentence of 30 days. In reprimanding the youth for the trouble he has been causing at his home, Judge Frank H. Foss placed him on probation for three months.

MYSTIC

MRS. JOHN H. COPP AT 97 REMARKABLY VIGOROUS

Today (Saturday), Mrs. Ann Eliza Copp, Mystic's oldest resident, will observe her 97th birthday at her home with her son, John Brenton Copp, 6 Elm street. Mrs. Copp was born in the Whiting homestead, Old Mystic, now owned by her niece, Mrs. Ida Whiting Norman. She was one of the seven children of Mr. and Mrs. Hallam Whiting; one other is living, John H. Whiting, who is quite active and called on his sister Thursday. Mrs. Copp married John H. Copp, July 3, 1855, and lived in Old Mystic until about 20 years ago, when she rented her house to Frank E. Williams and came to Mystic to live with her son. Mr. Whiting was engaged in the timber business and died from injuries received by a tree falling on him, nearly 50 years ago. Her daughter, Esther Copp, married Mr. Smith, of San Francisco, and Mrs. Copp visited her there, traveling alone across the continent, and was there at the time of the earthquake. Mr. Smith sold his business and, with his wife, came to West Mystic, where he lived until his death. Mrs. Smith has recently built a new house near the home of her mother on Elm street. Mrs. Copp has the distinction of uniting with the First Baptist church of Groton in Old Mystic, 79 years ago, and was a regular attendant at all its services during her residence there. She maintains her interest in the church and is much loved by the members. Since coming to Mystic she has made many friends who delight in calling at her home to hear her reminiscences and note her interest in current events. All acquaintances will wish her more birthdays to give Cheerio the privilege of announcing it with three cheers.

WESTERLY

WORCESTER GIRL FINED FOR SPEEDING; APPEALS

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., Sept. 12—A session lasting through the noon period on Friday and into the afternoon was held Friday in third district court by Judge Oliver H. Williams, when court matters were disposed of as follows:

Most of the court's time was taken up with the trial of Miss Eleanor Townsend, 18, of Worcester, Mass., a summer visitor at Misquamicut, who was charged with the operation of an auto on Elm street on Sept. 10 at a rate of speed greater than reasonable and proper. Through her attorney, C. E. Roche, she entered a plea of not guilty. Her court appearance followed a summons issued by Westerly Police Patrolman Paul McCarthy, the investigating officer at the automobile accident at the corner of Cross and Elm streets, when the Dodge touring car driven by John Jenkins, of Wickford, R. I., and that of the defendant came together with a crash and ended with the week-old car of Miss Townsend astride the hedge on the property of F. H. Nibecker at 46 Elm street.

The first state's evidence was given by the complaining witness, John Jenkins, who told of having his auto just moving as he was about to round the Cross street corner into Elm street after several autos had passed, coming up Elm street. He said his auto was hit by the Townsend car and badly smashed but no one was injured on his investigation.

Officer Paul McCarthy testified to being called to the scene and after making investigation had Westerly Highway Engineer A. L. Leon called, who made measurements to show that Miss Townsend had traveled some 169 feet, as tire marks showed. The latter said on the witness stand "the accidents here have happened since a previously obscuring hedge had been moved back and which were a previous cause for accident. The wheels of the Townsend auto had gone up over a six-inch curb and up a ten-inch cement coping into the hedge."

The accused took the stand in her own defense and testified that she had followed other cars up from Watch Hill and had traveled at less than 30-miles-per-hour speed. She said when her auto was struck by the Dodge car her maid was thrown over against her and her foot was pressed down on the accelerator and later she applied the brakes. Her maid, Miss McMahon, said she was not in a position to see the cars come together but heard the other car strike the car she was in.

Other state witnesses were occupants of the Dodge auto, Mrs. Mildred Stringfield, her cousin, Margaret Arnold and Mrs. Brennan, who was on the back seat.

In finding the defendant guilty, Judge Williams said there was no evidence of responsibility for the accident with the Cross street car and imposed a fine of $25 and costs. Bonds in the sum of $500 were furnished on notice of appeal taken by her attorney.

James Gencarelli, of West street, pleaded not guilty to a charge of illegal possession of liquor and on trial was adjudged guilty and sentenced to pay a fine of $100 and costs. The defendant, through his counsel, Attorney Clarence E. Roche, claimed an appeal to the superior court, Frank Capizzano furnishing surety in the sum of $500.

The dwelling house of the defendant was raided on Sept. 6, and the officers reported finding considerable beer on the premises and some whiskey. The raid was conducted by Lieut. George H. Champlin with Officers Robert Kessel and Frank Knight as aids. These officers testified as to visiting the Gencarelli house and procuring 122 pint bottles of beer, 30 quart bottles of beer and two pint bottles of Stewart rye whiskey, together with cappers and corks.

Oscar Deniger, aged 20 years, of West Warwick, was sentenced to 30 days in the Providence county jail by Judge Oliver H. Williams in the third district court today, when he pleaded guilty to operating a motorcycle at a rate of speed greater than reasonable and proper. Deniger was before the court on two other counts, operating a motor vehicle without a license and driving a motor vehicle not properly registered.

Trooper Albert L. Taylor stated that Deniger was driving his motorcycle with a passenger on it at the rate of 70 miles per hour on the Nooseneck Hill road on Sept. 6. When stopped he had no operator's license and the plates on the cycle belonged to another machine.

Deniger pleaded guilty to all of the charges. He told the court he was arrested a year ago for operating a motor vehicle without a license and he was fined $10 and costs in West Warwick. He also said he had been arrested on another charge.

At the close of the court session, Deniger was found guilty on all three counts, being given a sentence of 30 days in Providence county jail on exceeding the speed limit, and $25 and costs on each of the other two counts, charging him being without operator's or registry licenses. In case of appeal bonds were made $1,000 on the first and $250 each on the other two.

David Pitkanen, Finlander, of Westerly, was fined $15 and costs by Judge Oliver H. Williams in the third district court this morning, when he was found guilty of failing to stop his automobile at the red light at the intersection of High and Oak streets on Sept. 5, and his car collided with a machine belonging to Lindsey Loring, Jr., of Boston. Pitkanen pleaded not guilty to the charge and defended his own case.

The testimony of A. Materese, who was standing near the scene, was to the effect that the Pitkanen car was operated against the red light, which was against traffic traveling east and west on Oak street. Loring, Jr., testified as to the car of the defendant passing the light and hitting his machine. Engineer A. L. Leon testified as to making measurements which showed the defendant's car to be on the left of the center line on Oak street and beyond the center line on High street. Officer Paul McCarthy made the arrest.

Real Estate Transfers

Recorded in the office of the Westerly town clerk appear the following transfers:

Sept. 11. Joseph Ruisi and wife to John E. Ruisi, certain lot or parcel of land adjoining land of James F. Farnsworth on a street formerly Rock avenue, now Newton avenue, with buildings, bounded southerly by land of James Farnsworth, easterly by land of Charles L. Main and northerly by land now or formerly of William A. Rogers.

Sept. 11. Fred N. Burdick and Alice V. B. Lillie, of Denver, Colo., to Nellie Dickey Tearle, tract of land with dwelling house and improvements on the south shore of the Pawcatuck river and at Avondale on the southerly side of Avondale road.

Sept. 11. Nellie Dickey Tearle to Fred N. Burdick, the above-described parcel or tract of land.

Employes of the South County Public Service Co were engaged on West Broad street on Friday in removing many of the overhead wires near the west end of the Pawcatuck river bridge and at the junction of Coggswell street. With the gradual underground "hook-ups" being completed, the overhead wires can be eliminated. When all underground connections are made the overhead wiring, especially the service lines entering the various buildings and business establishments, will be taken down. After all wires are down the poles on West Broad street which now occupy positions in the street, with the setting back of the curb for narrower sidewalks, will be taken up and then for the first time the full width of the widened and re-surfaced West Broad street will be available for full motor vehicular traffic.

DANIELSON

MANY ATTEND FUNERAL SERVICES FOR JUDGE TUCKER

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Sept. 12—This afternoon following a prayer service conducted at the home by Rev. Chester J. Armstrong of the Danielson Baptist church, the funeral service for Judge James N. Tucker of East Killingly was held at the Union Baptist church in that place, Rev. Charles A. Downs of Goodyear assisting Rev. Mr. Armstrong. Relatives and numbers of friends were in attendance. Both clergymen, who were friends of Judge Tucker, gave glowing eulogies of the deceased, stressing his life long ideal of honesty, justice and righteousness.

During the service Earl F. Winslow sang Abide With Me, and Lead Kindly Light, both hymns selected by Judge Tucker as the ones he wished used at his funeral service. Miss Ruth Winslow was accompanist. Burial was in Westfield cemetery, Danielson, the committal service conducted by Rev. Mr. Armstrong and Rev. Mr. Downs.

The floral pieces were very beautiful. The bearers were Judge Sabin S. Russell, Attorney E. L. Darbie, Burdette C. Hopkins, Walter Anderson, Ernest A. Hulett and Edward A. Sullivan. A. F Wood was in charge of the arrangements.

Mrs. Christina Carrolla

The funeral of Mrs. Christina Carrolla was held from the home in Goodyear this morning, with funeral services at St. Joseph's church in Dayville at 9 o'clock, Rev. J. F. Tobin being celebrant of the high mass of requiem. Burial was in St. Joseph's cemetery, Rev. Fr. Tobin conducting the committal service. The bearers were Ojara Carreia, Pedro Costa, Ajerberto Souza, Antonio Marcado, Manuel Pacheo. Martin T. Burns was in charge of the arrangements.

After an inspection of various school buildings throughout the town, Dr. W. H. Judson, health officer of the borough of Danielson and the town of Killingly, gave out the following statement this afternoon: Dr. Judson in his regular inspection of the public schools of the town of Killingly is highly gratified with the way that the sanitary upkeep of the various schools are kept, and the recent improvements added to each building (with one or two exceptions, and to be taken care of next year without additional expense to the town's resources above last year's) through the activity of Supt. W. E. Parker, both as regards drinking water and toilets and general refreshment of school rooms with new paint. Every pupil under Dr. Judson's observation looked clean and well kept, and we should be very proud of our schools.

Telephone operatives in the Moosup division last evening arranged a reception and miscellaneous shower in honor of Miss Odina Zercie, a member of the operating force, who is to be married next Monday to Eugene Bellavance of Moosup. Miss Zercie was presented with a variety of gifts, including linen and cut glass. At the affair, held in the rest room of the telephone exchange, refreshments that included sandwiches, fancy cookies, whipped cream and ice cream were served.

The stage is all set now for the battle of ballots that will be waged at the polls here on the first Monday in October. It will center largely around the candidates for selectmen. There are four of these—First Selectman Charles A. Tillinghast, John Z. LaBelle, republicans, Patrick Riley, Louis O. Stone, democrats—and only three of them can be elected.

The democrats are avowedly out this year to elect two selectmen, something they have not been able to accomplish for time out of memory. From within the ranks of the party one hears that this ambition is heightened this year because the democrats hoped to have better co-operation within their own ranks, than some of them claim they have had for years back. Being aware of this ambition of the democrats, the republicans will be unusually active in their campaign.

If the democrats do work solidly for both their candidates, and not throw a certain percentage of their strength to one of their candidates in preference to the other one, as they have done for a number of years past, party members point out, they figure they may elect both men.

PLAINFIELD COW WAS VICTIM OF RABIES

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Sept. 12—Chauncey Ganung, deputy commissioner of domestic animals, Hartford, reported here this afternoon that a cow that died yesterday in Plainfield was a victim of rabies. The head of the animal was taken off and forwarded to the state laboratories at Hartford and tested positive.

This cow, owned by Fred Burdick, a resident in that section of Plainfield east of Bishop's crossing, was bitten on August 14th by a stray dog that attacked the animal after fighting with two dogs, one of them the property of Mr. Burdick, the other owned by Charles Dean, also of Plainfield. Both these dogs are now in quarantine.

Attacking the cow, the strange dog fastened his fangs in her throat, and she ran about 30 feet vigorously fighting to shake off the animal before she could rid herself of him. Then the dog made for Mr. Burdick, who obtained a gun and killed the undoubtedly rabid little beast.

Last Tuesday the cow began to act strangely, the next day she staggered and fell down and yesterday morning she was found dead. The cow was dry and had not been milked for a long time.

Deputy Ganung has determined that George K. Brown of North Scituate, R. I., was the owner of the dog that attacked the cow and fought with the Plainfield dogs, and that it left home on August 14, the day it appeared in Plainfield. It was a medium-sized English bull, gray and white in color, and had an undershot jaw.

Deputy Ganung said this afternoon that the dog traveled about 30 miles from the Brown home in North Scituate to where it was killed in Plainfield. He is anxious to learn whether anyone saw such a dog along the route it may have taken from Rhode Island into Connecticut, possibly through the town of Sterling. He asks that any such information be forwarded to his department headquarters in Hartford.

He has established that the dog was in Plainfield village two hours or so prior to appearing at the Burdick place, and that it had been petted by two or three persons when it was in the vicinity of Planchon's garage. At that time the dog appeared amiable enough, and made no attempt to bite anyone.

For the present no quarantine of dogs will be ordered in Plainfield, where one was in force for many weeks some months ago.

Misses Isabell and Elizabeth Howe of 350 Congress avenue, West Haven, escaped with minor injuries this afternoon when the light car in which they were riding overturned on the Brooklyn state highway. Miss Isabell, who had been operating the car, allowed her sister sitting beside her to take the steering wheel and guide the car while she ate a chicken sandwich. Miss Elizabeth evidently lost control. The car was considerably damaged and later was towed to a local garage.

PUTNAM

LOCAL HONOR STUDENT TO ATTEND CARNEGIE TECH.

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Sept. 12—William "Big Bill" Shann, Putnam high school football hero of two seasons ago and a backfield mainstay of Rutgers Prep eleven in 1929, will be off to Pittsburgh, Penn., Saturday where he will enroll in an engineering course at Carnegie Tech. Shann, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Shann of Fremont street, is well known here as an athlete. In 1928, when captain of the local high school football team, he piloted his crew of gridsters to the championship of eastern Connecticut, when the Noyesmen came through the season without the loss or tie of a single game. At Rutgers last year Shann was a three letter varsity man and at graduation in June, the school's highest commencement honor—the Dorr prize—was awarded him. The winner of the prize each year is identified as the graduating student combining to the greatest degree the qualities of high academic standing, moral leadership, athletic ability and school loyalty.

Henry J. Davenport of Florida, a former resident of Pomfret and one time district supervisor of the state highway department, was a visitor here yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Noyes of "Tyrone," Pomfret, left this afternoon for Newport to attend the international cup races which will be held there Saturday.

Patrolman Benonie Durand of the local police, was in Brockton today attending the Brockton fair.

Attorney Irving H. Miron was in Willimantic today on business.

The high school football schedule as announced today by Coach L. F. Noyes follows: Sept. 27th, Northbridge at Putnam; Oct. 4, Stonington at Stonington; Oct. 18, Chapman Technical high of New London at Putnam; Oct. 25, Plainfield at Putnam; Oct. 31, Connecticut Aggies "B" team at Putnam; Nov. 7, Robert E. Fitch high school of Groton at Groton; Nov. 11, Bartlett high of Webster at Putnam; Nov. 22, Douglass high at Putnam; Nov. 28, Killingly high at Putnam. The schedule arranged, is one of the stiffest the Noyesmen have faced in recent years, and fully aware of this fact, Coach Noyes has been busy the past week putting his new team through hard workouts in order to whip the new material into line for the season opener which will take place two weeks from today.

Local people will have an opportunity to see the intrepid French fliers, Capt. Dieudonne Coste and Lieut. Maurice Bellonte, first birdmen to cross the Atlantic on a westward flight, when they arrive in Worcester on Tuesday of next week. It was announced today that the filers have included Worcester in the itinerary of their re-arranged "good will" tour

The public, through Superintendent of Schools Leon M. Farrin, today was invited to attend a meeting of the Putnam public school teachers to be held at the high school on Tuesday, Sept. 16, at which Doctor Hamilton Holt of Woodstock, president of Rollins college, Florida, will be the principal speaker. The meeting will be opened at four o'clock in the afternoon.

Leo Marion of Providence street, a member of the graduating class of Putnam high school in June, has entered St. John Prep school at Danvers, Mass.

Herbert Lepire, student at Bryant-Stratton school in Providence is spending the week end at his home on Mechanics street.

Miss Anna Murphy of Farrows street, is visiting with relatives in Providence over the week end.

The Putnam high school football squad, called out last week by Coach L. F. Noyes consists of 30 candidates for berths on the new edition of the Blue and White. Only three lettermen Capt. Pat Anderson, Reynolds Deberadinis and Arthur Ross, are on the roster.

CANTERBURY GREEN

Tidings from Oregon

News has been received from Rev. and Mrs. Ralph Knight and family who are now living near Sherwood, Oregon, Mrs. Knight's former home. Mr. Knight was pastor here a few years ago, but has since been in poor health and spent some time at a sanatorium. He is now able to preach occasionally and Mrs. Knight is teaching.

Birthday Festivities

The annual gathering in celebration of the birthdays of Levi N. Clark of Canterbury and Chas. Newton, of New London, took place Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Davis. All enjoyed the "visiting" incident to the reunion and did justice to the appetizing dinner of ham, mashed potatoes, salads, rolls, the New England dish of succotash, cake and watermelon that had been prepared for the event. Two large birthday cakes were auspicious features and many gifts for the honored ones were brought forward. The company present comprised, with the hosts, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Davis and sons Kenneth, Addison and Ellsworth, Mr. and Mrs. Levi N. Clark, Miss Melissa J. Larkham and Chas. W. Larkham, of Canterbury, Mr. and Mrs. Frank R. Burdick and daughter Bertha, Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Newton, Mrs. Josephine Hester and Aaron G. JEWETT CITY

SNEAK THIEF VISITS HOME OF EDWARD A. FAUST

A sneak thief entered the home of Edward A. Faust on East Main street one afternoon this week, during the family's absence. The fact that Mr. Faust unexpectedly returned caused the thief to leave without stealing anything as far as known. Mr. Faust found the bathroom door locked from the inside, which showed some one had made his exit by way of the window. The screen was raised and a footprint was visible on the outside roof and prints of dirty fingers were on the woodwork. Both the cellar doors in the kitchen and at the foot of the outside entrance were ajar, which was probably the way entrance was gained. None of the neighbors had seen anyone enter or leave the house, which was remarkably fortunate for the marauder, as he had to jump from the second story to make his getaway in broad daylight. Mr. Faust at first thought his daughter had returned, but Earl Robinson procured a ladder and found the bathroom empty and evidences of a hasty escape.

An Ambitious Student

Mrs. Joseph Malek has received a fine letter from her son Stanley, now a member of the junior class in science at the Polish Alliance college in Cambridge Springs, Pa. A fine view of the college buildings and campus accompanied the letter. This young student is a fine lad and bound to make good.

L. M. GINGRAS REELECTED ASHLAND CLUB PRESIDENT

The members of the Ashland club paid a great tribute to Louis M. (Doc) Gingras Thursday evening by electing him to again serve as president of the organization which bears a most enviable reputation in textile community associations.

This annual meeting marked the eleventh anniversary of the club and the program was one of the outstanding events of the season. It opened at seven o'clock with a fine chicken pie supper at which 150 members sat down. Between courses group singing kept everyone in good humor.

An assortment of noise makers decorated the tables and the men and women used these to advantage in expressing their approval of the various happenings during the evening.

The annual reports of the secretary and treasurer were read and the deafening roar that followed each registered the approval of the membership.

James Burns, a past president of the National Association of Textile Dyers & Finishers was guest. Mr. Burns is quite well known as a vocalist and during the evening he led some of the group singing and in addition he and Ed Bouley, of the Ashland club, sang a duet which merited the hearty applause it received. Later Mr. Burns and Ray W. Greene, Jr., manager of the Ashland Cotton company, also sang a spirited duet number.

Frederick L. Babcock, editor of Fibre & Fabric, textile weekly magazine, also a guest, when asked to address the group did so in a manner which commanded instant attention. He delivered a message of importance as regards the industry in general and predicted a noticeable recovery within a few weeks from the depression which has enveloped the industry for many months. He is well posted in the welfare branch of the industry and complimented the Ashland club as an organization for the progress which it had made in its eleven years. He declared that the Ashland club held unique prestige among similar organizations and that its progress had placed it in the front rank of welfare work mutual to operatives and operators.

Mr. Babcock when he had concluded had made a big hit with the ladies and the men are no less his friends for life.

Edward W. Smith, former manager of the plant, now an honorary member of the club, also addressed the meeting. During his regime here he was very popular with the operatives and he was greeted with great enthusiasm. This was his first opportunity to thank the members for placing him on the honorary list and he did so in a most pleasing and convincing manner. Mr. Smith is now assistant agent at the Wauregan Mills.

Welfare Supervisor Prentice W. Chase, who acts as house manager, called attention to the fact that the past year had been the most critical period in the history of the club due to business depression and uncertain working conditions. However, referring to the records for the year, he brought out the fact that the banner year of 1929 had been very closely approached financially, and that in the matter of club interest and social or recreative activity the year just closed had even surpassed the achievement of the previous year, on the average.

President Gingras introduced Ray W. Greene, Jr., manager of the plant as the final speaker, the first occasion that this now popular executive head had been privileged to address so many of his operatives in one group. That Mr. Greene should be well received by the group present and that he would make a favorable impression on those within reach of his voice was a foregone conclusion. He had little to say about the shop, but what he did say in this connection was no less interesting than that which he said of the achievement of the organization, especially during the past year under apparent unfavorable circumstances. He closed by thanking the members for this opportunity of meeting them outside of the mill.

Bowling prizes were also distributed to last season's bowling leagues, male and female. The surprise of the evening was the presentation of a beautiful smoking set to Manager Ray W. Greene, Jr., by the president, in behalf of the Ashland club. Mr. Greene is soon to join the ranks of the benedicts. He was taken completely by surprise but proved fully equal to the occasion, and thanked the club in a cordial and impressive manner.

Following the business session the party adjourned to the Ashland casino where an exceptionally fine dance program had been arranged. About 700 attended the dance there with excellent music by Polly and Her Pals orchestra.

The balloon dance was the big number on the program and during this hundreds of balloons were liberated overhead. The streamer dance was also a pretty addition to the program.

During the short intermission Florence Ellison a member of the orchestra made a great hit with the audience in rendering two selections on the piano-accordion.

There were old fashioned dances for those who enjoy such and at midnight every one agreed "it was a great party."

The board of directors elected at the meeting comprises five overseers, Louis M. Gingras, Arthur W. Rioux, Austin Harris, Ulric Gilbert and Harold Tomlinson; five male operatives, John Burda, Theodore Raill, Ed Gromko, John Sowerbutts and John Thompson; five female operatives, Theresa Shorey, Estelle Shorey, Grace Burda, Wanda Solenski and Agnes Corby.

From this board of the directors the following officers were elected: President, Louis M. Gingras, the ninth election for Mr. Gingras, who has given his time and executive ability all these years. His re-election is the finest tribute that the membership could pay to show their appreciation and respect. Theresa Shorey was also reelected to the office of vice-president, her second term in this office. For the third time Agnes Corby was elected secretary and Harold Tomlinson, who has completed the unexpired term of former Treasurer Charles D. Cornell, was re-elected to that office.

A banquet for the retiring board of directors who attended two-thirds of the meetings during the year will be held shortly at the Norwich Inn.

THE YACHT RACE

This is the day which the yachtsmen and those interested in yacht racing have been waiting for for years. Today is scheduled the first in the series of contests between Enterprise and Shamrock V for the possession of America's cup.

Whether interest has been developed to the point that it has in other years is a question. Enthusiasm always increases after it is possible for the landsman to get an idea of what the contesting yachts can actually do against each other. Interest hasn't lagged among the yachtsmen, for there were four constructed as possible defenders, which indicates there was no apathy over the race or the outcome.

It is a long time since the cup was brought to this country and there is always a large public interest in producing and backing a yacht that will keep it here. This is chiefly because of the honor, for in Sir Thomas Lipton there is recognized one of the best of sportsmen and but for him there might even have been fewer international contests for this cup.

While there has been some criticism over the fact that the preliminaries among the four American-built sloops were shortened and such a quick decision made as to which would be the defender, the Enterprise and Shamrock V are supposed to represent the best product of American and British yacht builders. They present a marked similarity in design, are restricted as to size and details, so that this year in particular much importance is going to attach to the manner in which they are handled. The seamanship is always a vital factor. There may be certain handicaps in being obliged to bring the challenger across the Atlantic, but when it comes to handling the yachts that handicap doesn't prevail.

The international yacht race is one which has no observation trains. Certain vessels will take those who have the time and funds for such sport but the public in general will get this race for the first time by radio. In the test between American and British racing yachts it is to be hoped that the better boat will win.

GAS TAXATION

An entirely different attitude is displayed toward the gas tax today from that when it was first advocated. Experience has shown the motorists that it imposes no heavy burden and that they get compensating results in the way of much better roads.

In the state of Indiana the tax on gasoline was raised from three to four cents a gallon last year. There would be reason therein for the use of less gasoline if the motorists were disposed to resent the change, but there is no evidence of any such action. It has recently been shown that the income from that tax in Indiana during August amounted to over $1,866,000, the largest ever received, and the amount collected in August of this year was over $200,000 in excess of the same month last year, both being under the increased rate. In that state the revenue for the first eight months of this year totalled more than $1,800,000 in excess of the same months last year. Thus it is apparent that those who use gasoline and the highways are not being deterred because of the gas tax or the increase in the levy.

When such revenue is applied to the construction and maintenance of highways it is fully appreciated by the payers of the tax that it is being devoted to their needs. They are getting something directly for their money. They are providing for good highways and they are certainly necessary for the proper enjoyment of motoring.

It is where the idea of devoting part of the gas tax to other purposes than road building, where it is intended to use a portion of it for the general expense account or for the construction of public buildings, that there is strong reason for opposition on the part of the motorists. The unfairness of imposing a tax upon only a portion of the taxpayers for the benefit of all is clearly evident. The motorist is already burdened with a sufficient amount of taxation without making him a target for general attack whenever more funds are desired to meet outlays in which he is no more interested than the person not owning a car. He isn't likely to howl on a reasonable gas tax for road construction, except possibly as to where there might be a different or better use made of it in highway work.

INCREASING POSTAL RATE

According to a Washington report, it can be expected that congress at its next session will be asked to take up the question of increasing the rate on first class mail from two to two and a half cents an ounce.

This is the result of the study which has been given to the situation by Postmaster General Brown. He is desirous of eliminating, if possible, the deficit that exists every year in his department, totalling, at last report, $85,000,000.

It is recognized, of course, that the postoffice department is obliged to bear certain expenditures by order of congress which serve to increase the indebtedness. There are services which cost much money and which come far from producing compensating revenue. There is the volume of government matter that is carried without cost and they all serve to put the department in a hole. The outlay for air mail service and the subsidies to ship companies for carrying the mail place heavy burdens on the department.

It has been the practice for the government to stand the deficit, but it is believed that the department can be put on a paying basis, or at least one where ends can be brought together. Putting up the rate on first class mail means that those who send letters will pay for the service they get instead of leaving part of it to be made up by taxation. It would mean a revision upward in keeping with the tendency in all other directions. The expenses of the department have been boosted in various ways and the new rate would boost the revenue to balance it.

It is a proposition that can be expected to develop much discussion in congress. That body has sanctioned changes in the department that have contributed to the $85,000,000 deficit, but when it comes to checking that deficit by taking more out of the patrons of the department it is a different proposition where most attention may be paid to the sentiment of the public itself.

SAFETY FOR CHILDREN

One of the distressing facts in connection with the statistics of highway accidents is the large number of children who are being killed and injured each year. It emphasizes the fact that the streets today are not isles of safety. They must be regarded as being danger places for all pedestrians and particularly for children.

In the prevention of such accidents and fatalities there is opportunity for much cooperation. The children need to have the importance of keeping out of the streets impressed upon them. They need to be taught to watch out for their own safety. It is not always easy to get the child to retain such lessons unless they are repeated over and over again. Through constant warning and through creating a leadership on the part of certain ones much may be accomplished.

There is a duty that rests upon the parents in this respect. They should be mindful of the necessity of training their children to keep out of the streets, but through systematic efforts in the school room most valuable results can be attained. If pupils are told that they must cross streets at only certain points, that they should not dash out into the traveled way in their play and put themselves in dangerous positions and that they must endeavor to avoid accidents and refrain from tempting danger, they will sooner or later come to remember the warnings and insist upon compliance by others as well as themselves.

Teaching safety to children may not be the easiest thing. It is a big task which one must keep at constantly but it pays in the protection that results to the lives of the future citizens.

A EUROPEAN FEDERATION

Effecting a federation of European countries without due time for considering the advantages and the possible handicaps is not to be expected. Europe has been disposed in certain instances to view conditions through different glasses. It has broken away from old-time policies and seen the desirability of closer relationship and better cooperation. It has participated in certain treaties which are expected to contribute to such an end. It has, in part, participated in steps to insure the peace of the world, and it is not surprising that the idea of a federation should be advanced while there seems to be a disposition to move forward.

The countries of Europe have been inclined in past years to be suspicious of each other, to work and watch for advantages which they were bound to secure at any cost, to disregard the possibility of securing benefits through cooperation. It is thus a tremendous step for them to adopt such a radical change as would be called for, to work together instead of against each other, and to make such concessions as might be called for.

It is next to impossible to talk of such a move without considering the reliance that has been placed upon the war machine in the past. Thus it is not so surprising when the point is raised that disarmament will be necessary before a federation could be accomplished that would amount to anything.

Getting Europe to unite in such an effort can hardly be expected to result immediately following the suggestion. Even though there would be no surrender of control by the respective states, there is so much to overcome in jealousies, aspirations and rivalries that time will be needed to disclose how these can be smoothed out. Through study the way may be revealed.

THE MAN WHO TALKS

Wherever we turn in this old world of ours we shall come into contact with strange contradictions. This whole universe of God is a mystery. Sphinxes have been known to speak and women to be silent, and in some rare cases a certain type of man. In one of the presidential campaigns before the Civil war, it has been stated that some of the uneducated politicians of the stump actually tried to tell the truth. It is said that in Senegambia that one woman is not envious of another when she appears on the street with a new costume made out of an old pocket handkerchief. But for fickleness carried to the nth degree we have only to look at our New England weather. In the Sunday edition of the papers on Aug. 17, a portion was devoted to the havoc caused by the drought. As we turned the page we saw this in bold headlines: "Worcester in Water a Foot Deep"; the most terrific storm ever known in the city! Can you beat that?

There has always been a tendency in the human mind to do stunts, and the value of them has largely been determined by the object in view. If that object is to enhance in any way the betterment of the human family it is worthy of all commendation. If there is nothing higher than the cheap notoriety of the doer in view it is worthy of nothing but contempt. To do something that nobody else has dared to do, or has tried to do but failed is worthy of all praise if the object was to increase the knowledge or betterment of mankind. It is much better to try to do a good thing and fail than to do nothing through fear of failure. The person who is forever saying "I can't" is not worth the salt he eats. The whole world admires Cyrus W. Field for sticking to his job of laying the Atlantic cable when most of the world was saying "It can't be done". By keeping at it until he conquered he won immortality.

If stunts are done just to win notoriety they are apt to be mere asinine performances. It was a very daring act for a men six hundred years ago to attempt to cross the Atlantic in a sailing vessel with an object in view that was nothing less than the discovery of either a new continent or reaching the eastern shores of Asia. The ecclesiastics of the day looked upon it as tempting Divine Providence. But a great woman at that time who shared the throne of Spain believed in the project to that extent that she gave her jewels to further the project. Today the world applauds Commodore Byrd because he dared in the face of a world that was shouting, "It can't be done". But this man has succeeded in virtually putting both the South and the North pole on the map of the world and added the great continent of Antarctic to the world's territory.

In striking contrast to the illustrious deeds related in the above paragraph, there is a certain type of mind that will do the most outrageous things for mere notoriety. To do something that no one else has done no matter how nonsensical the thing is, or to do it a little longer simply to establish a record is sheer imbecility. Think of two men, supposedly rational, trying to see which could eat the most boiled cabbage in a given time! What entertainment it must have been for the half wits who watched them! Think of Simon Stylites, the Syrian, who lived in the open air near Antioch, standing on the top of a column 40 cubits high, and only three in diameter at the top. Here he remained for many years. He came down occasionally to heal the sick. I wonder if some boys are not trying the same stunt today in trying to establish a record for endurance in sitting on the branches of trees. Perhaps it would be cruelty to spank such boys, but it might bring them to their senses.

If the Creator has given to the world a finer valley than that which connects Bennington with Rutland, Vt., He has not yet made it known. From the magnificent Mt. Haystack near Wilmington to the mighty Killington east of Rutland the Green mountains give us every variety of natural beauty. If one wants a good idea of the Garden of Eden he needs to visit the village of Manchester. If Adam should come back to life and see Manchester, he would at once begin to sing "Home Sweet Home." At Bennington history gives a touch of spice to natural scenery. As eyes gaze at the lofty monument one again sees that rugged old Revolutionary soldier, John Stark, leading his raw recruits to combat with the experienced Burgoyne, and gaining a victory that later made him a brigadier general. The southwestern corner of Vermont has a glory all its own. Who can ever forget that backward view towards Bennington when standing on the hill at North Pownal, or the majestic crest of Graylock when nearing Lanesboro? There is one who had not forgotten the day spent in bed following his first climb up Graylock from the town of Adams.

SUNDAY MORNING TALK

What Is True Repentance?

Repentance is not mere sorrow for sin. I have known persons to be so sorry for their sin that they would if they could weep tears of blood, but they continued in the way of the transgressor.

In the fifty-first psalm we find set forth not only the time foundation for repentance but the various steps which must be taken by the sinner who repents and the blessings which flow forth to all who truly repent.

The foundation of it all is God's mercy. Because of the sacrificial death of Jesus Christ, salvation is possible. With this as the foundation the sinner has an opportunity to make a plea, and because of this, our sins are blotted out. To blot out is both a commercial and a chemical term—commercial is that the debt is paid and chemical that the stain is removed.

The work is thorough, for as a result of repentance, the sinner is made every whit whole and every bit clean. The work of repentance is complete in proportion to the measure of repentance. The confession must be as public as the sin, and where wrong has been done, restitution must be made.

Repentance is deep in proportion as we realize that sin is directed not against oneself so much or even against our fellows as against God. We are purged and made clean. We are filled with joy and gladness. God has forgiven our sins. Our impulses are now noble and true. We walk with God and His Holy Spirit leads us.

Stories That Recall Others

Scotch.

One day four businessmen were having lunch together. Afterward they matched pennies to see which one would pay for the cigars. Andy who is Scotch to his finger tips, turned out to be the unfortunate individual.

Strolling up to the attendant at the tobacco counter, he said: "Give each of these gentlemen one of those three-for-a-dime cigars. I-I don't feel like smoking!"

BLOCK ISLAND'S CENTENARY OF STEAM IS MARKED BY PASSING OF FAMED NORWICH VESSEL

This week the steamer Nelseco II made her last trip of the year between Norwich and Block Island, thus closing, at least so far as this city is concerned, the season which marks the centenary of steam navigation between the mainland and the island.

The first occasion on which any steam vessel touched at Block Island is recorded as follows in the Providence Journal of Aug. 28, 1830:

Block Island Discovered

"The steamer Fulton, Captain Tomlinson, made her contemplated excursion to Block Island on Thursday last, leaving here at 5 o'clock in the afternoon, and Newport at 12 o'clock the same night, with upwards of 100 passengers, and arrived off the island about 4 on Friday morning. She anchored on the northeast side of the island, about half a mile from the shore; and her passengers were landed in boats belonging to the steamer and persons on the island, the latter plying constantly between the Fulton and the shore, for a small compensation.

"We believe that not more than two of our number had ever before visited the island, and consequently it was a much greater curiosity to us than the largest cities of the union. So little communication is carried on by its inhabitants with Rhode Island and the main, that they were totally unaware of our intended excursion; and many who never before saw a steamboat, except at a distance passing between Long Island sound and the waters of Narragansett bay, were impressed with the idea that she was a government vessel, despatched to make a survey previous to forming a harbor at the island, which has long been peculiarly desirable, both to the inhabitants and to the seafaring community in general.

"There are no wharves, nor any natural security for their boats, (the only vessels owned on the island) and they have to resort to the expedient of driving piles into the bottom, three or four in a place, to which they moor them, and reach the shore from them by means of skiffs. The Block Island boats are not unfrequently seen in this place, and the neatness of their appearance has often been the subject of remark.

"At a comparatively small expense a harbor can be formed at Block Island, which would be of invaluable service to vessels bound into Narragansett bay, or the Vineyard sound, which with a N. E. wind are compelled to put to sea, or to go into N. London; and the disadvantage attending the latter alternative is so great, that preference is almost invariably given to the former."

Held Record For Length of Service

By all odds the best known steamer to ply between Norwich and Block Island, as well as the steamer longest in service on the route, was the Block Island which was burned off the beach at Dyer's Island, Newport, last Aug. 21, or 100 years almost to a day after the publication of the foregoing item. The vessel was burned by order of the owners, who decided that its age rendered it unfit for further use.

The Block Island was built in 1882 and was immediately put into service between Norwich and the resort after which it was named. The Norwich Bulletin of Monday, July 17, 1882, contained the following description of the vessel:

"The new steamer Block Island arrived in Norwich, Saturday evening, and was yesterday visited by large numbers of sightseers. She left New York at half past seven Friday evening and made the 15 miles to Hart's Island in 56 minutes under 28 pounds of steam. Saturday she ran up to New London in seven hours, reaching there at 11.30, and remaining till evening when she continued her trip up the river, greeted by welcoming salutes from every craft she met, and from every steam whistle along the shore.

"The Block Island is an exceedingly handsome boat, without and within. She is built for speed, for safety and for roominess. Her dimensions are: Length of keel 193 feet; length over all 199 feet; breadth of beam 33 feet; breadth over all 54 feet; depth of hold 11 feet.

"Her hull was built by Robert Palmer of Noank, in the most substantial and workmanlike manner. Her frame is of oak and chestnut, and her planking of 2 1-2 inch yellow pine and white oak.

"Her machinery consists of a tubular boiler 33 feet long and 9 feet in diameter built by the Delamater Iron Works company, an engine built by W. & A. Fletcher, with 46 inch cylinder and 10 foot stroke of piston; a donkey engine by which the steam fire pump is operated, two hand pumps and all other necessary appliances. Her coal bunkers have a capacity of 70 tons.

"On main deck aft there is a ladies' saloon 30 feet long by 24 wide, with ladies' toilet and wash room; ticket office, coat room, lunch counter, and gentlemen's wash room, while forward there is a large freight, baggage and express room. Two flights of stairs lead from main to promenade deck, the main one aft the engine room between the gangways, and the other near the forward bulkhead.

"The main saloon on promenade deck is 104 feet long, arranged with perforated settees, cushioned arm chairs, etc. It is well lighted with side and dome lights. The open deck forward is 43 feet long, the hurricane deck extending forward on the bulkhead some 15 feet.

"Aft of the saloon the outside space is 150 feet long, this part being covered over with hurricane deck. This, as also the forward part, will be supplied plentifully with slatted settees, camp chairs, stools, etc.

Had Nine Private Rooms

"On this deck there are nine rooms to be used as parlors or sitting rooms, for private parties. It is also supplied with wash and toilet rooms for both ladies and gentlemen as well as water tanks, fire hose, etc.

"In the lower hold a large galvanized iron water tank with a capacity of 1,200 gallons has been erected. She is well fitted and supplied with life preservers, cork jackets, fire hose, fire buckets, water barrels, etc., and has four life boats and two life rafts. She is licensed to carry 1,200 passengers, but it is asserted that nearly twice that number could be accommodated.

"All those who have seen her since the completion of her hull have admitted her strength and safety. The work she did on her first trip from New York is sufficient answer to whatever adverse rumors have been circulated regarding her speed.

"She will begin her regular trips to Block Island this morning. Messrs. Ockford and Jerome of Osprey beach have placed their justly famous band at the disposal of the managers for the opening of the season. The band will come to the city this morning on the early train, give a concert on board before the boat leaves her wharf, and accompany her as far as the beach.

"The time table, etc., will be found in our advertising columns."

First Trip July 17, 1882

The first trip made by the steamer was thus noted in The Bulletin of July 18, 1882:

"The steamer Block Island made her first trip from Norwich to Block Island yesterday, making satisfactory time. As she steamed out from the harbor in the morning gaily decorated with flags, a salute was fired in her honor and the steam whistles of the riverside manufactories, locomotives and steam river craft greeted her on every hand.

"She has a stately appearance, and moves in such a business-like way that she makes a good impression upon the people, and greatly increases the business aspects of the river. The interest taken in the steamer is intense, as was illustrated by the large crowd of people that assembled at the wharf to see her come in last night. No doubt she will enjoy a liberal patronage from the public."

In those early days the steamer made way-station stops at Comstock's (Montville), New London, Pequot House, Osprey beach, Stonington and Watch Hill. The fare to New London was 25 cents, round trip 50 cents; to Block Island $1, round trip $1.25. The boat was not operated on Sundays.

Gilbert F. Jackson was her first captain. From 1882 till the time of her superannuation the steamer was operated on no other route than the one between Norwich and Block Island.

Was Retired In 1917

On Feb. 5, 1917, the Bulletin published an announcement by Vice President Gardner of the New England Navigation company that the Block Island would be withdrawn from service and the run between Norwich and the island abandoned. Mr. Gardner was quoted as saying that the service had never been a moneymaker.

On March 26, 1917, The Bulletin said that the old vessel would be used to provide quarters for strike breakers during the trouble with the New London freight-handlers. Since that time the steamer has been used as a boarding house and diner for the roustabouts of the New England Navigation company at Newport, R. I.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The Plain Facts About Norwich

Mr. Editor: The plain facts about Norwich are that Norwich is slipping badly. Her downward trend in industrial support fell below par some time ago when state and national conditions were yet nearly normal but even they also have taken a downward movement. Therefore, for us to look hopefully forward to early improvement in external business conditions and their usual concommitant benefits to us, is surely a vain optimism. The country at large is seriously depressed and even climatic conditions have interfered with any expectation of early recovery. We have little resource of our own left to us and are rapidly losing that, also the winter is coming on. We all know the principle, that "An ounce of preventative is worth a pound of cure." How about using it? Why wait until deplorable conditions come upon us with their burden of misery and suffering to our unemployed citizens and their families. Let us start our preventative measures now, lest we find ourselves too late to fend off this slowly approaching period of distress.

Delay now may find us unprepared and without practical measure or plans for their relief, which we are under every humanitarian obligation to extend. Check up the following list of indications and see why we have grounds for serious thought:

When large industrial interests of the country are withdrawing their branches and concentrating.

When usually stable securities are depreciating.

When merchants find it hard to borrow "tide-over" money and collect on their credit accounts.

When mills are shutting down.

When established local industries are leaving us rapidly.

When the ranks of unemployed are increasing daily.

When, for many, the necessities of life are becoming more and more difficult to obtain.

When families and our young men are leaving in the forlorn hope of betterment elsewhere.

When our organizations for industrial uplift are unable to help us hold even such industries as we have had, and

When our city also is deep in debt.

It is high time we should up and do something without delay to check this downward movement and bring back a real stabilization of our affairs, before business failures, bankruptcy, foreclosing mortgages, ruinous calling of notes and worse sets in. The worst may not happen but on the other hand, it can happen which fact should be plenty near enough to danger to wake up intelligent men to action. We have no time to waste. We cannot pass our obligations to others. We are all in it. We must have work for our unemployed, business for our merchants, our builders, our professional men, and every codependant constituent of our city. We must in this stress, aim high and go to it quickly. There is no one to do it for us, we must do it ourselves. How can it be done? There is one way and only one.

We can create our own industry for our own support, large enough and active enough to cover all that we require and more. We can incorporate and organize a group of energetic men with vision, trained intelligence and managerial experience. Let them select the best device to fill the greatest demand at the largest profit.

Get behind them in every way possible and push. They will do the rest. We will quickly have an industry that can not only check our depression but build us up to a higher place than that from which we have fallen. We are farther ahead in the above matter than appears on the surface due to somebody's foresight, for the Triumvirate Super-Safety Aircraft Inc., has that kind of management men. The device is the wonderful Air Master whose market is instant and unlimited.

Furthermore, it is unaffected by business depression and its production profits are likely to be enormous.

It is years ahead of other types in every desirable characteristic and when the large standard ship receives its government commission test, we confidently expect it to give evidence of value sufficient to warant an increase of at least 20 to 1 on every dollar invested now.

If each man does his little bit now, we can commence building by October 1st of this year.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

All The World Is Changed

'Tis strange how just a simple touch
The future can affect so much.
—Mother West Wind.

Impy was still stiff and sore, as early the next morning he left his bed and made his way to the hidden entrance of his home. The light of early morning was making all the Great World glad. However, it didn't make Impy glad. He, who used to think the Great World was such a bright and beautiful place, had decided that the Great World was a dull and gloomy place and that for him there was no happiness in it.

"I don't care what happens," grumbled Impy. "No, sir, I don't care what happens."

Just then Sammy Jay spied him. Sammy saw at once that something had happened to Impy. He flew down to a fence-post and looked Impy over. "My, my, my!" said Sammy. "What under the sun has happened to you?"

"It's none of your business," replied Impy grumpily.

Instead of being provoked, Sammy Jay simply chuckled. "True enough, true enough," said he. "It isn't any of my business. Did you win the fight?"

Impy looked up quickly. "How did you know I had been in a fight?" he asked before he thought.

Sammy chuckled again. "I didn't," said he, "but I do now. If you won the fight, I'm sorry for the other fellow. My, my, what a looking coat! By the way, who is that pretty little Chipmunk that I saw over here yesterday? You were nowhere about."

Such a changed look as come over Impy's face. "I wasn't at home," said he, "so I cannot tell you. Was this other Chipmunk smaller or bigger than I?"

Sammy's eyes twinkled. He cocked his head on one side, as if he were measuring Impy with his eyes. "W-e-ll," said he slowly. "I should say that she was smaller. Yes, sir, she was considerably smaller."

Impy's eyes brightened. "Was she the prettiest Chipmunk you ever saw?" he demanded.

Sammy chuckled right out at that. "That I couldn't say," he replied. "There was another Chipmunk, though, who seemed to feel about her the same as you do."

If you could have seen Impy's face then! All the brightness went out of it very suddenly. "Were-were were they together?" he stammered.

"No," replied Sammy. "She seemed to be trying to hide from him."

Once more Impy's face brightened. "Did he find her?" he asked eagerly.

"I didn't wait to find out," replied Sammy. "Well, I must be going along." With this, Sammy spread his blue wings and flew away.

Just the faintest sound of a moving leaf—a dry leaf that had been stepped on—caught Impy's ears. He turned hastily. At first he saw nothing. Then he discovered a pair of soft bright eyes watching him from under the fern. There was only one person in all the Great World with a pair of eyes like those. Impy forgot that he was sore and lame and unhappy. He forgot that there might be a big, strong stranger. He took a few hasty steps forward. The bright soft eyes disappeared. It was only for an instant, however, and they were back again. Slowly—oh, so slowly—Impy approached. Would little Miss Frisky run away as she always had? He could almost touch her now. He reached out until his nose did actually touch her nose. With that touch the whole world was changed. Yes, sir, the whole world was changed.

YOUR HEALTH

Personal Health

By Hubert A. Royster, Raleigh, N. C.
(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

Much is being said and done for the promotion of the public health, and it is without question one of the vital things of this age. In the work of those engaged in preventing disease and making the world a more healthful place in which to live this generation will record its greatest achievement. But (and this is an addition rather than an antithesis) we must go beyond statistics of improvement if the campaign is to be really successful. Health problems cannot be thoroughly settled in the herd. In other words, we must go after the individual, and our task will be one of personal health as the basis of sound public health. By this we do not say that opportunities of reaching people collectively should be neglected, rather do we say that our appeal should encourage the individual to set a good health example and so leaven the lump.

The query, "Am I my brother's keeper?" has been answered in the affirmative by all those who are altruistically concerned in health. However, we also are our own keepers. If we are healthy persons, we are of value to the community as workers and we relieve it of a burden; if we are sick, temporarily or permanently, we become drags in proportion to our disabilities.

Such facts are well understood. How necessary, then, that each individual should keep himself at all times in the best possible condition! This is the doctrine of the Gorgas Memorial and the doctrine we should all preach. Herbert Spencer gave out the text years ago: "Perhaps nothing will so much hasten the time when body and mind will both be adequately cared for as the diffusion of the belief that the preservation of health is a duty. Few seem conscious that there is such a thing as physical morality."

There are, of course, numbers of people who are not responsible for their state of health. Many are handicapped at the start; others are not to blame for conditions that arise afterward through no fault of their own. Some are born sick, some achieve sickness, and some have sickness thrust upon them. Everyone is expected to do his best with what he has. The way to health is through right living.

The whole affair is a matter of teaching and preaching, and as in all true education, it is the individual with which the medical profession is concerned primarily. In the last analysis, the average man, the most uninformed man is the one to be taught how to live. Laws are good and we must have them; but there are some things that cannot be legislated into people.

So, do not shrug your shoulders when you hear "Periodic Health Examination" preached over and over again. Join the throng and have your examination today. Personal health is your prize possession—do what you can to keep it.

A Washington Bystander

Associated Press Staff Writer
By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13—Nothing in recent political history has given Washington's large corps of political on-lookers so much ironical amusement as the spectacle of a senate investigating committee being itself investigated by a lot of private detectives.

Representative Ruth McCormick conferred a boon upon the Washingtoneers when she thought up and put in motion that little off-shoot of the great old game of politics. It is new and anything new in politics is a boon to everybody.

Visitors

Not that senators have not been investigated without benefit of senate resolution before now. Look at all the row Kenneth McKellar of Tennessee kicked up toward the close of the last session of congress.

His office files in the stately marble palace known as the senate office building were twice turned topsy-turvy overnight by unauthorized intruders. Who did it or why never was discovered.

Senator Hi. Johnson of California also had office visitations in the dark o' the moon to report. Again nothing ever came of it. Johnson got a lot of amusement out of the incident and McKellar made the flat public offer to open all his files and what-not for inspection provided only that the inspectors would agree to put 'em back in order and not leave 'em kicking about his office floor.

The McCormick-organized espionage campaign seemed devised as a sort of counter irritant to the Nye committee's look-see into her primary and election expenditures.

Just exactly what it was expected to develop about either the senate committee's ways or the private affairs of Gerald Nye and his committee colleagues that might help Mrs. McCormick either to election or to an actual senate seat is a little difficult to figure out.

Front Pages

One thing the espionage idea did definitely do. It put Senator Nye's campaign expenditures investigation activities on the front pages of the press on a national scale. Without former Senator James Reed of Missouri in campaign expenditure matters, some Washington folks rather doubted from the first that the Nye committee would make such a terrific lot of newspaper "copy."

Reed was an important factor in previous senatorial campaign cost inquiries that did bear political fruit. One of those helped puncture the Lowden-for-president boom in 1920.

So it is conceivable that Senator Nye might, after all, feel that he owes Mrs. McCormick a debt of gratitude for publicity is what makes the political wheels go 'round.

"Jim Ham" Lewis, Mrs. McCormick's democratic rival, used to say to the reporters: "I don't care what you write about me; but write something."

Mrs. Arnold Stevens, an invalid, of Brockton, Mass., has completed work on a quilt made of 20,736 pieces, each cut the size of a postage stamp. There are scarcely two squares alike in the entire coverlet, which was made entirely by hand. Mrs. Arnold used 100 spools of thread in the quilt. She set herself this task a few years ago, and has worked at it intermittently. In addition to this and to other sewing she has made in this time ten other quilts of slightly larger pieces.

A HISTORY OF CONNECTICUT INDUSTRY

Released by Manufacturers Association of Connecticut

The Goss and De Leeuw Machine Co. New Britain.

Organized December 1922, the Goss & De Leeuw Machine company, New Britain, entered the machine tool business for the purpose of developing and marketing what was then required, an improved and modern chucking machine.

Under the direction of Stanley T. Goss, president, former vice president of New Britain Machine company, and A. L. De Leeuw, formerly of Cincinnati Milling Machine company and until a few years ago conducting a consulting engineering business in New York city, there was designed and perfected a tool-revolving type, multiple spindle automatic chucking machine, incorporating many invaluable features which resulted in accuracy and high production, and simplicity in operation.

The first year and one half was devoted entirely to experimental work—actual production commencing during 1924.

Meeting with instant response in the market requiring this type of equipment a constant growth has resulted, and at this time the company manufactures a complete line of both tool-revolving and work-revolving types—ranging in all sizes for machining parts requiring automatic machining.

The plant, which performs assembly operations only, is situated near the Berlin depot, Berlin, on the main line of the N. Y., N. H., & H. R. R. During the past few years it has been necessary to build two modernly equipped additions to provide for increased production.

The machines manufactured are non-dependent on any one market but are largely used in the plumbing supply, automotive, house appliance and electrical fields.

The present officers are: Stanley T. Goss, president and treasurer; A. L. De Leeuw, vice president; John S. Black, secretary; A. J. Crozier, assistant treasurer.

FUNERALS

Miss Mary E. Rogers

Relatives and friends from New York, Providence and other cities joined the local mourners at the funeral of Miss Mary E. Rogers, which was held Friday morning at 8:30 o'clock from the family home, 40 School street. At 9 o'clock, in St. Patrick's church, the high mass of requiem was sung by Rev. James E. Dargan. The Gregorian mass was given by Mrs. Bernard C. Coyle, Roderick F. Sullivan and the organist, Henry J. LaFontaine. De Profundis was sung as a duet by Mr. Sullivan and Mr. LaFontaine and Libera Me Domine was sung in the same manner. After the gospel, read by Rev. Fr. Dargan, the responsive prayers and the final absolution, Mr. Sullivan sang "Jesus, Lover of My Soul."

Burial was in the family plot in St. Mary's cemetery, where, in the absence of the rector, Rt. Rev. Msgr. M. H. May at the annual pastors' retreat, the committal prayers were read by Father Dargan. The bearers were William Enright, of New York; J. Edward Driscoll, Thomas M. Shields, Roderick F. Sullivan, William H. Shields, Jr., and John Murphy, of Norwich. The exceptionally beautiful flowers included choice remembrances from representatives of the firm of Edward Chappell & Co., with which firm Miss Rogers' father, the late Andrew Rogers, was for years a valued employe, from the Steiner club, as well as from many individual friends.

The funeral arrangements were in charge of J. J. Lyons & Co.

Drought Reduces Cattle on Feed

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. —(AP)— Drought damage to crops has reduced the number of cattle on feed in Illinois to 10 per cent below what it was a year ago, according to the state department of agriculture.

Oats, wheat, barley and rye are recommended as winter pastures to supplement livestock feed cut short by drought.

BANQUET MAKES SOCIAL FEATURE FOR N. E. EXECUTIVES' GATHERING

Nearly 100 members of the New England Association of Commercial Executives are in Norwich for their annual two-day fall convention. The programme opened Friday with a luncheon at the Norwich Inn, the convention headquarters, and other features of the day were a trip to the submarine base at Groton and a banquet at the inn in the evening. The luncheon took place at 1 o'clock and was followed by a brief business meeting and about 3 o'clock the delegates and wives were guests of the Norwich chamber of commerce on an inspection trip to the submarine base.

The banquet was held shortly after 7 o'clock in the large dining hall at the inn and the menu was as follows:

Fresh Fruit Cocktail
Ripe Olives Hearts of Celery
Tomato Bouillon Whipped Cream
Broiled Lake Trout Saratoga Potatoes
Roast Spring Chicken
Rose Potato New Asparagus
Spring Salad Fancy Ice Cream
Assorted Cakes Coffee

During the menu an orchestra, under the leadership of Prof. Drago of the Norwich Symphony orchestra, rendered a splendid concert programme.

Joseph Lucier, secretary of the New England council, was the energetic song leader and many of the old-time favorites and popular numbers were spiritedly sung by the assemblage. George Hines, secretary of the Haverhill, Mass., chamber of commerce, presided at the piano.

Roscoe H. Goddard, president of the New England council, called the gathering to order and in his brief remarks introduced William Russell and Miss Norma McKellops, representatives of the United States chamber of commerce, of the New York office, who were present as guests. He then turned the meeting over to Frank R. Murdy, president of the Norwich chamber of commerce, who welcomed the visitors to Norwich. "I extend to you greetings and best wishes of our organization," said President Murdy. "It is certainly an honor to have you here as guests." Mr. Murdy then introduced the toastmaster, Arthur M. Brown, state's attorney of New London county, who was greeted with a hearty burst of applause. Mr. Brown, in brief remarks, extended a hearty welcome to the executives. "We are proud to have you in our beautiful city of Norwich," he said. He then announced that Henry J. LaFontaine, Norwich's popular vocalist, would entertain with a number. Mr. LaFontaine sang the Kashmiri Love Song (Finden) and as encores gave Water Boy, (Robinson) and Louise, from Maurice Chevalier's show.

Mayor Robbins Gives Greeting

In introducing the opening speaker of the evening, Mr. Brown said it was a distinct honor for him to present Mayor Lee Roy Robbins. Mayor Robbins was greeted with loud and hearty applause. Mayor Robbins entertained with a number of humorous stories, which provoked much laughter and applause. Then, speaking of the gatherings held periodically by the New England executives, he said: "I know you find these meetings of great value. You get together and exchange ideas and views," he continued. "I extend you a most hearty welcome to this city," said the mayor. "I hope that this convention will be successful and that you will enjoy your visit so much that you will want to come back."

Called on by the toastmaster, President Murdy of the local chamber was heard in a finely rendered vocal number, Sweet Mystery of Life (Herbert), accompanied on the piano by Mr. LaFontaine. As an encore Mr. Murdy and Mr. LaFontaine sang The Red Mill.

Address by Franklin Babb

J. Franklin Babb of Haverhill, Mass., representing the New England council, was introduced as the speaker of the evening by the toastmaster. In part Mr. Babb said:

You are the right hand of the New England council. I suggest that you New England executives follow the example of Brattleboro, Vt., in arranging window exhibits of the products of your cities. The New England Council is really a New England chamber of commerce. Only as you prosper can the New England Council hope to prosper.

We are co-operating across the world, so that we can almost hear the other fellow breathe. Co-operation and co-ordination are the keynote of the New England council. Human wastage will be stopped when men know each other too well to cut each others throats. The New England Council co-operates in the broadest sense of the word.

The speaker told of the organization of the New England Council, five years ago at Poland Springs, Maine, and described the aims and ideals of the council. I want you to know, he said, that we are coming to advantage you just as much as we expect you to advantage us.

The New England Council has nothing to do with creed. It accepts its members regardless of creed or politics. I hear a lot about the young people of today going to the dogs. I don't believe they are any worse now than they were years ago. If they can do any more petting in automobiles than they did in the old buggy, they are going some.

The New England Council goes out, not with a club, but with creative suggestions, Mr. Babb said. He told of what the council has done for agriculture in New England and spoke of the recreational industry which he said left in New England last year, $500,000,000 in cash.

New England hasn't all there is, but none have any better, he said. You are the shareholders in New England. We want men, fighters in New England, who will do all they can to appreciate their shares, not depreciate them.

Mr. Babb's address brought the banquet proper to a close and the remainder of the evening was devoted to dancing, but just before adjournment was taken Mr. Brown introduced Miss Mary Bundy, acting secretary of the Norwich chamber of commerce, who briefly addressed the gathering.

Among those present were two former secretaries of the local chamber, Walter H. Pilcher of Worcester and John J. O'Rourke, the latter now secretary of the Willimantic chamber of commerce.

Saturday Programme

The programme today (Saturday) will open with a breakfast at 8:30 o'clock at the inn, after which there will be a conference on Industrial Development, led by W. Gerald Holmes of Augusta, Me., industrial engineer of the New England Public Service Co. There will be a question box in connection with this conference and a brief business session at noon will bring the convention to a close.

Seated at the speakers' table were Miss Bundy, the acting secretary, and two directors of the chamber, John R. Tarrant and W. H. Stebbins.

FOURTEEN IN BABY SHOW AT THE PACHAUG FAIR

FIVE CONTESTS DEVELOP IN WINDHAM CAUCUS

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Sept. 12 — The Windham republicans, at an enthusiastic and largely attended caucus held tonight, named Harold C. Lincoln town clerk and treasurer and Albert L. French first selectman as candidates to lead the ticket in the town elections Oct. 6. The complete ticket selected follows: Town clerk and treasurer, Harold C. Lincoln; first selectman, Albert L. French; second selectman, Guy S. Richmond, of Windham Center; assessors, George E. Gifford incumbent and A. L. Gelinas; collector of taxes, Gerard E. Loiselle; registrar, A. Linn Weatherhead, incumbent; board of relief, C. Arthur Keeney, of Windham and John H. Wilcox; auditor, Charles H. Dondero, incumbent; agent of town deposit fund, George H. Spencer, incumbent; constables, Wilbur G. Stevens, North Windham; Ralph Lussier, Fred L. Lewis, South Windham; John F. Thompson, Windham Center; school committee, for four years, Dr. Frank E. Guild, of Windham Center. Raymond A. Parker and Leslie F. Hartson of North Windham; school committee, for two years, to fill vacancy, Stanley J. Sumner.

Five contests developed during the course of the caucus, practically all ending in decisive majorities with the winning candidate receiving the unanimous endorsement of the loser. For first assessor Attorney Harry S. Gaucher named George E. Gifford and W. P. Jordan named O. L. Willard. The vote stood 315 for Mr. Gifford and 54 for Willard. Dr. George E. Wilcox named A. L. Gelinas for second assessor and he was unanimously selected as were also the board of relief candidates.

For first selectman Attorney John H. King named Ernest P. Chesbro, Sr., who has served six terms in the past in that office; Oliver L. Willard named Albert L. French. Out of 464 ballots cast, Mr. French received 261 and Mr. Chesbro 201. For second selectman Walter Abbe named James M. Larkham of South Windham while J. Raymond Smith placed in nomination Guy S. Richmond of Windham Center, Larkham receiving 155 and Richmond 299. There was no contest for agent of the town deposit fund or auditor, the nomination of Gerard E. Loiselle for tax collector, named by City Clerk Arthur L. Clark also being unanimous.

For fourth constable there was a contest between John F. Thompson of Windham Center and Joseph Peck, with the former winning.

The contest of main interest was for the leading position of town clerk and treasurer. Dr. George E. Wilcox presented the name of John J. O'Rourke, secretary of the chamber of commerce. Wilbur G. Stevens named Robert G. Remington and Maurice S. Leonard presented the name of Harold C. Lincoln. The vote showed 484 ballots cast of which Mr. O'Rourke received 12, Mr. Remington 77 and Lincoln 395. Dr. Wilcox immediately moved for the unanimous endorsement of Mr. Lincoln. There were no contests for registrar or for town school committee.

Mayor Walter R. King was moderator and J. Raymond Smith clerk of the caucus.

The democrats hold their caucus next Monday night, when it is expected that they will select the incumbents, Frank P. Fenton, town clerk and treasurer and William A. Buck, first selectman, to lead their candidates.

The tellers who officiated during the caucus were Herbert D. Pollard, Charles Tryon, Fred L. Avery, Henry Spencer, Theodore A. Marrotte and Raymond A. Parker.

NORTH STONINGTON GIRL FASHION SHOW WINNER

(Special to The Bulletin)

NORTH STONINGTON, Sept. 12.—One of North Stonington's youngest citizens, Miss Vivi Bergius, has recently brought honor to the town through her efforts in her home and in school, as well as in the 4-H club, the field of Miss Bergius' latest achievement.

At the county fashion revue held in Franklin Miss Bergius won first place, which entitled her to compete in the state fashion revue held in Durham, Aug. 29, where she was again the winner. This entitles her to compete in the national revue to be held in Chicago in December.

High hopes are held that Miss Bergius will again win first place and go on to Paris

MISS VIVI BERGIUS

Miss Bergius was born in Sweden some 18 years ago. She has spent much of her life on the farm, where she has always proven herself most capable and useful.

She was graduated from Wheeler high school in June, at which time she was presented with two loving cups, one for showing the best school spirit, and the other for prize speaking.

Miss Bergius acquitted herself with great credit in the operetta, Robin Hood, given by Wheeler school last June, in which she took a leading part.

She entered Lawrence-Memorial hospital in New London to train for the nursing profession early in September. The hospital will grant her a week's leave of absence for her Chicago trip later in the year, feeling that a young woman of such marked ability is entitled to this consideration.

Miss Bergius' costume worn at the fashion revues was designed and made completely by herself, an ensemble of tan and blue, with matching accessories.

She is a member of the 4-H club known as "The Luckies," of North Stonington, under the leadership of Mrs. Clifford B. Thompson, whose energy and enthusiasm places this among the finest of many fine clubs in the state.

GAVE TRAVEL TALK FOR BAPTIST WOMEN'S MEETING

The Woman's league of the Central Baptist church held its first meeting of the season Friday evening in the women's room at the church, having an attendance of over 60. Mrs. Henry A. Jatkowske, the president, called the meeting to order and the devotional services were conducted by Mrs. David A. Pitt.

Mrs. S. B. Palmer, who was in charge of the program, presented Miss Marion Young as the speaker, who gave an intensely interesting talk on a European trip this summer in which she visited Germany, Austria, Italy, France and England, as well as spending four weeks in Russia, traveling by automobile with a party of friends.

The league voted to invite the women of neighboring churches to the October meeting and other plans were made for the season.

Ice cream and cookies were served during the social hour.

Grass Fire Call.

Squad A of the fire department used pump cans to put out a grass fire about 12.25 p. m. Friday on the city landing at Rose alley, which was on land owned by the city and the railroad.

Sparks from a locomotive ignited the grass.

FIVE GRANTED DIVORCES BY JUDGE AVERY

Four women and one man were granted divorces by Judge Christopher L. Avery at the opening short calendar session of the fall term of the superior court in New London Friday.

Mrs. Helen Babayan of New London was given her freedom from John Babayan of Groton, formerly of New London, on grounds of desertion. They were married June 16, 1917.

Mrs. Barbara Vine Bryant of 216 Huntington street, New London, was divorced from Daniel Emmett Bryant of the U. S. S. Camden on grounds of adultery. They were married Aug 18, 1928. The plaintiff was also given permission to change her name to Barbara Clark Hutchins.

Mrs. Olga Kononkik of Groton was given a decree from Makurus Kononkik of Groton on grounds of cruelty. They were married May 14, 1910. The plaintiff was also given the custody of one minor child.

George Arthur Tate of Groton was given his freedom from Mary Thomson Tate of Buckinghamshire, Eng. on grounds of desertion. They were married Jan. 1, 1921, in England.

Julia Markowski of Norwich was given a divorce from Joseph F. Markowski of Meriden on grounds of desertion. She also was given the custody of one minor child and alimony of $8 a week. They were married May 22, 1922.

Greeneville Congregational church. Sunday morning, the Sunday school service will be held at 9.30; preaching service at 10.30, subject, "The Discovery of Christ." The communion service will follow the sermon. Rev. Charles H. Ricketts pastor, will officiate.

FIGHTING BLISTER RUST IN TOWN OF HAMPTON

During the past month work has been carried on in the town of Hampton on white pine blister rust. This is a serious disease of white pine trees and has an alternate host known as ribes which are necessary for the spread of the disease as it cannot spread from one pine tree to another. Ribes embrace all wild and cultivated gooseberries and currants, F. C. or spice or clove-bush.

The infected bushes have to be pulled up and destroyed. Several thousand infected bushes have been pulled, mainly on the land of Mr. Goodwin, who is the principal pine owner in the town.

Other owners have co-operated in eradication of this disease by allowing their ribes to be pulled where they are within infecting distance, although in several instances infection was not present. One outstanding case of this kind was the right to pull red currant bushes belonging to Mrs. Frederick W. Davis whose currants were not infected although they were in the infecting zone. These currants have been on the land for more than 20 years, giving yearly a bountiful supply of fruit, but for the general good Mrs. Davis is willing to sacrifice them.

JOCKEY ADAMS RIDES HIS NINTH STRAIGHT WINNER

BALTIMORE, Sept. 12.—(AP)—Albert Adams, 17-year-old Baltimore jockey, established what is believed to be an all time world record today for riding consecutive winners when he brought J. W. Bean's Wandering Jim home winner in the first race at the half-mile track meeting at Marlboro. His victory was the ninth in a row.

Adams' record exceeds by one the old mark set on April 3 and 4, 1906, at Benning, Washington, by Walter Miller, and tied on October 16 and 17 by Ivan Parke.

A notable angle of Adams' record is that he made the record with the same horse with which he won the initial race yesterday.

The boy rode six winners yesterday and won the last two races Wednesday.

SARAZEN AND ARMOUR BATTLE FOR P. G. A. CHAMPIONSHIP TODAY

FLUSHING, N. Y., Sept. 12.—(AP)—Gene Sarazen and Tommy Armour, two seasoned golf professionals who oddly enough never have met in match play competition, will go out tomorrow to decide possession of the Professional Golfers association championship.

From a field of 63 crack pros starting the championship play Monday only the stocky, dark American of Italian parentage and the prematurely gray Scot are left.

Sarazen advanced to the final round by defeating Joe Kirkwood, who thrills golf galleries by sensational trick shots, five up and four to play. Armour had a sterner struggle. He had to go the full 36 holes to eliminate Charley Lacey, young British pro of the Pine Valley club, Clementon, N. J., one up.

The Scot's putting touch failed him at the last minute and his young opponent took a new lease on life when he seemed to be definitely out of it. Tommy used up three puts at the 34th and three more at the 35th and Lacey was only one down with one to play when Armour had been within a short putt of winning three and two.

Sarazen played better than par golf all day and although Kirkwood struggled gamely through the first 22 holes to keep the match level, he slumped at the close. Sarazen, fighting to shake off the jinx supposed to attach to a pro winning a championship on his own course, was three under even fours and a shot under par for his day's play.

Sarazen has twice won the P. G. A. championship, first in 1922, when he was also open champion, and again in 1923. He first captured the title at Oakmont when he defeated Emmett French, four up and three to play, and repeated at Pelham at the expense of Walter Hagen in a great 38-hole match. Armour won the open championship in 1927 and now holds the Canadian open title.

Armour and Lacey gave indications early in the day that their match would be close. They were even at nine holes and although Lacey was up only once, when he won the 13th hole with a birdie three, he kept in striking distance, coming back every time he was in danger of being wiped out. Armour had a two-hole advantage at the luncheon intermission and increased it to four at the first two holes in the afternoon.

Lacey recovered some of the lost ground with birdies at the third and fifth holes and was still two down at the three-quarter marker. He drew within a hole of his opponent by winning the 28th when Armour was stymied, but knocked Tommy's ball in for a birdie three at the 29th when he was the stymie victim.

The British youngster won the 31st and seemed about to stage a real come-back, but the Scot holed a birdie two at the 209 yard 32nd. Lacey wasted two shots in a trap at the 33rd and when Armour had a four-foot putt for a half in fives at the 34th the match seemed to be over. Tommy missed, however, and instead of winning three and two, was dormie two. Tommy had some more bad shots in his putter and Lacey won the 35th when the match seemed to be over. Tommy missed, however, and instead of winning three and two, was dormie two. Tommy had some more bad shots in his putter and Lacey won the 35th with a five to a six.

This brought the match to the home hole. Lacey had the longer tee shot but he failed to get inside Armour's pitch to the green and his only chance was to sink a 40-foot putt. He was not equal to this Herculean assignment. An easy half for Tommy ended it for he took no chances on three putting this vital green, sending his ball to within inches of the cup.

CUBS LAUNCH HEAVY ATTACK TO DOWN PHILS

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 12.—(AP)—With a whistling barrage of base blows, the Chicago Cubs held their lead in the National league today, by smothering the Phillies 17 to 4. The Cubs drove Willoughby to cover early in the fourth frame and continued the bombardment at the expense of Phillips, who relieved him.

Hack Wilson led the assault with five hits, which included his forty-ninth homer and two doubles. English had four hits and Cuyler three. Chuck Klein shattered the National league mark for two-baggers when he unleashed his fifty-third in the third inning.

Besides Wilson's homer over the right field wall in the second inning, scoring two ahead of him, there was a home run from Hartnett's bat in the ninth which tallied Kelly, who had doubled ahead of Galby. For the Phils, Thompson and Hurler Phillips drove the ball from the park.

DARTMOUTH PRACTICES IN SHORTS AND JERSEYS

HANOVER, N. H., Sept. 12.—(AP)—Under a broiling sun that saw heavy moleskins doffed for shorts and jerseys, some 80 aspirants for the Dartmouth football team went through signal drill here today. Seven elevens, using the huddle system, introduced last year, went through the various modes of attack.

At present, the first team lineup presents one of the heaviest combinations to ever wear the Green.

The line averages 190 pounds, while the backfield averages 182.

ROBINS REGISTER 8TH STRAIGHT IN BEATING REDS

BROOKLYN, Sept. 12.—(AP)—The Robins continued their pursuit of the National league pennant today by defeating the Cincinnati Reds, 7 to 3, in the first game of the series. It was Brooklyn's eighth straight victory and marked the Robins' longest winning streak of the season. For the Reds it marked the eighth straight defeat.

The victory enabled the Robins to hold their place in the torrid National league race a half game behind the Chicago Cubs and a point behind the St. Louis Cardinals as all three leaders won today's games.

Ras Moss pitched the complete nine innings and was effective except in the sixth frame when the Reds reached him for four singles and three runs. He yielded only eight hits.

Ray Kolp, Cincinnati starting pitcher, was the victim of all the Brooklyn scoring. The Robins bunched hits for one run in the first and another in the second. In the third frame, a home run by Al Lopez on a long drive which bounded into the left field bleachers, brought in three more runs and gave the Robins a safe lead. Another homer, Glenn Wright's 21st of the season, scored the last two Robin runs in the fifth frame. Ken Ash took over the mound duty for the Reds in the sixth and shut out the Robins for the last three frames.

BRAVES NOSE OUT PIRATES IN TENTH

BOSTON, Sept. 12.—(AP)—The Boston Braves came from behind to defeat Pittsburgh 5 to 4, in ten innings here today. With two out in the tenth, Chatham and Spohrer hit doubles to bring in the winning run. Chatham found Larry French, Pirate left hander, easy during the afternoon and collected two doubles and a triple off him. The complete standing for the season between the teams gives the Pirates a 12 to 10 edge over the Tribesmen. Score:

IDEALS PLAY H. N. S. CLUB SUNDAY

Sunday afternoon the baseball attraction at the J. B. Martin diamond will be the game between Tony Bernard's Ideals and the Holy Name society of Jewett City. This game promises to be one of unusual interest as the Holy Name team will have Vachon in the box and this will be his first appearance on a local diamond. Vachon was the sensation of the Jewett City Twilight league during the past season, when he hung up an enviable record.

The Holy Name society holds wins over the leading teams in the eastern part of the state but will be greatly strengthened for the game on Sunday. To combat this formidable team from Jewett City, Manager Bernard will have his regular Ideal lineup with Bob Shaw doing the hurling. The Ideals since the close of the City league have been playing fast ball and have taken some of the fast clubs of the eastern part of the state into camp. First they proved their superiority over the Thermos club and then took on the fast Hartford Red Sox and trimmed them, a feat which stamps the Ideals as a real club.

Fans who attend Sunday's game will see some good baseball, as the Holy Name team, which is composed of young players, is a snappy aggregation that is well coached.

The local man who asked if "babb" was short for "babbling" should be reprimanded by the chamber of commerce, if you know what I mean.

We asked a local man yesterday if he was a candidate for a certain office at the coming election. His answer was "Why I haven't given it the slightest thought." Now you tell one.

Thanks, Margy, it's nice to be missed sometimes. You know if you eat too much ice cream you get tired of it.

I'm sorry that you missed your "eye-opener," Lester. We'll try to do better in the future but there are times when we'd like to have an "eye-opener" ourselves.

Two local men were talking about the yacht race today and planning on attending. One says to the other, "What are you going to take?" Says the other, "Two quarts and an overcoat." "Why the overcoat?" asks the first. "Because its got large pockets", replies the second. Looks like they might see a squadron race.

There is a shortage of red electric lamps in the city apparently. One of the beautiful beacons on the square has been in darkness for three nights and an old red lantern has been tied to the beacon as a substitute.

No, Mrs. M——, that certainly was not the reason. It was because of lack of space as I hope James explained to you.

CARDS DEAL TELLING BLOW TO THE GIANTS

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—(AP)—The St. Louis Cardinals administered a crushing blow to the Giants' pennant hopes today by rallying for three runs in the ninth inning of their fourth bitter battle to win by a 5 to 2 score. It was the third Cardinal victory in succession and gave St. Louis the series.

As Brooklyn and Chicago also won, the Cards failed to gain in the pennant race but the fourth place Giants lost a full game and tonight are four games behind the league leading Cubs. The Cards won the season's series from New York, 12 games to 10.

Flint Rhem pitched a fine game for St. Louis, allowing the Giants only seven hits and shutting them out in all but the sixth inning. Leach's double, Lindstrom's triple and Terry's sacrifice fly gave them both their runs in that frame.

The Cards got to Carl Hubbell, Giant starting pitcher, for two runs in the fourth. Adams started with a walk and Frisch, Hafey and Blades followed them with singles to bring in the first two runners.

The winning rally in the ninth started when Hafey beat out an infield hit. Jim Chaplin, who had relieved Hubbell, weakened rapidly and Watkins, Wilson and Rhem singled in order to push over three runs. A Giant error, made when Terry threw wild to the plate trying to catch Watkins, allowed one of the runs to cross the plate.

BROWNS WIN IN 10TH AFTER BOSTON TIES IN 9TH

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 12.—(AP)—A home run by Phil Todt, Boston Red Sox first baseman, knotted the score in the ninth inning here today but the St. Louis Browns knocked out the extra point in the tenth and won 5 to 4.

Boston had no runs in the ninth when with two out Goslin dropped Webb's fly. Miller singled to center scoring Scarritt and Webb. Todt bounced a homer off the right field pavilion and drove in another run beside his own.

WASHINGTON STOPS LATE RALLY TO WIN FROM CHICAGO

CHICAGO, Sept. 12.—(AP)—Breaking up a late drive by the White Sox today, Washington won the first game of the series, 8 to 7, and gained a half game on the idle Athletics.

The Senators laced Tommy Thomas and Garland Braxton for all their runs in the first seven innings, while Fred Marberry was holding the Sox scoreless. A big seventh by the Sox, capped by Clyde Reynolds' homer, produced five runs and sent Marberry to cover. And another two runs in the eighth caused Brown to be removed. Bump Hadley got in in time to halt the rally. The victory was credited to Marberry and was his eleventh straight.

DOEG TURNS BIG SURPRISE WHEN HE ELIMINATES TILDEN IN NATIONAL TENNIS

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Sept. 12.—(AP)—Young America caught up with Big Bill Tilden at last this afternoon. The 37-year-old champion went down to a surprising defeat at the hands of a young California giant, 16 years his junior, Johnny Doeg, in a match that had 10,000 fans on the edge of the seats for two solid hours.

By scores of 10-8, 6-3, 3-6, 12-10, the powerful Doeg turned back the still mighty Tilden in the semi-final round of the national tennis singles championship, and tomorrow he will clash with a 19-year-old rival from the east.

Big strapping Frank Shields, of New York, playing wonderful tennis, downed a fellow New Yorker, Sidney Wood, in the first of the semi-finals, 6-2, 6-3, 4-6, 6-3, and Doeg's remarkable victory gave this classic tournament two of the youngest finalists in its 49-year history.

Even though beaten, Tilden brought thunderous applause from the packed stands as he battled with never failing courage against a younger man who was playing the tennis of his life.

When sorely pressed Big Bill again and again pulled seemingly miraculous drives and aces out of his bag of tricks, but they did not stump Doeg, as they did a year ago when he bowed to the master in five hard sets in the semi-finals of this same tournament.

Doeg today was not to be denied and he fired right back with placements and acing drives of his own, outdoing Tilden in power of service and lunging in to kill the champion's returns with whizzing volleys.

Tilden's famous right leg, which has bothered him in many a previous match, had him limping throughout most of the last three sets. The leg appeared to give him great pain, but Big Bill threw caution to the winds to race about the court, leg or no leg, in quest of Doeg's searching volleys and soft, deceptive chopstrokes.

Not since little Bill Johnson downed him in the final round in 1919 had Big Bill lost to an American in the United States championships. Only the great Frenchmen, Henri Cochet and Rene La Coste, had accomplished the feat before.

Tilden, over that period, compiled his total of seven championships with a string of six between 1920 and 1925, and another title last year when he won his way through a field of younger rivals in the absence of the French stars, who had captured the championship for the three previous years.

This year Tilden started in quest of his eighth national title as the favorite against the field, so strong had the belief in his continued supremacy become. But the younger generation had made long strides in the intervening year as was proved by the great play of Doeg and Shields.

There was wild excitement in the concrete stadium of the West Side Tennis club in the dramatic moment when Doeg, after being held at bay by the gallant champion through a 22-game fourth set, punched across the two perfect placements that accomplished Tilden's downfall. One was a perfect chopstroke that fell into totally unprotected territory, and the last was a whizzing volley that carried with it the finality of fate.

HITS BY GEHRINGER AND ALEXANDER WIN FOR TIGERS

DETROIT, Sept. 12.—(AP)—A double by Charley Gehringer, his third hit of the game, and a single by Dale Alexander with two out in the ninth inning today gave the Tigers a run that beat the New York Yankees 5 to 4, in the opener of a five-game series. The defeat cost the Yankees their last chance to take the American league pennant. The best they can do now is to finish a half game behind the Philadelphia Athletics, who were idle today.

ASHLAND TO PLAY WORCESTER TOWN TALKS

This Sunday at Ashland park, Ashland plays one of the best semi-pro teams of New England, the Worcester Town Talks. This team needs no introduction to the local fans. It will be remembered that three years ago they won the New England championship from Riverview club, when Riverview had the best semi-pro team in this state. This team appeared at Ashland park when Bill Liberty was manager of the Ashland team. In the first game Ashland was defeated 8-4. In the second game which went 18 innings the score was 6 to 6, the game being called off on account of darkness. The Ashland manager is taking no chances and has hired two players to straighten his team out in good shape.

SHYMAS CLASH WITH TATO'S ALL STARS TODAY

The much talked up ball game between the Shymas and Tato's All-Stars will take place this afternoon at the Providence street grounds, Taftville. There was much interest manifest in this game and there should be one of the biggest crowds of the season. Tato, who thinks that he is somewhat of a John McGraw, would not divulge his pitcher for this game but according to rumors around the village it will be none other than Lefty Lucier, picked out as the leading pitcher of the city league, who is now pitching under the colors of the Ideals. Lefty, it is remembered, started the season with the Shymas, pitching two games for that organization before going to the Italians. He will do his best in an endeavor to beat his old teammates. If anything should happen to Lefty, Tato will have Rabbit Gauthier, also of the Italians, to fall back on. With two such pitchers as Lefty and Gauthier, it is plain to be seen that this game is bound to be a game for blood. Walter Sydlo, of the champion Polish Citizens, will be behind the bat. Alex Arico, one of the mainstays of the N. F. A. team the past season, will cover first. Hack Pepin, of the Army-Navy team, will cover the keystone sack. Ray Yerrington, former Academy star and later captain of Springfield college team, at third, while the shortstop will be filled by either Pheno Tombari, star of the Aggies, or Rabbit Gauthier. In the outfield will be seen Lefty Dona, former Taftville A. A. star, Woodard and Kegler, the latter two of Willimantic. In reserve he will have Perry, Pizzo, Wolkowsky of the fast Holy Name team, of Jewett City; Breen, Academy star of the past season and Paradis, of Assumption. It is also rumored that he will also have a pitcher who hails from around South Manchester. This is the line-up given out by Tato Pepin, manager of Tato's Stars.

Against this array of stars the manager of the Shymas will present his regular line-up for this game and feels sure that Tato, the so-called John McGraw of Taftville, will know after this game that the Shymas, although not claiming to be world beaters, like his team, has one of the best amateur teams in the eastern part of the state.

MOOSUP MAY SEND NEW BATTERY AGAINST PLAINFIELD

It is being rumored that the Moosup baseball team will import a battery to oppose Plainfield tomorrow afternoon (Sunday) on the old ball grounds in Plainfield. Last Sunday, Plainfield easily defeated Moosup at Moosup by the score of 6 to 1. Clocher, who pitched wonderful ball allowing only a few scattered hits, will be called upon to pitch against the Moosup team again Sunday.

"Eno", Moosup's star pitcher, has pitched so often against Plainfield that he has been hit hard by the Plainfield team and if Moosup intends to stop Plainfield they will have to not only import a pitcher but a whole new team as the Plainfield team is hitting on all eight and it will take a mighty good aggregation to stop them. The probable line-ups will be:

Plainfield: Cotnoir, ss; Mercier, 2b; Beausoleil, c; Dissinger, lf; Pechie, 1b; Ouellette, 3b; Marriott, rf; Jodoin, cf; Clocher, p.

Moosup—Stevens, 2b; Dysart, ss; Boisse, rf; Allard, cf; Robittale, c; Shaw, lf; Silva, 3b; Frechette, 1b; Eno, p.

Game starts at 3 p. m.

The Norwich-New London intercity series between the Polish Citizens and visiting Kaceys will be resumed this afternoon at the Academy campus in the third and possibly the last game of this important set of games. The game will start at 3 o'clock and it is expected that fully 3,000 fans or more will be on hand when Umpires Hank Morin and Joe Cranker start the action.

This game presents the local team an opportunity to clinch the five-game series for they have already taken the first two contests, by scores of 2 to 1 and 3 to 2, in Norwich and New London, respectively.

Daniels Against Boots Greene

A last minute shift in the pitching assignments made Friday evening sent Boots Greene, local schoolboy star, against Tilly Daniels, former Bulkeley ace, and who was the Kacey's mainstay during their runaway race in the New London City league. It was stated in New London last night that Tilly will definitely be on the rubber for his first start in the series in an attempt to halt the Kaceys downward plunge. Boots will be making his second appearance, as last Sunday in New London, he emerged victorious in a pitching battle against Joe McInnis. McInnis had also lost another tough game in the opener when Johnny Greene was the opposing hurler.

The Cits were rated as slight favorites to win today's game but it was noticeable that local fans showed a slight nervousness when placing their money. Many of the bugs feel that the New London attack, which has been conspicuously absent so far, will come to life and probably start the series games going the other way. The trouble with the Whalers has been their weak work at the plate. They have received good pitching and have fielded well. On the other hand, the Cits and their followers point out that two of their biggest seige guns, Lloyd Jarvis and Charlie Lamory, have also been practically nil with the stick and they figure that any life in the New London bats would be more than offset if the above two stickers suddenly turn loose. Jarvis, it will be remembered, was the leading hurler of the City league while the Cits were grabbing the pennant but in the current series he has as yet to hit safely.

Play Sunday At New London

The teams will play on Sunday at Mercer field in New London no matter what the outcome of today's game. This game will also start at 3 o'clock and it is the intention to have Johnny Greene pitch against Joe McInnise, provided of course, these two are not called into action today in case of sudden enemy uprisings. In case of rain today, Sunday's game would figure as the third game of the series.

Game At Baltic

The Baltic Sacs and the McGraw's Al. Stars will line up the following players in their battle for the championship of Baltic on Sunday, at Sayles field.

McGraw's' All Stars: Albert Passmore, 1b; Alex, 2b; McGuire, ss; Lanning, 3b; Guillotte, lf; Sullivan, cf; Conors, rf; McGraw, c; Pinto, p.

Baltic Sacs: Coullard or Allard, 1b; Bastien, 2b; Allard or Deschamp, ss; Charron, 3b; Earl Passmore, lf; Red Passmore, cf; McShane, rf; Provencher or C. Coady, c; Coady, p.

ROMANCE AND BEAUTY HAVE A CHARM FOR SALLY WHICH MAKES HER DREAD BECOMING THE WIFE OF THE STOLID AND UNIMAGINATIVE MARTIN BLAKE

NIGHT, a dazzling, electric-lighted night. Broadway, a bejeweled panorama stretching through the purple haze. Mighty advertisements blazed against the skyline in a bewilderment of colors. Electric bulbs, simulating the jewels locked in royalty's cabinets. Here were rubies and emeralds and aquamarines, sapphires and amethysts, lapislazuli, topaz and molten gold contributing their colors.

Sally Saunders stood and stared at it all. She seemed so tiny, clinging to Clifford Ledyard's arm. He was so tall and straight and unsmiling. She seemed almost like a little girl, with her tenderly curving lips and her wide-open dark eyes. The top of her head came just under the sharp line of his chin.

"Good-by, Broadway," Sally Saunders whispered. "I may never see you again." There were tears in her voice. "But I love you, Broadway—yes, I do—I love you."

Her hand was slipped into the crook of Clifford Ledyard's arm. He tightened his arm a little, drawing it closer to his side.

"Lucky Broadway," he drawled. He pressed the little hand resting on his sleeve. "If you'd only say that to me, Sally. Say it just once. 'I love you, Cliff.'"

"Please, Cliff. We've been all through that. I told you all about Marty just as soon as I knew—you cared."

"But I cared the first second I laid eyes on you."

"Don't be absurd, Cliff. Men don't fall in love with women that way."

"Don't they? That's all you know about it."

"Oh, you'll forget—forget all about me as soon as my train pulls out tomorrow."

"Forget you, sweet? When I've just found you? I've been hunting for you all my life. Five times I've been round this old world hunting for you. Africa—India — Burma — Rangoon — Singapore—all the out-of-the-way places. I never thought I'd find you in a city. Then I walked into Cousin Amy's four weeks ago and found you. I recognized you instantly."

"Don't be silly, Cliff. You were just at loose ends. Any girl would have answered. I was just-well, just a stranger visiting your cousin."

"But you weren't any stranger, Sally. That's what you don't understand. I knew you before I was born. I've been looking ever since I knew anything at all. And now, when I do catch up to you, I find that somebody's beaten me to it. You're engaged to a—a stone-crusher."

"No, no, no! Mustn't," she warned. "Marty's all right. I can't let you say things—"

"But you can't stop me. I'll say it and you can't deny it. He pays more attention to his old quarry than he does to you. Sends you telegrams instead of letters. There! I've said it. The telegrams take less time," he said veromously. "As though time mattered with the one woman. You're going to have a sweet time married to a business man."

"That's my affair, Cliff."

"It's your funeral, you mean. If that Marty of yours can't take time to write you a letter before marriage, what do you think he'll do afterward? Telegrams," he sneered. "Telegrams. Time-savers. Why, he hasn't even sent you a flower. I asked Amy," he triumphed.

"Well, you sent plenty, Cliff. And you shouldn't have. You knew I was engaged to Marty. I'm sorry I didn't send them back."

"Don't say that, Sally. It—it hurts."

"You're hurting me by saying those things about Marty."

"I'm trying to open your eyes to what you'll be up against in Brattleboro. Brattleboro! A hard, cold name. Like the stones they cut out of those marble quarries."

"I promised I'd marry Martin. I can't—I can't go back on that, Cliff."

"But you don't love him, dearest."

"Yes. I do. But—but you've got me sort of bewildered, Cliff. You're different from anybody I've ever known. So idealistic and romantic."

"Romantic? Of course. Isn't romance beauty? And loving you as I do, Sally—"

"You musn't! It isn't fair to Marty. He's loved me for years."

"If he loved you, Sally, he'd come down to New York and get you."

"Cliff, you must understand me. Marty's all right. He isn't like you. He isn't romantic. He's practical. And he's busy—terribly busy. But surely those are not things to hold against him. Marty'll be good to me—"

"If he isn't—" Clifford Ledyard's fists tightened into hard knobs.

IT WAS Sally's last night in New York. The last minute, almost, of four glamorous weeks. The next morning would find her on the train bound for Vermont. The month had litted on shimmering wings.

It hadn't been easy for Sally to get away for that month of freedom. She had called it "aloneness" when proposing it to Aunt Sade, and, to Sally's astonishment, Aunt Sade had urged her to go.

"You might as well, child. After you're married you'll have something to look back to. And you can get a city trousseau; that'll be a good start for Marty. It'll kind of give him a hint of what you'll be expectin' afterward."

"You don't like Marty any too well, do you. Aunt Sade?"

"Oh, he's a right good boy. But he's a Blake. Honest and upright, but his kind ain't none too comfortable to live with." The old lady shrugged shawled shoulders, as though a Blake would not be her choice.

But Martin Blake had demurred at Sally's proposed visit to New York.

"A whole month in New York! Why it's a waste of time—and money." The Blake in him was uppermost. "It'll cost at least a hundred dollars."

"Sally ain't askin' you to foot the bills, Marty, is she? Her pa left her the money, didn't he? Seems to me she'd a right to spend it like she wants. She ain't married yet." Aunt Sade was often what Martin called "snappy".

"Wasting is wasting, whether it's Sally's money or mine. That's not the point. The point is that a month in New York's going to be awfully expensive. I know. I was there once."

"Why didn't you stay, Marty?" Sally's voice was wistful. "I was there once for a whole week with dad. I was crazy about it."

"I didn't like it," he said stubbornly. "Things cost so much. Twice as much as they do at home."

"But you've got plenty of money, Marty. More than you'll ever need."

"What if I have?" His voice was strangely belligerent. "We earn our money. No sense in gadding about and wasting it on folderols."

"I don't think that spending money on pleasure or on beautiful things is wasting it," she said softly. "I want a little beauty in my life before I settle down. I wish you liked music and dancing and the theatre—"

"I don't have time for them, Sally. If I did—perhaps—"

She seemed to catch at that straw of a "perhaps".

"Do you love me a lot, Marty?"

"Sure do. Would I want to marry you if I didn't?"

"I've been thinking that perhaps we could take a trip to the Mediterranean on our honeymoon. Every time I read about the blueness of it I close my eyes and wish I could see it just once. The Bay of Naples, the Blue Grotto, Capri—can you imagine it, Marty?"

"No, I can't," he said dryly. "I can't imagine myself running round like a grasshopper. Father and mother'd think I was crazy. Besides, we've got work lined up at the quarries that'll take two solid years."

"Sounds terrible excitin', Marty," It was Aunt Sade, but Martin had schooled himself to ignore the old lady's comments.

TWO solid years loomed ahead at the Blake Marble Quarries. Naturally they'd be profitable years. Four generations of Blakes had drilled fortunes out of those deep caverns of marble. What had once been green pine-clad hills were now deep, dark pits shored with heavy timbers and crisscrossed with a network of tracks.

The Blakes were as solid, as substantial and unimaginative as was the amber-hued marble which had produced their wealth. Young Martin Blake had inherited all the traits of his forebears. He was 22, but already a leading citizen, taking his exercise in the Business Men's club in the local Y. M. C. A.

Sometimes Sally Saunders appeared a bit flighty to Martin Blake. She was cut a bit contrary to the Blake pattern. She'd sing and laugh at the most unexpected moments.

Her eyes were a smoky brown. Sort of baffling and dissatisfied under the inquisitive arch of her brows. She seemed as though she were ever on the point of asking a question. Her reddish-brown hair grew low on her forehead in a wavy, irregular line—the sort of haid which glints with brushing and throws out the curious lights of burnished bronze. She rouged her lips with a flaming Oriental-red lipstick despite Martin's protests. He didn't like rouge, he didn't like the perfume she used, he didn't like the chiffon gowns she wore, which displayed the round little curves of her figure. But he promised himself, silently of course, that after they were married he'd reform her, remodel her to the Blake pattern.

Sally and Martin Blake had been "keeping company" ever since her high-school days. She'd had no experiences with other boys. Marty was always on hand to walk home with her from choir practice. He monopolized Aunt Sade's side porch through the summer evening and always lounged in the sitting room when the porch was too cold for comfort. He wasn't very demonstrative. That was all right with Sally, for she wasn't demonstrative, either. They were formally engaged the night she was graduated from high school. She wore her pearl engagement ring to the alumni dance. Sally was 16 then and Marty was just 20. That was two years ago. Since then, Marty had been taken into partnership with his father. He could afford to marry now.

PERHAPS Sally had a premonition that once she became Mrs. Martin Blake she would cease to be herself, wholly herself. The finely etched brows, which raised themselves into a long question mark, were not mere accidents. Nor the smoldering dissatisfaction in her eyes. Unable and perhaps too loyal to put it into words, she dreaded the prospect of settling into the rut of becoming another one of the Brattleboro Blakes. If Marty would only travel for a while, taste life with her, expand in some worldly way. But he wouldn't. What was good enough for his father and grandfather and great-grandfather was good enough for him. He loathed change, feared readjustment.

Sally had overriden Martin's protests. She had practically defied him, aided and abetted by Aunt Sade. Sally was determined to have that month in New York, determined to take that short fling at life before she married.

She remembered well the week she had had in New York once with her father. Her father'd had a zest for life which had been all but smothered under the judicial gown of a small-town judge. That zest he had passed on to his little daughter. She, too, had been forced to smother it. She determined, however, that she'd do everything that she'd ever wanted to do before it was too late.

Sally registered at a hotel. She couldn't be nearer Broadway if she pitched her tent there. After a few delirious days of wandering up and down Broadway, in and out of the side streets, Sally began to get in touch with old acquaintances.

She found Amy Ledyard was now Amy Sheldon. Married, with two small children, living quietly in Gramercy Park. It was there that she had met Amy's cousin, Clifford Ledyard. It was disconcerting the way he stared at her, as though his eyes could never be filled with the sight of her. That night he took her uptown to her hotel in a taxi. He drew back her glove and pressed his lips into the palm of her hand and murmured, "At last. At last, my sweet. It's been so long until you came."

And Sally, not having had much experience with young men, remained silent.

The next afternoon he took her to a tea dance. They had dinner in a little Russian restaurant in the East Side. It was a dim sort of place. The gypsy orchestra knew no jazz. It knew the sorcery of the violin as well as the rollicking gayety of the balalaika. The waiters in their high-collared smocks and baggy trousers tucked into the tops of their Russian boots, the clicking of their heels as they stood at attention, the lovely, raven-eyed girls with cigarette baskets swinging from their shoulders all helped weave their spell.

"I was in Petrograd when the revolution broke out," Cliff said. He shuddered slightly. "These poor devils. I know what they've been through."

"You were in Petrograd?" What doing?"

"Looking for you, my sweet."

Sally frowned. "Please be serious."

"I was never more serious in my life. Always—ever since I can remember—I've been searching for you. Sort of groping in the dark. But sure that I'd find you, Sally! Yesterday my heart stood still and I knew—knew that my seeking was over. Knew I'd found the one girl."

"You mustn't—you mustn't talk like that to me, Cliff. I'm—I'm going to be married in June." Her voice was hushed as though that dim room were a cathedral.

"And this is April."

"Yes. This is April," she repeated after him.

"I love you, my sweet."

"Do you?"

"Until my life—shall end."

"I'm sorry, Cliff. Terribly sorry."

That night he again pressed his lips into the soft little palm of her hand and whispered, "Good night, my sweet."

The days passed, the weeks passed, the month of grace was over. She would miss the little dinners at the out-of-the-ordinary restaurants which excelled in some special tidbit.

Sometimes they walked, wandered through the narrow lanes of the little park which fringes Riverside Drive. She never wearied of his strange husky voice telling of lion hunts in Asia, of the caravan which carried him across the Sahara when he heard of the excavations in Luxor. It was then Sally learned that Clifford Ledyard had a profession. "An archeologist when I'm working at it, my sweet."

That was it. Why work when one can play? Why not spend one's income with one's life? Life was so beautiful. China in peach-blossom time, riding in rick-shaws through the scented air or strolling on the Bund, peeking through the Great Wall of China into the Forbidden City or stumbling on the rough cobblestones which pave the top of the Great Wall.

"When I was looking for you, my sweet." That was his invariable ending.

"Hush, Cliff, I can't bear it—"

"Can't bear to have me love you?" The pain in his voice, the torment in his gray eyes. It seemed to Sally that he was somehow thinner. A tall, lean man he was. Gray-eyed and with nondescript mouse-brown hair. His lips were curiously tender for a man who had seen life as he had. He was a human geography and a walking encyclopedia of the habits of men in all corners of the globe. He wasn't particularly scholarly. That is, he'd relate some astounding adventure with the simplicity of a man saying, "Thanks for a cigarette, old man."

That night he said good-by to Sally as usual. But after she'd left him he strolled into the lobby and spent a long time in writing to her. He wasn't going to see her at the train. Sally had asked it.

"I want to say good-by to you alone, Cliff. I want to remember you that way. Not blurred in a crowd. Dear, dear Cliff. Good-by." She was gone, floating up in the elevator. And he was writing—writing — writing. At last the letter was sealed and in her mailbox, for he did not wish her to have it before morning.

MARTIN BLAKE met her at the train. The train was late—three hours late. Martin paced the platform impatiently. At last the train came in and Sally walked down the steps. He hustled her luggage into the back seat of the car. He'd wasted time enough, evidently.

"Been hanging around here all afternoon," he announced. "A little efficiency wouldn't hurt this road any. Have a good time?"

"Oh, lovely," she breathed. "Lovely. I hated to leave."

"Hated to leave New York? All that noise and hustle. It'd give me the jim-jams. Now up here everything's real, Sally. The air's lovely. Smell it." He sniffed it in with an audible intake of breath.

"Why didn't you write to me, Marty? I kept looking for a letter."

"I telegraphed, didn't I?"

"You did. Ten words in every telegram. I counted them."

He sensed some hidden meaning in her words.

"Well, what of it? Ten words covered it, didn't it?"

"I guess so, Marty. I guess you're—you're sensible."

That pleased him. He smiled down upon her. She seemed so tiny sitting beside him.

"And I guess you're going to be sensible, too, Sally, and settle down."

"I guess so Marty. Did you miss me?"

"Sure did. Especially Sundays. Was awful lonesome Sundays."

"You could have written me a letter on Sundays."

"There wasn't much to write about. If there had been it would have been different."

HER fingers crushed the sides of the beaded bag in her lap. There was a faint crunching of paper. Cliff had found so much to write about. Certain phrases were photographed on her brain. "Forever I'll be waiting, my sweet. Forever! If you ever need me, no matter where I am or where you are, call me and I'll come to you." And again: "No matter who has you. No matter who claims you. Nothing can stop my loving you. Do you understand, my darling?"

Sally was feeling this letter, warming her heart upon it, almost.

"Did you meet any of the Broadway sheiks?"

"Yes, one." Her voice was unsteady.

"They're a tricky lot," Martin announced. "Fakers, jazz hounds and sports."

"Perhaps they do play a lot. New York's like—like a big playground."

"You said something, Sally. Now you've seen it you'll apreciate Brattleboro. I got a surprise for you. I bought a house for you. It was a whale of a bargain. I had to act quick."

"You didn't—didn't buy a house for me without my seeing it?" she gasped.

"Sure did, old girl. And believe me, it was some bargain."

"How did you know I'd like it, Martin?"

"What?" He seemed surprised. "Oh, you'll like it all right. It's got a right bright kitchen."

A kitchen! A right bright kitchen! Sally laughed. A high-pitched, hysterical giggle, it seemed. But then, she'd had a long, tedious trip and was probably tired.

"Ma says the kitchen's the most important room in the house."

"That's just a matter of opinion. It's necessary, of course. But important—well—" Her voice seemed weary, dispirited. "I had hoped we could build a little place just to suit ourselves, Martin. One of those new bungalows with the living room running the length of the house, with built-in bookshelves at one end and my piano at the other. I'd like a fireplace in the center and a davenport facing it. I want a few good pictures on the walls; good rugs on the floors; comfortable chairs to lounge in. I'd love a dining room with a glassed-in porch at one end, where I could have flowers and we could have luncheon. I hate houses that are just four walls, Marty. They press in on me, somehow."

"That's all any house is, Sally—four square walls. And perhaps I should have waited and let you decide on it. After all, you've got to live in it, and it's only fair to let you have your say. I didn't stop to think about that. I just thought, 'Here's a dandy house for a little money.' And I snatched it up. But now, come to think about it, Sally, I had no business to do it. Because—it's awfully hard to put it into words, but I feel it just the same—I want to make you happy, Sally. If I blunder sometimes, little girl—I want you to understand—" He pressed her hand with such savagery that it stung.

"I do understand, Marty. You're—you're the salt of the earth. All the Blakes are, I guess. And we're going to be happy, Marty, I know we are. I'll try to like everything you like. I'm sure I'll love the house. I bought heaps of lovely things in New York. I didn't care. I was in a wild spending mood and I just let fly."

The wedding day was two months off. They set about making ready the little house. Sally must have had a momentary gift of clairvoyance when she described the average house as "just four square walls" No house could be squarer than the one Martin had bought. It was laid out in checkerboard fashion. Four square rooms downstairs. Then up a narrow staircase to find the four square rooms duplicated on the upper floor.

Sally inspected wallpapers, rugs, furniture, china, glass and aluminum; kitchen stoves, kitchen cabinets and inlaid linoleum. She inspected them and then phoned Martin to pass final judgment upon her selection.

Martin was a sensible, clear-sighted young man. No silly sentiment ever led him into being impractical. He vetoed the buttercup-yellow wallpaper Sally had selected to brighten the rather dismal dining room. Sand color would be better—it fades more evenly. Of course, Sally wasn't serious about the old-gold brocades for window drapes or the cream-colored Oriental rug for the living room. And to panel the living room instead of papering it. Was the house going to look like a stage setting? And when the Blakes bought furniture, it was furniture which was destined to become heirlooms.

Martin had his way. They didn't exactly quarrel. Resentment smoldered underneath until they came to the furnishing of their chamber.

"Twin beds!" Martin exclaimed. "Nothing doing."

"Marty, dear. We'd be much more comfortable. We'd be much more independent, too."

"What do you mean 'independent'?"

"You might want extra blankets and I mightn't want any. One wouldn't have to smother just because the other needed extra warmth. Human beings aren't exactly alike. And every person needs some privacy, Martin."

"Privacy! Stuff and nonsense! When people are married, they're married. That's all there is to it. Look at the people around us."

"I don't think I want to be just like the people around us."

"Why not? What's the matter with them?"

"Oh, they've forgotten beauty. They've forgotten romance."

"Romance! Don't be silly. They've learned what we learned in school. Life is real. Life is earnest."

"I don't believe it needs to be like that, Martin. Life can be beautiful. It's just what you make it."

"Snap out of it, Sally. Come down to earth. You'll lose all your romantic notions after you marry me."

"Am I going to marry you, Martin?" Her voice was hushed. "I wonder if I am really going to marry you."

"Marry me? Of course you're going to marry me. What—what am I buying all this furniture for? What do you mean?"

"I don't know. But it doesn't seem as though—as though I could go through with it."

"On account of the twin beds, you mean?"

"No. Not that, Martin. But—but I think I'll go away and think it over."

"You don't have to go away to think it over. You can do it right here—and now."

She drew her pearl engagement ring off her finger.

"Take it, Martin! Take it."

"Sally! Sally, dear! What have I done? What have I said? I apologize—I—I didn't mean—"

"I know it, Marty. It's just a mistake. You're not to blame. You're the salt of the earth, Martin. But I—I want a little honey."

"Honey? What do you mean Sally?"

"You wouldn't understand."

"I'd try to, if you only gave me a chance. I know I'm not a Romeo. But I do love you, and I want to make you happy. I'll always be good to you, Sally. I want you to—to let me put this ring on your finger again."

She shook her head. "It was—it was too hard to get off, Marty. I've tried— I've tried—" She began to weep softly.

He put his arm around her. "There, there. Don't cry. Old Marty'll do anything he can. Don't cry, dearie."

"I'll—I'll go away tonight," she sobbed. "I—I couldn't face people after being so mean to you. I'm ashamed—ashamed of myself, Martin."

"It's all right, dear," he soothed her. "It's easier to lose you now than it would be later."

"What will people say, Marty?"

"Plenty. But who cares? It's our problem. And if you'd be happier with somebody else, or if this is just a bit of nervousness and you change your mind—you'll let me know if you change your mind, Sally, won't you?"

After Martin had gone Aunt Sade demanded to know "what all the whinnyin' was about."

"I'm going back to New York, auntie. I've got to talk to somebody."

"What's the matter? Can't you write a letter?"

"A letter wouldn't be exactly satisfactory. I've got to go. I want to see somebody. I want to see him terribly."

Sally sent a wire to Clifford Ledyard.

"If you still care, I'll be at my old hotel tomorrow."

CLIFFORD was waiting at the hotel. He'd been waiting for hours.

"The Conti di Rossi sails on Saturday," he whispered.

"For the Mediterranean?"

"For paradise, my sweet." He outlined the route from Gibraltar to Tangiers. Described the queer little steamships which ply from port to port around the landlocked Mediterranean; described the journey by camel along the rim of the desert until they would at last reach Cairo. "We'll chase the moonbeams across the desert, darling."

"I love them all, Cliff."

"You might love me a little, my sweet."

"A little? I love you so much that my heart aches for you, darling."

She was in his arms. Close, close against his heart he pressed her. The next morning they were married in Amy Sheldon's house, down in Gramercy Park.

"You two were just meant for each other. I felt it in the air that afternoon when I introduced you," Amy said. "I think I'm a great little matchmaker," she added.

And on Saturday they were "just another couple of newlyweds" as they sailed on the great Italian liner for the blue Mediterranean: for Naples an! Capri and the Blue Grotto and all the places Sally had visited in her dreams.

IN NORWICH FIFTY YEARS AGO

The week in Norwich 50 years ago was an unusually quiet one. The only activities of note were along political lines. These included the formation of two new Garfield and Arthur clubs. Interesting extracts taken from the files of The Norwich Bulletin of September, 1880, are as follows:

Monday, Sept. 6, 1880—It is seldom that people living in this neighborhood have an opportunity to visit Block Island at such a nominal price as that advertised tomorrow by Steamer City of Lawrence and we bespeak for the management a large excursion. The boat will leave her wharf at 9 o'clock and stop at Montville, New London and Stonington. People need not stay away from the excursion for fear that the boat may be overloaded, as a limited number of tickets will be offered for sale.

Mr. Archibald Mitchell who has distinguished himself in this vicinity as a successful manipulator of the rod and line, is not without honor in his own country. During his recent sojourn in Scotland he caught 14 trout, 18 1-2 pounds, the largest string returned by any of 28 fishermen in the Dunfermline Angling club contest.

Mr. and Mrs. James E. Hill, residing on Providence street, Greeneville, celebrated their 40th anniversary of their marriage Friday evening. There was a large assemblage of their friends present to congratulate them on the occasion. The event was one long to be remembered by all present.

Tuesday, Sept. 7, 1880—Mr. S. B. Roath, of Chicago, who has been for many years, connected with the Union Stockyard company at Chicago, is visiting friends in this city.

The fire alarm telegraph is at times as freaky as a Kilkenny cat. It strikes when it ought not to and occasions unnecessary alarm. It struck box 23, Friday night, without anyone's interferring with its circuit and was found to be on Saturday entirely out of order on the West Side.

Company F of Hancock Guards has been formed at Norwich Town with the following officers; John C. Cummings, captain; Michael Berkery, first lieutenant; Frank Smith, second lieutenant; James Banning, orderly sergeant.

A Garfield and Arthur club has been formed in Boswellville and a campaign flag will soon be raised there.

Wednesday, Sept. 8, 1880—Prof. F. F. Jewett, who during the past three and a half years, has been connected with the Imperial University of Tokio, Japan, and who is now visiting his family in Norwich Town, has accepted the appointment of professor of chemistry in Oberlin college, Ohio. He will leave the city to begin the duties of his new position the latter part of this week.

The military enrollment for this place was completed Saturday. The total number enrolled is 2,311. Number exempt, 1,168. Causes of exemption: Disability, 60; active militia, 56; ex-militia, 57; active firemen, 247; exempt firemen, 146; minors, 278; veteran soldiers and sailors, 344; taxable, 1,143.

A number of young men are organizing a Garfield and Arthur cavalry company in this city. A book for signatures has been opened at republican headquarters at Burdick's block.

Thursday, Sept. 9, 1880— A new abutment is being built on the roadbed of the New London Northern railroad, opposite the depot at the West Side, for the purpose of widening the main bed for the accommodation of a double track, so that passenger trains can pass each other there.

The officers of the City Guard attended Capt. D. A. O'Neill's funeral yesterday. Co. K. of the Third regiment acted as escort to the remains and six captains acted as bearers. The field and line officers were present in uniform.

The first train over the Norwich & Worcester railroad yesterday carried 800 passengers to the New England fair.

The Norwich Free Academy begins its fall term today.

Friday, Sept. 10, 1880—Prosecuting Agent Montgomery arrested John Thomas of Waterford, yesterday, for a violation of the liquor law. He was taken before Justic John L. Waters and upon promising "to close his shop forever," he was allowed to plead guilty to reputation and was fined $1 and costs.

The heavy easterly storm of last night prevented the republican parade and flag raising at Preston. It will take place tonight, if the weather is favorable. If stormy the affair will be further postponed until Tuesday evening.

The Norwich Orchestral Union organized for winter business Tuesday evening. The union is composed of the finest musicians of the city and goes into practice with a view of giving several first class concerts during the season.

Saturday, Sept. 11, 1880—Articles received at Rocknook Children's home in September: Apples, peaches, grapes, berries, potatoes, jelly, butter, toys, games, maps, slates shoe buttons and a large box containing 33 pairs new stockings, six pairs new gloves, children's collars, neckties and other useful articles.

The single scull race on the Thames yesterday afternoon between Edward Howard and Frank Hempstead of the Chelsea Boat club, resulted in a tie.

The surf at Watch Hill yesterday is said to have been the heaviest and most majestic witnessed there for several seasons. The ocean is lashing the beaches furiously now.

The Old Schoolhouse

I look today far down the isles of Mem'ry's happy past,
I see the scenes I saw before my sky was overcast,
I wander over hill and dale, forget the present time,
And live anew the olden days, though in a foreign clime.

I see the schoolhouse in the vale, the crystal spring below,
The water leaping, rippling, on upon its downward flow,
The leaves and vines are dripping in the spring so cool and clear,
Around whose brink we sported then, with naught of care or fear.

I see the grassy slope again, where in the autumn haze,
We spent the hour of noon in play, Oh, those were golden days.
Ah! How we sported on that green, what merry games we played,
Around the towering hallowed oak, and in the walnut's shade.

And when the winter days came on with frost, and ice and snow,
Had wrapped the hills in sheets of white,
Then with our sled we'd go,
Away unto the coasting grounds, so high and smooth and steep,
And then, with laughter, song and shout, adown the hill we'd go.

The schoolhouse now is gone I know,
That old brown house so queer,
Yet I can see the boys and girl,
Their merry voices hear.
I wander with the boys again along the rural glade
We buy and sell our pocket toys,
Again our jack-knives trade.

And there's the cup behind the door,
Still hanging on the nail,
And on the stool below, you'll see the dinted pail,
With eager haste I drink again, the water clear and cold,
And relish still the cooling draught as in the days of old.

The long low seat for little boys stood by the master's chair,
And John and Sam and Bill and I were each located there,
Where are they now, those merry boys with whom I joined in play?
They've run their race, their battle's o'er
And they have passed away

The old brown house, the playground trees,
The fences 'long the lane,
And, all are gone, and in their place a field of waving grain,
Old memories cluster 'round the spot,
The spot so dear to me,
When life was one long summer day so joyous, bright and free.

If Mother Knew

If mother knew the way I felt—
And I'm sure a mother should—
She wouldn't make it quite so hard
For a person to be good.

She'll tell me to do something,
And I'll really start to go,
But she'll keep right on telling it,
As if I didn't know,

Till it seems as if I couldn't—
It makes me kind of wild;
And then she says she never saw
Such a disobliging child.

I go to bed all sorry,
And say my prayers and cry,
And mean next day to be so good
I can't just wait to try.

I wonder if she really thinks
A child could go so far
As to be perfect all the time
As the grown up people are!

If she only knew I tried to—
And I'm sure a mother should—
She wouldn't make it quite so hard
For a person to be good.

DECORATIONS FOR FALL AND WINTER

Dear Social Corner Writers: I am going to tell you of some table decorations for the fall and winter months which I have found pleasing.

I found some very tall ferns in a hilly place and very fresh and perfect for the fall. I do not know what kind they were. They looped something like brakes but they could not have been, for my experience has been that no matter how careful you are in gathering them, no matter how hard you try to revive them, they droop and are no good except to beautify the place where they grow. These ferns were tall but not very broad.

I found also a few of the red berries which grow on the black alders. The ferns were curved at the end. I arranged them—three of them— so that the points came together, forming a little tent inside which I had placed the red berries which looked bright through the fern leaves. I put rock ferns all around the outside of the base, and then I used the small brown cones that grow on the black birch to stand out all around the ferns. This combination of green and brown and red was restful to look at and effective.

A centerpiece which will please the children is made by filling a plate the size of a dinner plate with beautiful green moss. I found a piece of princess pine, shaped much like a tiny Christmas tree with one yellow candle at the top. This I stood erect in the center of the plate. I used the red berries of the blackberries to form words of Christmas greeting and the date.

For February with its two great birthdays, I used a plate of green moss. I made a pretty good flag with the red alder berries for the red stripes, and the white stars of bayberries on a blue background made of cedar berries.

Around the edge of the Christmas decorations use rock ferns which, if you know where to look, can be found well into the winter. If ferns cannot be found in February, small twigs of bayberry make a good edging; or I should think princess pine would be good although I have not used it.

For Easter, I used a plate of lovely moss and formed a cross of trailing arbutus flowers with a bayberry to finish the edge.

Aries: Thank you for the poem about September. I like it very much and mean to put it in my scrap book which is made of pictures I like with a poem here and there. I like this way better than a book all of poetry, as the latter way is too much like a great museum, where you see too many beautiful things at one time and the mind is wearied and does not properly appreciate any of them. I am one of the September sisters and thank you for good wishes.

Lady's Slipper: Thank you for recipe for watermelon pickle. I have had that a request for a recipe or other help to the Corner met with prompt response and I have found this true.

ANSWERS AND INQUIRIES

HEPATICA: Letter sent as requested.

Hepatica: Glad to have your card.

Pernickety and Sister Rhody: Thank you for the flower seeds. It pleased me very much to receive them. I put some delphinium seed (I think I know them—the small black ones) in the earth on the last day of August, and they are coming up. I also gave some of the seed to friends who are good gardeners and I hope we shall have a harvest of flowers to tell of next year.

I hope the frost will be long delayed and that we may keep our flowers until November.

Good wishes to all from

PEDESTRIAN.

PLEASING RESPONSE FROM MEMBERS

Dear Corner Sisters: The first fall meeting of Club No. 2 in the Buckingham Memorial was well attended. Sixty members and their guests were present. U. C. E. and her willing helpers put on a nice dinner and plenty of it. Four sisters brought fruit which seemed to please as there was about a bushel of Bartlett pears from two members, besides nice plums and grapes. We did not dispose by sale of the food left over but divided it among some worthy and deserving people who accepted it with more thankfulness than the money derived from its sale.

Owing to quite a few going to attend the funeral of the daughter of Triplets, who went out of this world into another through an accidental shooting, we had no entertainment at this first meeting.

After singing Bless Be the Tie That Binds, a minute of silence was given because of Triplet's sorrow and Joan's death, with all repeating the Lord's prayer.

We miss Mawb who has moved so far away, but know our loss is surely her gain in a wider and larger church for her dear husband to work in.

I want to thank the two hostesses who came forward and offered themselves to serve. If others will do it throughout the year it will help me so much as long as its your desire for me to continue on as the floor director. (I don't know what else to call it, as we have no officers). Also the response to the request for food was quickly given if it continues through the year. I won't be sorry, I tried to serve you this coming year.

My sympathy to those who have lost loved ones and may those sick soon recover. Our prayers go out to those in trouble and to Catnip who is very ill in the Backus hospital. She is Mrs. Estella Miller, one of the faithful ones. With best wishes.

CALLA LILY.

WHEN I WENT TO SCHOOL

Dear Editor and Sisters: I want to thank Pernickety and Sister Rhody for the flower seed. I don't know hardly one plant from another when they are coming up, but I expect to learn from experience. It was so nice of them to take all that trouble that we might each have a piece of their gardens. I had my letter written, but it didn't get mailed in time to get in last week's Bulletin, but if I had seen Tish's first I never would have sent mine. It sounds so tame side of hers. When Sister Rhody wrote about her first day at school it brought to mind the first day I attended. It was a two by four school and if I remember rightly it was District No. 1. Sometime or other it had been painted white, but I think it was in the dim past. There was practically no school yard but across the road were acres of pasture that we used. There were some large chestnut trees there then and a nice steep sand bank that did terrible things to our clothes. In back of the building was a brook and at one place a cart path went through it making it broader at this point and not quite as deep and in the winter the boys made cracky-benders. There were many red osiee shrubs growing along the brook and they made lovely whips when we played horse as those who were the horses could testify. I always think of this building when I think of Whittier's "In School Days. Large flat stones projecting from the foundation furnished seats along the front of the building. Inside the master's desk is seen. Deep scarred by raps official. Only as far as I know it was always a mistress' desk, no man teaching there while I went. On entering the building through the door which was in one corner, there was a long narrow entry-way where wraps were hung, a bench for water pail and dipper and there wood packed the rest of the way. The water was brought from a neighboring house. The teacher's desk stood high on four legs and the slanting top was hinged to raise up and make a compartment for "official papers." A bench went around three sides of the room and there were 18 seats and desks, each seating two pupils.

The blackboard was plain boards painted and the erasers were furnished by another neighbor who kept sheep, as it was a piece of sheepskin with the wool on it nailed on a block of wood. By the end of the year the wool was pretty badly worn. The walls were wainscotted part way and the rest whitewashed. One year they decided to paper it, but in a very short time the wall and paper parted company and it hung in tatters. There were no curtains at the windows that I can remember. It was heated in winter with what we called a school house stove. That is, it was about 18 inches square on the ends and two feet and a half long. The whole top lifted off to put in knots and there was a door in the front end. No matter how red it got on the sides, the scholars in the back seats would have to put on their coats if the day was very cold. In back of the school was a big bunch of barberry bushes and one morning there was a big snake in the top of them. We were all scared to go out there and when a man came down the road the teacher asked him to get him out of there.

I started to tell about the first day I went to school and instead I've strayed away from my story. I was five years old and was to go with some other children who lived in the house where I did. But when the time came to go, I was more and more decided that I didn't want to. Grandmother had to take me all the way and I was howling to the top of my lungs. I stayed when I got there, but I cried all the time. The teacher tried to find things to amuse me, but I wouldn't pay any attention to anything. I can hear myself now saying "Let me cry and cry it out." Evidently I did after a week or so, but grandmother had to take me every morning for more than a week. Her patience was a whole lot better than mine would have been under the same circumstances, I imagine. And that same teacher is still teaching and my children have all been to her, too.

I was very sorry to hear about Zuliska. I didn't know she was ill. I think it would be nice if we sent her cards.

Just-a-Nut: I was glad to see a letter from you. Wish you could have been with us.

Best wishes everybody.

SUMAC, (No. 6).

INTERESTED IN ALL HANDWORK

Dear Social Corner Friends: I have not written for sometime, but never lose interest in the Social Corner letters and go to the hall whenever possible. Have enjoyed Canterbury Bell's letters on Florida.

My heart goes out to our dear sister, Mrs. W., in the loss of her daughter; such a dear, sweet child. I remember she used to come to the hall and picnics when quite a small girl, and sing at the grange. She loved to sing. Why God sees fit to take one so young and fair remains a mystery. We can only find consolation in the thought that in going young one escapes the suffering and often tragedy of later life. I miss many of the dear friends now gone beyond the Great Divide, but I know that is true with many of us, as we must all lose our dear ones though some escape it till later in life. But we can only hope and think of them as safe within a better and fairer land.

I have been to the beaches a number of times this summer. The 4th of July a friend took us to eight different beaches by auto, and I recently enjoyed the sail to Block Island.

I, too, count the radio as one of the greatest blessings of this age, and there are many good books and magazines to help us enjoy the time. My favorite authors are Kathleen Norris and Harold Bell Wright.

Many have written of the work they do in sewing, crocheting and such. I like nearly everything in this line, and have made over 30 rugs, knit, crocheted and braided, also hooked. Recently finished a knit rug with small pieces drawn in containing around 2800 pieces. A friend inquired on seeing this one, "What do you do in your (spare) time?" I didn't tell him it was three years in the making, as I think if one keeps too steady at such work it becomes tiresome. Have done a picture in worsteds which will be pretty when framed, also four dozen roses, sweet peas and six flower vases made from envelope linings; very pretty when varnished over. Recently in three years time I made 75 children's garments, besides several for myself. Have never done basketry work, but would like to take that up.

Our garden has done fine this year; plenty of vegetables and fruit in spite of the dry spells, and over 30 kinds of flowers. I have canned around 125 jars of fruit and jelly this fall. Now it is cooler weather it is nice to ride while the fall flowers are in bloom, as soon the frosts will come, but the foliage is nice then. Hope to hear from more of the old writers. I have belonged to the Corner 14 years now, and there have been many new ones in that time; but we miss the older ones.

Long live the Social Corner!

Best wishes to all. IVY.

HOUSING PLANTS FOR WINTER

Dear Social Corner: These cool evenings remind us that fall is here and that Jack Frost may visit our gardens almost any night now. This afternoon I collected some of my potted plants and put them on the porch. I always bring in more than I have room for because it is hard to decide which ones to keep. Shall I take up my Jerusalem cherry? As it set no fruit while indoors, I put it outside this summer and now it is a big thing with many green cherries and blossoms. That big pink abutilon many stay out for I succeeded in rooting a slip of it. I have learned not to expect a lot of winter blooms for my windows do not get enough sun.

Three fall garden catalogs came in today's mail but they did not interest me much for I ordered my bulbs weeks ago. I sent for hyacinths for forcing and some yellow crocus to set outside. William and I have started cleaning up the bulb bed and sorting the bulbs that are to be set out. These bulbs are some tulips, crocus, snowdrops and hyacinths that were forced in the house last winter. There is one thing that I want to try raising to bloom with the tulips and that is mertensia or Virginia bluebells. It requires a moist, shady place and my garden may be too dry for it.

Have any of you ever seen a yellow delphinium? I did not know that they came in that color until I saw them listed in a catalog. I sent for some seeds and they are beginning to come up. I also planted some of the red variety just out of curiosity. The latter grows wild in southern California and is propragated by a bulbous root. Some of my big blue delphiniums ripened seed and little plants are appearing. Although the other kinds are interesting, my favorite delphinium is the blue butterfly.

After the next good rain I plan to transplant the seedlings in my cold frame. The Royal Blue forget-me-nots and pink Coonara poppies are large enough to bud. From a package of seed I succeeded in raising only five mauve Bosniaca violas. But I had better luck with 30 seeds of Swiss giant pansies for nearly every one germinated. My columbines came up as well as Pernickety's sweet williams for I have plenty of them. The other plants in the seed bed are regal lily seedlings and helianthemums or sun roses. How shall I manage with all these young plants in order to winter them?

Like the other sisters I am thinking of fairs and am busy canning and cleaning house. With friendly greetings to all. SISTER RHODY.

THEY GO TOGETHER

Dear Sisters of the Social Corner: The following meat and vegetables may be served together:

Roast beef. With potatoes prepared in all the different ways, baked or browned, sweet potatoes, asparagus, squash, spinach, string beans, cauliflower or lima beans.

Beefsteak. Baked, French fried or fried potatoes, fried tomatoes, asparagus, spinach or squash.

Corned beef. Boiled potatoes, cabbage, beets, turnips, carrots, beet or tomato salad.

Roast mutton and lamb. Green peas, string beans, cauliflower, spinach, green corn, potatoes, lima beans.

Roast veal. Mashed potatoes, creamed spinach, French peas, Brussels sprouts or asparagus.

Veal cutlets. Creamed, mashed, baked or plain potatoes, wax beans, asparagus or spinach.

Roast pork. Mashed potatoes, mashed turnips, applesauce, creamed corn or beans, red cabbage.

Roast turkey and chicken. Mashed potatoes, creamed onions, creamed corn, mashed turnips, cranberry sauce.

Ducks and geese. Plain or mashed potatoes, browned sweet potatoes, creamed onions, creamed corn, applesauce or baked apples. P. K.

CIRCLING AROUND NEW ENGLAND

Dear Social Corner Editor and Members: I am not very good at writing a very interesting letter, but will try and write of my recent trip.

On Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock my husband, two children and I left home. We went over the Mohawk trail, and the children had their picture taken beside the iron fence that surrounds the Elk monument. Mr. Ravena went up in the tower at Whitecomb summit and said there was a nice view of the surrounding mountains. We went from Whitcomb summit to North Adams, Mass., to Brattleboro, Vt., by way of Bennington. We had about 40 miles of bad road which reminded us of a washboard. There were plenty of dilapidated farms in this section, but we didn't see very much farm work being done. We had supper at Brattleboro and then continued on our way and stopped at East Putney to spend the night in an overnight cabin.

It seemed very nice to rest after riding 239 miles. Before we reached East Putney, we saw a sign which read—Keene, N. H., 17 miles—via Ferry. The road didn't look very tempting so we continued on the same road, which as I wrote before brought us to East Putney. Before retiring we were talking to the man we hired the cabin of, and he told us that on Monday, the ferry went down and 4 lives were lost. The ferry was raised and carrying passengers again on Tuesday. We were very thankful that we didn't take that road.

Thursday morning we arose at 6 o. m. after Mr. Ravena shaved and the children were washed and dressed we again proceeded on our way. The scenery was very pretty with the sun just rising. We rode for an hour and a quarter and had breakfast at Newport, N. H. In New Hampshire we saw quite a bit of farming going on, cows grazing in the green feed, haying and green corn just at the height of the season from 15 to 25c a dozen. We went to Plymouth, N. H., and then to the White mountains. We went up in the Flume which is a sight long to to be remembered. The admission was 25c and 15c for a round trip on the bus to the foot of the Flume. From there you started to walk up, up and still up. The first part of the way you walked on large stones. When going up the steps, one could look up on both sides and see nothing but stone. Water rushing down was another pretty sight. Signs now and then told of interesting things that had happened there. There were two resting places on the way, but the children didn't care about resting so we continued on our way. One place where the water was coming from the falls a little spray could be felt as we passed along.

We went to the top and saw where the water came from and also more large stones. When we started back it seemed much harder than going up. Next on our way was the Old Man of the Mountain which was on our left. We parked the car on the right sidt of the road and to get on the other side we had to go through a tunnel, which, no doubt, saved people from accidents in crossing the road. It was sort of cloudy but we had a good view of him, nevertheless. We drove on through the Twin mountains and Crawford Notch and saw the Silver Cascade which was very pretty. We also went through Bretton Woods.

We continued on our way and slept at Bridgton, Me., also in an overnight cabin. In Maine, cabins are licensed and inspected and one has to register the same as in a hotel. We drove 226 miles that day. Friday we left the cabin at 7:30 and had breakfast at Portland, Me. We followed the coast down to Kittery and then to Portsmouth, N. H., and then to Amesbury, Miss., through Haverhill, Lawrence, Lowell, Clinton, and then to South Sudbury where we visited Henry Ford's Wayside Inn.

I will try and write of some of the interesting things as I remembered them. Here they are: Where you pay your entrance fee, (which is 25c) is at the original bar where liquor was served during Washington's time A gun used by a man of the town was shown. He didn't have money enough to buy it, so he gave the town of South Sudbury a note, promising to return the gun to the town, if not lost in battle. The gun was not lost and the man was honest, because the gun was returned and is hanging over the fireplace and the note is framed and hanging on the wall. A maple sugar bucket used by Ex-President Calvin Coolidge, when a boy, is on a bracket with the names of Calvin Coolidge, Grace Coolidge, John Coolidge, Harvey Firestone, Thomas Edison and the Prince of Wales written on it. Pewter and wooden dishes are also seen along with two tined forks, old fashioned cooking utensils, beautiful hooked rugs and also a wooden cradle. In the parlor where Longfellow composed his poem, The Tales of a Wayside Inn, is the original furniture, with the exception of a piano. The inn was owned by the Howe family for years, and when the last of them died, he being a bachelor, the inn and furnishings were sold at public auction. Henry Ford has been very fortunate in tracing the original pieces and buying them back. A grandfather's clock which is 220 years old, is still running, and has the original works in it. A desk used by Daniel Webster is also seen in the parlor, Upstairs there are quiet a few bedrooms. On some of the doors are familiar names of prominent men—Washington, Lafayette and Parson, Cord, canopy and trundle guestsbeds are seen, also. We saw the large ballroom with seats all around the room with covers that raise up, which I supose was to put their wraps in. Over night guests are still taken and meals are served. A lady goes from room to room with a group telling of the interesting articles.

From the inn we looked at the old fashioned garden, which is all walled in. The different kind of flowers I can't remember. We then went to the barn where of course Junior was more than interested. We saw one large dapple gray horse, and a pair of bay horses; also a pair of nice oxen. Outside was a large stage coach. There were sheep in the pasture, and a large stone where corn was ground. I also saw an ox sling, (used to shoe oxen) which was something I had never seen before. We drove up a way and saw a mill with the water wheel turning, and then what do you suppose we saw next? The little red schoolhouse where Mary and her little lamb attended school! We entered and sat at the desks which are very old fashioned. A lady was also there to explain about Mary and the lamb. She said Mary could have gone to school there forever and no one would have thought anything of it, but the lamb made it famous. I wonder how many know the true story of Mary and the lamb? I'm sure I didn't, until it was told to me by this lady. This is what she told to us: Mary found a sick lamb and nursed it back to health. Each day the lamb would bid them goodbye as they left for school. So one day, Nat, Mary's brother said: "Let's take the lamb to school?" Mary must have agreed because the lamb went to school. The lamb went to sleep under Mary's desk before the teacher arrived. During class, Mary was called upon to recite and when the lamb heard Mary's voice you can imagine the children and Mary's face as red as a beet and wishing she was somewhere beside where she was. A boy who was preparing for college was visiting at the school that day, and the next day he handed Mary a note with the poem, "Mary Had a Little Lamb," on it. Some other lady wrote 14 more verses to it. I can't remember them all but the moral is "Be Kind to Animals," as Mary was when she nursed the lamb back to health.

A picture of Mary Tyler was shown us at the age of 78. I believe she lived to be 82 and had no children. By the way, at the inn we were told Paul Revere was the father of 16 children and had 21 different trades. (I guess he needed them). The original school bell was rung for us and a small piece of yarn which had been unraveled from a pair of stockings which was made from the wool of the lamb. The books are on the shelves, but are not used. By the way, school is held there in winter. There are two pupils in each grade up to the sixth. I believe. One day a week they are taken to the inn and taught old fashioned dances. Mr. Ford pays all expenses and parents in South Sudbury are invited to hand in the names of their children and the grade they are in and when there is a vacancy another child is taken in. If I lived in South Sudbury I would surely hand my children's name in. To anyone who has never been there please do so. You will find many more interesting things that I perhape have left out. It is closed on Sundays. When Henry Ford visits this way he stays at the inn. I think this place made an impression on my children that they will never forget, even if they are only five and three years old. From South Sudbury we came to Marlboro, then to Worcester, Webster and then home by way of Putnam, Danielson, Plainfield and Jewett City. We arrived at 8:30 —285 miles that day. Our trip was 750 miles. From the inn to our house is about 97 miles. Perhaps some one else could write a more interesting letter about the place but I'm sure I tried my best. I forgot to mention that in Maine and Vermont houses, sheds and barns are all joined so in a severe snow storm they can reach the barn and not have to go in the deep snow. In Maine and Massachusetts most every wayside lunch stand had fried clams or barbeque advertised. Best wishes to all. RAVENA.

USING UP THE GRAIN BAGS

Dear Social Corner: I think it is time to write a few lines. Summer seems to bring so many more duties than winter, especially the canning season, and how fortunate the ones are that have their shelves filled with the many good things for the table. It means work but it is worth it, and we can look at them and truly say how wonderfully blessed we are.

I was reading a letter on how to get the lettering out of the white grain bags and was interested, and want to try it, because they are hard to get out generally. The bags can be used in so many many ways. I make dish towels out of some and simply hem them and then some for face towels on which I put a hem of some tub-fast gingham or other cloth. Then I make some square and put a two-inch fold of some nice colored goods and it becomes a luncheon set with napkins to match. I also make pillow cases and crochet a simple edge on them, something that is quickly made. It looks more finished. I also make aprons. I bind them with colored binding and put a square of the binding in front and on pockets. It makes them look nicer. I find many ways of using the cloth.

My sister gave me a nice pattern for a patch quilt, also using the grain bags for squares about eight inches square. I cut a butterfly out of pieces of percale and buttonhole them down with black fadeless crochet thread. I make black bars across the body and two feelers of the same. It will make a nice quilt when done. Someone may be interested in it.

I was reading about Bee True being shut in. How fortunate the blind husband is to have a good wife to read to him and how happy she must be to be able to make him happy.

The Social Corner must be a great pleasure for her, there are so many things of interest in its pages.

Health and happiness to all is the wishes from STEPELIA.

AUTUMN ON THE WAY

Dear Social Corner Editor: Thank you for the check—it arrived on my birthday so I called it a birthday gift. Don't ask me how old I am though. That is a very dim, very dark secret.

Did you know that autumn is on the way? Jack Frost nearly nipped us the other morning but he was routed by one of those heavy fogs which have been hovering over us so frequently in the past few weeks.

I've been picking the cranberries—there aren't many on this place; I got nearly two pecks and that is the most we have had from the bed in some time. They are in an open, sunny place so they were colored up well. The boys are looking forward to having some cranberry pies.

When there is danger of frost the front yard beds must be covered. There isn't anything much tenderer than cannas and salvia. We will use long strips of burlap to tuck them in this year. I don't cover things out in my garden—the trees shade the plants till late in the morning at this time of year so it takes a real freeze to kill anything.

Some people have "nerve," haven't they? A man was picking grapes beside the road near a house and he went to the house to ask for a box to put his stolen grapes in!

We won't get many wild grapes this year, the late frost in the spring touched them just as they were in bloom and killed the blooms.

Thank you, R. E. B. for giving the complete verse and the author's name. I wonder why it is we see such poems quoted so often when the author's name is not given? It seems to me that much interest is added when we know who the author was and something about him. I was interested in the "Story Behind the Song" letters that one of the sisters wrote last spring and was sorry that she didn't write more of them.

Here is an optimistic little verse which I like (author unknown).

Let the howlers howl, and the growlers growl, and the prowlers prowl, and the geegaws go it.
Behind the night is plenty of light and things are all right and I know it!

PERNICKETY.

FINE TIME, FINE DINNER

Dear Social Corner Sisters and Editor: It has been a long time since I have written to the Corner and I hope I have not been crossed off the roll. We had a fine time at the meeting last Tuesday and a nice dinner; many thanks to the hostess and her helpers.

This month is very busy for some of us, getting things done up brown before old Jack Frost takes them. House cleaning is a question, but we all have it on our lists.

One of the new events that some are looking forward to is the grange fair.

Sometime ago several of the sisters spoke about having a Corner picnic then, but now we can have a get-together.

I will close now hoping to see a full page of letters next week from all the sisters.

AUNT MARY JANE (Club 2)

A TRIP TO DEVIL'S HOPYARD

Dear Readers of Our Social Corner: Vacations are over and again the business men and women go back to their offices or looms or whatever their occupation is. Schools have opened for another year, and with some students it is a pleasure to strap up their books and lunch boxes; and again, there is the child who leaves home so reluctantly. There is a small brother or the playful puppy or some other attraction, he is leaving. It is to me sometimes a sad scene, to watch the child start for school the first day. But of course that is only one of their life's problems and almost always sooner or later the child becomes interested in some of his subjects, if not all and he welcomes the next day and is happy that he is able to go to school and get an education, one of the most essential things in life.

I have found an old composition book I had when I went to that little white schoolhouse with only one door. In turning the pages of the well-preserved book I read different songs, recitations and quotations. I wish to send one to the Social Corner page and some other week I will send another providing our kind editor is willing to print them.

Tish: I will speak with you first. I congratulate you and you most certainly deserved the prize. If you had not received one after describing your terrible, tedious, tiresome trip, I should have thought something had gone wrong up at the office. You surely have that sense of humor many of us wish for but few possess.

One day the past week, friends invited us to their house for the day. After eating a most appetizing dinner we left the dishes for the very amiable and willing son to do and his parents' little brother and my family, (there were six of us. Thank goodness there were no more of us) left their home for the drive they had planned.

Soon we were going through New London, on and on until we came to Lake Konomoc. We took Route 102 toward Colchester.

Soon we came to four corners. We read the sign, the one in which we were mostly interested—"Devil's Hopyard." Such a terrible name for such a beautiful place! Turning to our left on a narrow dirt road we soon came to Camp Haywood. At present the water is low so it is not quite so pretty as it is in the springtime. At this lake, people are buying lots and building summer cottages. Then on and on we drove, down, down hill all the way with now and then that sign "Devil's Hopyard."

After a few more moments of suspense and wondering if the road led to a bottomless pit we saw an extra large sign with the then very familiar words. There was an open field in which numerous cars were being parked. That was the place, so we also parked. We were thirsty and soon we found a pump and helped ourselves to the cool water that came from a spring nearby. We crossed the road and to our right was the ledge out of which water is constantly flowing and dashing. At this time of the year a small amount flows, but when the falls are at their best they are a miniature Niagara.

The first thing of interest we discovered was the impression of a very large boot. Of course it was a freak of nature, but the smallest member of our party thought it might be the track of the Seven-league boot worn by the giant in the story of "Jack the Giant Killer."

As the water was low we had a chance to walk around the bottom and explore. Every once in a few steps we saw bowls or urns, some two or three feet deep and two feet across and others were the size of our pint bowls, these bowls were formed in the ledge by the ever-flowing, dashing and pounding of the water-fall. It must have taken ages and ages for nature's hand to mould such perfect shapes out of solid rock. I brought home one of the tiny rock ferns which is still living in a glass of water.

We went back to the car and started on our way home. We kept straight ahead down narrow, yet, very good road for quite a little way. We thought the road was made through a spruce forest for the density of woods on our right while at our left for a long way a pretty brook flowed along and now and then we saw children playing in its shallow waters. A little way beyond we saw a picnic party had taken advantage of the stillness and of the shade of the spruce and hemlock forest. The branches are so thickly matted together that it is impossible for the sun to penetrate.

Soon we were at the terminal of our "Land of Fairies and Giants" for if there were ever such things that must have been one of their playgrounds; coming out on the state road we drove through Haddam and on for some distance until we came to Gardner's lake. I need not describe this place as space is limited and so many of the readers know about it. Soon the sun in the west told us it was time to go home and at six we were safe in our own yard.

The state now owns the Devil's Hopyard and it is one of the state parks. If you are interested in the works of nature you should not miss this particular place of interest.

GREETINGS FROM WOODSIDE

Dear Social Corner Editor and Members: It was the last Saturday in April that E. Pluribus Unum and I joined the Corner. I have enjoyed the Corner so much more and had two very pleasant surprises as a result of joining, that I am glad to welcome our next two new members, Old Town and Mothernort.

Old Town: Something in your letter made me think that only a few miles separate our homes.

Canterbury Bell: Thanks for information about beets.

Aries: It looks as if I ought to change my pen name to Wooden Head. How stupid of me. One of my turkeys stole her nest and just came off with eight turkeys. You know the rest of the story.

I hope to see the Corner page full. My sympathy to all shut-ins.

WOODSIDE.

GETTING OUT OF A TIGHT PINCH

Dear Corner Sisters: Sometime or life we find ourselves in a tight pinch; usually at the wrong time, too. The following is such a situation. How it was solved may be of interest to some of you.

In the attic stood an old bed-spring and a mattress. Both were too good to discard, yet there was no bedstead for their use. In the cellar were a number of wooden boxes that only cluttered up the place.

Between the cellar and the attic was an empty room in need of furnishing. But, alas, alack! The pocketbook was in the same fix with the room.

Guests were coming. That room simply had to be furnished to lodge them, that is if the entire family wasn't to be discommoded. The room itself wasn't in bad condition. A good cleaning made it just about perfect. A nasty grease spot was removed from the lovely cream colored satiny wallpaper by placing a piece of blotting paper over the spot and running a very hot iron over it.

The white-painted woodwork was made to look like new by washing it with water in which two or three onions had been boiled. Onion water, by the way, is a magic cleaner for white paint.

The floor was a stained and varnished one. It was washed, and when dry, polished with a wax made by melting all the stumpy candle ends found in the house, and combining just enough turpentine with them to form a soft creamy paste. The polishing device was two heavy, old-fashioned flatirons wrapped, side by side in a piece of old carpet, an old broomstick attached to the iron-handles with a heavy wire. After drawing this device back and forth across the floor, with the grain of the wood (never cross grain), the floor shone like a newly varnished one.

Now for the furnishing. Four even-sized boxes were brought up from the cellar. The bed-pring was placed on these, one box under each corner of the spring. A shirred valance of cretonne, reaching to the floor, was fastened all around the edge of the spring. This completely hid the boxes. The mattress was put on top of the spring, dressed with sheets, blankets, and pillows, and covered with a spread made of unbleached muslin appliqued with the cretonne: a large motif in the center of the part covering the bed, an oblong one on the part folding over the pillows, and a band all around the edge of the bed, sort of outling it. The spread hung down loosely several inches over the valance. So much for the bed. A dressing table was the next concern. For this, the sewing machine was pressed into service. It was a drop-head, treadle model. A valance of the cretonne was attached to the edge of the front and sides of the machine. The back against the wall didn't, of course require one. The valance came to the floor and completely hid the treadle and all. When the cover, made of unbleached muslin and appliqued with the cretonne, was added, no one dreamed it to be the old sewing machine.

Another search in the attic brought forth an old picture frame and an old cracked mirror. By fitting the mirror to the frame the cracked part was eliminated. The fame was painted white, and there was a new mirror to hang over the dressing table.

An old battered looking Bar Harbor chair was treated to several coats of white paint. Fat comfortable cushions for seat and back were made of the cretonne, and there was a comfy chair. The other chair was a common wooden kitchen one. It, too, was painted white and dressed up with a cretonne seat and back. It looked quite aristocratic standing in front of the dressing table.

What to do for a bedside table was at first a problem. Finally, a nice smooth box, just the right size for such a table, furnished inspiration. The box was placed, cover fashion, over the handles of four hocky sticks, five cent ones, the sort children play with. The sticks weer fastened to the corners of the box, the curved bottoms of the sticks pointing outward. A bit was taken off the ends of the curves. They seemed too long for good effect. A shelf, made of one inch board, was fastened to the sticks about 15 inches above the floor. This gave strength and firmness to the table. A gay, modish medallion was painted on the front apron of the table-top, and two glass knobs were edded to simulate a drawer. Another gay medallion was painted on the shelf top. An unbleached muslin cretonne appliqued scarf was made to lay across the top of the table. The 5 and 10 yielded the makings of a darling boudoir lamp to stand on the table. Two lovely glass candlestick holders, in Colonial design, together with candles and shades, to place on the dressing table, were found in the same shop.

Curtains were cut sash length from an old pair of the ruffled variety. This incidentally did away with the worn places. The curtains were dipped in a weak coffee solution to make them match in shade with the unbleached muslin. A lambrequin, and tie-backs of the cretonne gave the distinctive touch.

Braided rag-rugs were made and used, scattered here and there, as floor covering. The rags first being dyed to match the deepest shades in the cretonne.

"The price of this room?" you ask. Heaps of fun and satisfaction! In dollars, less than what the prices of the cheapest single piece of furniture would have been. IRVA LYNN.

ALWAYS SOME WORSE OFF THAN WE ARE

Dear Social Corner Editor, Sisters and Friends: Another glorious day and I am back at school on the job after a summer of work and pleasure. First, I want to say, I was very happy to have such a nice crowd at my picnic Aug. 28. Everybody says they had such a good time. I want to tell you one and all you had no better time being entertained than I had entertaining you. Hope to have you all again next year. I have been

TIRED people . . .

So MANY WOMEN, so many men can barely finish out the day. Even mid-afternoon finds them tired . . . listless.

What a difference if they only realized the importance of correct diet. Diet which contains enough "bulk" to rid the system of poisons that sap strength and lead to serious disease!

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN supplies this needed "bulk" to millions of happy, energetic people. It is the largest-selling all-bran cereal on the market. It prevents and relieves both temporary and recurring constipation.

Try it—and notice the difference in the way you feel. Eat Kellogg's ALL-BRAN daily—three times daily in severe cases. Relief is guaranteed. Look for the red-and-green package at your grocer's. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

DRIVE BY BEARS SENT PRICES DOWN IN LAST HALF HOUR OF STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—(AP)—Stocks ran into a bear drive in the last half hour of today's market and earlier gains of a point or two were exchanged for net losses of about the same extent in the active shares.

Reduction of the short interest during the recent advances had impaired the technical position and the bulls, finding that little support was at hand from covering operations or from public participation, were apparently content to stand aside. Total sales of 1,305,000 shares were larger than yesterday's, but considerably under the higher totals of earlier in the week when prices were rising.

Movements up to noon were largely indecisive. Buying of the utility and specialty stocks stimulated activity and by early afternoon the market had reached its highest levels of the day. Weakness of wheat, corn and cotton helped set the stage for the late selling, which assumed some vigor. A rally near the close lacked strength and failed to hold.

September wheat broke to 80 3-4 cents a bushel, a new low for the season, and failed to make much of a recovery, closing 1 1-8 off. Other futures lost nearly a cent. Corn was heavy, 1 3-8 to 2 1-2 cents net lower. Cotton finished with net losses of 19 to 33 points, equivalent to 95 cents to $1.65 a bale.

The merchandising group on the big board was unsettled by Sears Roebuck's sales report for the four weeks ending September 10. This showed a decline of 14.1 per cent from the same period of 1929 and although there was a 10.6 per cent rise over the previous interval this seasonal improvement contrasted with a 17.6 per cent gain for the corresponding four weeks a year ago. On the other hand, Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea's August sales set a new high for that month.

Copper shares were in supply after publication of the statistics on refined stocks at hand September 1, revealing an increase of 25,649 tons to a total of 347,688 tons, or more than three times the aggregate for the same date last year. Consumers of the red metal, it was said, are virtually out of the market.

The weekly trade reviews said there had been further gains in several lines. Dun's found it possible to take "a more hopeful view of the outlook," adding that this better feeling was supported by "expectations of improvement to come and some tangible instances of present gains," according to Bradstreet's, industry is holding "most of the gains previously indicated and there has been additional improvement in wholesale purchasing."

Several of the market's leading stocks came out of their recent narrow ranges with losses of one to two points. Among them were American Can, American Telephone, General Electric, Westinghouse Electric, Atchison, Union Pacific and Public Service of New Jersey. A. M. Byers, Foster Wheeler and Columbian Carbon lost 3 to 4. Pennsylvania Railroad and Sears Roebuck yielded a point. U. S. Steel, after selling 1 1-4 higher on the rally, broke a point net lower and closed with a loss of 1-2, which was the extent of General Motors' decline.

Newton Steel was again a strong feature, rallying six points on buying accompanied by reports that another steel company controlled by the Eaton-Otis interests was seeking its acquisition. The stock's net gain was 4 points. Auto Strop Safety Razor was active and Wall street revived talk of a merger of that concern with Gillette.

Foreign exchanges turned heavy. Sterling cables sagged 1-4 cent and the German mark eased to a new 1930 low at 23.81 1-2 cents for cables.

MONEY

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—(AP)—Call money steady, 2 1-2 per cent all day. Time loans steady, 30 days, 2a3 1-4; 60 days, 2 1-4a2 1-2; 90 days, 2 1-2a2 3-4; 4 months, 3 3-4a3; 5-6 months, 3 per cent. Prime commercial paper, 3a3 1-4. Bankers' acceptances, unchanged.

Treasury Balance

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12—(AP)—Treasury receipts for Sept. 10 were $7,441,760.83; expenditures $14,302,829.00; balance $36,203,546.66.

THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—(AP)—Shares traded on the curb market fluctuated uncertainly today, and the more active issues generally closed a point or so lower, in sympathy with a decisive downturn on the big board in the last hour. Transfers aggregated 450,000 shares.

Recent firm spots in the electrical power and the gas group were active features, and generally encountered selling pressure in the late trading. Electric Bond and Share, United Light A, American Gas and Electric, Consolidated Gas of Baltimore and Missouri Kansas Pipe Line lost about a point each. American Super Power, United Gas and Niagara Hudson closed with losses of about 1-2 point. Electric Power and Light warrants, however, were up about 1 at the finish, and Duke Power gained 5.

Several of the lightly traded specialties were practically inactive in the late trading and failed to reflect the late decline. Cooper Bessemer, Irving Air Chute, Lehigh Coal and Navigation and Orange Crush showed net advances of about a point. A. O. Smith gained 4, and Pratt and Lambert, 4. Struthers Wells gained 3 points. Its first half earnings, reported at $1.61 a share against $2.13 last year, were evidently better than expected.

A weak feature was American Cyanamid B, which dropped more than 3 points to a new low at 16 1-8, compared to the year's peak of 37, on omission of the dividend. Morrison Electrical Supply dropped six and Noma Electric, 1 5-8 to new lows, in a few sales.

In the investment trusts, Corporation Securities company, of Chicago, and Goldman Sachs trading, each lost a point. Oils were largely neglected. Cities Service and Vacuum each yielded 1-4. Humble gained 1-2, and Gulf was about steady.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, Sept. 12.—(AP)—Grain prices in Chicago were struck down today by an epidemic of selling fever which afflicted every major grain market in the world. The ailment left all grains weak with little strength left for rallies. Selling was persistent throughout the session here, but it came mostly in small lots. All deliveries of wheat in Chicago sounded new depths as they plunged into the lowest levels of the season. Winnipeg wheat prices were even lower and Liverpool also registered new lows. Support for the market, such as it was, came mainly from commission houses with standing orders to buy at various fixed levels as the market went down. Corn was afflicted with the same illness which sent wheat crashing down and likewise was without support.

Wheat closed weak at 5-8a1 1-8c net lower than yesterday's final quotations. Corn finished at almost the bottom prices of the day, 1 1-8a2 5-8c down, oats 3-4a1 1-8c off, rye 7-8a1 3-8c lower, and provisions ranged from unchanged to a decline of 10c.

Provisions averaged lower, sympathizing with grain weakness and because of selling.

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—(AP)—Commercial failures for the week, although slightly lower than the preceding full week, were higher than for the corresponding week last year, R. G. Dun and company reports. Insolvencies this week totaled 463, against 471 two weeks ago. Last week, because of the Labor day holiday, the returns covered five business days only, and showed 336 defaults. A year ago there were 397 failures.

Directors of the Ward Baking corporation, in a letter to stockholders, stated that no proposition has been submitted to them looking toward a merger with any other company or for the acquisition by any group of individuals of any stock ownership in the corporation. The letter, an answer to published reports that George K. Morrow interest, including some stockholders, were seeking control of the corporation, said Mr. Morrow stated he does not intend to invest any money in Ward stock. The directors said that they "stand ready to give careful consideration to any proposal for acquiring control where all stockholders will have equal opportunity to share in any possible benefits of such change," but added that "no such proposal has been made."

ECHOES FROM THE LODGE ROOM

CATHOLIC LADIES OF COLUMBUS

On Sunday, September 7th, the state board of directors of the Catholic Ladies of Columbus, of Connecticut, met at the Hotel Garde, Hartford. After a dinner at noon the representatives retired to the green room where the business session was held. Plans for the annual convention were perfected. It is to be held, this year in New London on October 11 and 12. The headquarters will be at the Mohican hotel. The business sessions will be held in the rooms of the diocesan bureau of the social service on Jay street.

Convention will open on Friday night at which time the Mercier Assembly degree and drill teams of Norwich will be present to confer degrees upon a large class of visiting candidates. Convention high mass will be celebrated at St. Mary's church. The banquet will be served in the main dining room of the Mohican hotel, Saturday evening.

It was also announced that the $50 in gold, divided into three prizes of $26-$15-$10, have been awarded this year to the three students of St. Thomas' Seminary, Hartford, whose essays on "The Catholic as a Character Builder," were deemed the most creditable.

The next issue of "The Beacon is being prepared for the press and will be ready for distribution at convention time.

Mercier Assembly was represented at this meeting by Miss Lucy Murphy, state treasurer and Miss Margaret R. Sullivan, state director.

GROTTO

Saturday, November 1st, has been designated as the date of Nemrod's next ceremonial. At the next meeting on Monday, Sept. 15, plans will be discussed to make November 1st a red letter day on Nemrod's calendar. Past Monarch Everett Peckham is chairman of the ceremonial committee and already a good number of candidates have been lined up. Other fall activities will also be discussed at this meeting including Nemrod's attendance at the 25th anniversary of Zem-Zem Grotto at Jersey City, N. J., on Saturday, Sept. 27th and the fall ceremonial of Long Island Grotto at Brooklyn, N. Y., on Saturday, Oct. 25th.

DEGREE OF POCAHONTAS

Sebequanosh council, No. 11, met in the Buckingham Memorial, Wednesday evening, with a large attendance. Plans were made for the Past Officers' night on the 24th of September. The hotel rates were received for the Great Council session to be held in Winsted the 14th and 15th of October. Word has been received that Great Pocahontas Mary Johnson is very ill at her home in Middletown, but all are hoping she can be with the order at Winsted. After the meeting an auction was planned, Sister Mary Thompson as auctioneer. A large sum was realized. Thursday evening five of the members trailed to New London to the past officers' night of Hiawatha council, No. 15.

FOREIGN WAR VETERANS

The fourth district county council of the Veterans of Foreign Wars held its regular monthly meeting last Wednesday evening, at the post rooms in the Olympic building which was fairly well attended a very small percentage of council delegates being absent. County Commander Leo L. Jacques presided over the meeting. Reports were heard on the national encampment recently held at Baltimore, Md. These reports were of great interest to the comrades especially the change of post elections to the first meeting in October. State Commander Albert M. Simons was present and addressed the post and auxiliary. Commander Simons, always a good talker, proved a very interesting person to listen to. His action is abolishing quarterly meetings was clearly understood to the extent that the council went on record as heartily endorsing his attitude. He also spoke on the matter of a Connecticut cottage at the V. F. W. home at Eaton Rapids, Michigan, and explained his plans for obtaining the home. Several other important matters were brought to the attention of the comrades and explained. Past County Council Commander John A. Connor of New London was presented a past commanders' badge by Commander Simons, in behalf of the council. After the meeting refreshments was served by the auxiliary.

It seems necessary to bring to the comrades attention the fact that approximately 500,000 veterans have thus far failed to make application for the twenty-year paid up insurance policy, known as the World war adjusted compensation certificate and more popularly recognized as the world war "bonus." In a statement issued by Edwin S. Bettelheim, Jr., chairman, national legislative committee of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States. World war veterans are reminded of the fact that legislation adopted by the recent session of congress makes them again eligible to apply for adjusted service compensation. This new legislation extends the closing date of January 1, 1930, to January 1, 1935.

Parents or dependents of veterans who died since the Armistice in 1918 without applying for their adjusted compensation are entitled to immediate cash payment of the so-called bonus which the deceased was eligible to cleam. The adjusted compensation certificate was granted to World war veterans in 1924 in lieu of a cash bonus. The certificate matures in a period of twenty years after which time the face value in cash is turned over to the veteran. Each certificate bears a loan value two years after date of issuance and the manner in which the great majority of World war veterans have already found it necessary to seek government loans on their adjusted service compensation certificates has given birth to a demand for immediate cash payment in full of all outstanding certificates.

UNITED COMMERCIAL TRAVELERS

Thames Valley council, No. 509, had one of its best times at the annual picnic which was held at Cinderella inn, with a shore dinner as one of the chief attractions and a ball game between the Norwich and New London members as another. For the first time in the history of the order, the New London boys won the game, the score being 19 to 4. Past Senior Councilor was the umpire.

The council is to hold its first meeting in September on Saturday evening, Sept. 13 at the Mohican hotel in New London.

WOMAN'S RELIEF CORPS

The regular meeting of Sedgwick Woman's Relief Corps, No. 16, was held Friday in the Buckingham memorial with the president, Mrs. Iola Bjurstrom, in the chair. Members who attended the annual picnic at the W. R. L. home at Cromwell gave interesting accounts of their visit. Final arrangements were completed for the wayside fair and supper to be held soon. The meeting closed with the salute to the flag.

PATRONS OF HUSBANDRY

Norwich grange, No. 172, held its regular meeting Wednesday evening with Worthy Master Albert W. Lillibridge presiding. All officers were present with an attendance of 130 patrons. Frederick Armstrong, chairman of the fair committee, reported much progress and hoped all entries and exhibits would be in early. Also volunteers to help on Wednesday and Thursday, Sept. 17-18, to help prepare booths, etc., for the fair. The lecturer gave a very interesting report of the lecturers' conference held at Durham, N. H. The auxiliary held an all-day meeting Wednesday and completed much work for the fair. The lecturer's program was in the hands of Miss Bernice Underwood, as follows: Song, by the grange; violin solo, Theodore Sterry, accompanied by Mrs. Abbie Olsen; a vocal solo, Mrs. Miriam Beckwith, in costume of long ago, accompanied by Mrs. Kingsley; piano duet, Miss Nellie Howie and Mrs. Abbie Olsen; tenor solo, Frederick Maples, accompanied by Mrs. Mabel Stebbins; quartet numbers, Miss Bernice Underwood, James Lockhart, Mrs. Ida Richardson, Frederick Armstrong; banjo numbers, Mr. Cobb and Mr. Tieshac; a humorous song and encore, Mrs. Clara Burke; reading, with violin accompaniment, Beulah Rogers and Theodore Sterry; reading, Miss Louise Avery. By request, Mrs. Matilda Russell entertained with two popular numbers and received great applause. Several applications were received for membership. Refreshments were served by Division A, consisting of peach shortcake and coffee

MOOSEHEART LEGION

Women of Mooseheart Legion held their regular meeting Thursday evening in Moose Home, with Senior Regent Margaret Comire presiding. Past Regent Teresa Watters reported the welfare work as completed satisfactorily. Legionnaire Ida Eccleston and Brother Harris Eccleston, of Willimantic, will leave for Moosehaven Sunday and Chapter 124 wishes them God-speed and a safe journey. Plans were made to start the fall activities for the chapter immediately. The first meeting in October will be past regents' night. There will be an entertainment after the business meeting in honor of all past regents of Chapter 124.

EAST HADDAM

Mr. and Mrs. William J. Thomas, and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Ziobron, spent the week end on a motor trip over the Mohawk Trail.

Aurelis Canera, of Guayaquil, Ecuador, was a recent visitor at the Undine Twin Mills, Inc.

William Hawkins and family of Newark, N. J., spent the week end at their summer home.

Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Bailey and daughter spent Sunday at Quonochontaug Beach, R. I.

Mrs. Jennie Ambler, of New Haven, was a recent guest of a former school mate, Miss Lucy Parker.

Mrs. Charlotte Olmstead has gone to Middletown to make her home with her sister, Mrs. F. A. Andrews. Her daughter, Miss Mary Olmstead, who has spent the summer here, has returned to her school duties in Hartford.

Mrs. Meyer Bunstein, who is in a hospital in Middletown, for treatment, is improving.

Weather bureau experts say that weather conditions have not changed perceptibility within historic times, despite popular beliefs that winters used to be colder and summers hotter a generation or two ago.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.— (AP)— Inquiry for high grade bonds was a little more active today, as money rates pointed downward, with the piling up of funds at the banks in preparation for the September 15 treasury financing, and income tax payments.

This was counter-balanced by selling of the convertibles, and some of the more speculative, issues, in sympathy with stocks, however, and possibly by liquidation to meet the quarterly tax payments, so that prices in the aggregate were about unchanged at the finish. The day's transfers aggregated $8,818,000 par value.

Call money was decidedly the most plentiful of any time this week, but the official rate was maintained at 2 1-2 per cent, money in the outside market was freely offered at 1 1-2 per cent. The turnover of funds on Monday is expected to amount to some $1,250,000,000, and if the government makes a substanfial overdraft at the federal reserve, the money market may be flooded for several days.

U. S. government issues attracted the most active inquiry of the week, and the Liberty 4 1-4s reached new highs. The foreign dollar bonds were fairly active, but trends were somewhat irregular. The advance in the Argentine 6s was interrupted by profit-taking, but the 5s moved up a point. Brazilian issues rallied substantially. High grade Europeans were in fair demand, and showed little change.

Rails were the most active features of the domestic liens. With the interest payment on the St. Paul adjustment 5s settled, the St. Paul issues were active and firm. The 4 3-4s sold up 1-2 to a new high, and the 5s of 1957 gained 1-4. The adjustment 5s were unchanged at 54 1-4 at the close. The Seaboard Air Line issues, however, were distinctly heavy. This carrier is said not to be earning its fixed charges. The refunding 4s dropped 4 3-4 points to the year's low at 40. Convertibles generally eased with stocks. Baltimore and Ohio convertible 4 1-2s, and Rock Island convertible 4 1-2s were off minor fractions. Most of the high grade liens were steady to firm, some at new highs.

In the industrials, the American Cynamid 5s lost a point on the omission of dividends on the class A and B stocks. American Metals 5 1-2s eased a little. Several utility issues were in good demand. Among the less active Keystone Telephone 5s rose nearly 4 points to a new high at 90. Niagara Falls Power 6s rose 2 3-4 to a ne wpeak and Utah Power and Light 5s rose 3-4 to touch 101, a new peak. Abitibi 5s and American and Foreign Power 5s were firm. In the oils, Shell Union 5s fell back close to the year's low.

TO START OCEAN FLIGHT TODAY IF WEATHER PERMITS

MONTREAL, Sept. 12—(AP)—Errol Boyd and Harry P. Connor prepared tonight to take off at dawn for Harbor Grace, N. F., there to leave as soon as weather permits on a flight to London.

Their ship is the monoplane in which Clarence Chamberlin flew its owner, Charles A. Levine, to Germany in 1927. It has begun two other Atlantic flights.

NEW LONDON CITY MANAGER FINDS PATROLMAN WATTERSON NOT GUILTY

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 12—City Manager William A. Holt late today notified Capt. Charles A. Pinney that Patrolman Harry Waterson, against whom charges of neglect of duty were recently made by the patrolman's superior officer, had been found not guilty for the city manager stated that the evidence supplied him on the alleged conduct of the officer, was not sufficient to warrant disciplinary measures being taken. As a result, the officer was ordered to resume duty. Watterson was suspended Sept. 4. He had obtained permission to be off duty Sept. 1 and 2 and was supposed to have reported at 10.20 a. m., Sept. 3. He failed to do so and at 3.30 o'clock he communicated with police headquarters, stating that he would be compelled to be absent from duty a few days as he was in New York for the purpose of entering a hospital for a minor throat operation.

Monday, Watterson was given a hearing and when he informed the city manager that he could produce the certificate of the physician who attended him in New York and thereby prove his statement for remaining away from duty, the officer was given that opportunity. He presented the certificate this forenoon and this afternoon the city manager rendered decision.

Attachments recently placed on property on Woodbridge street as a result of suits having been brought by Deputy Sheriff Manual J. Martin and Peter Falmisano against Luigi Cardillo, were released today, according to papers filed in the office of the city clerk.

J. A. Deschine, a sailor, was in the police court today charged with breach of the peace, the charge being the result of Deshine entertaining the idea last night that attendants at a dance hall enjoyed dancing of the hula-hula type. When Deschine persisted in standing in the middle of the floor and going through a form of dance that would make him eligible for an exhibition at a circus side show, Patrolman William Riordan was summoned. The officer saw the dance exhibition of Deschine and arrested him. When the nature of Deschine's conduct was revealed in court, Judge Daniel M. Cronin imposed a fine of $5

John Valpe, New York, was charged with violation of the traffic laws in failing to stop at an automatic traffic signal, corner of Bank and Howard streets, having been arrested last night by Patrolman Joseph Sullivan. He did not appear in court and his bond of $5 was forfeited.

Theresa Rusnock, 21, of Laicyville, Pa., was charged with vagrancy but because of means having been provided so the girl had transportation to New York, the charge was nolled.

Bernard Colerti, of Wakefield, R. I., was charged with violation of the state motor vehicle law in driving without registration. Coletri, who was arrested on Bank street last night by Patrolman Arthur Powell, was given suspension of judgment.

Habekotta Lets City Have $2

William F. Habekotta, 451 Main street, formerly of Norwich, was charged with violation of the city's traffic laws. As he failed to present himself in court his bond of $2 was forfeited.

Nicholas Trafaconti, Boston, charged with peddling without having obtained a license was fined $5. He was arrested last night by Patrolman Arthur Feeley. Trafaconti came to New London during the day and had a large quantity of cigars in his possession. He started out to sell his merchandise, but as he had failed to obtain a license at police headquarters eh was arrested on State street.

A bay rum drinker, arrested on the municipal pier last night, was charged with intoxication and was fined $10 and costs. He went to jail.

BLOCKED AMBULANCE— CORSON PAYS FINE AND COSTS

Ernest B. Corson, Ocean avenue, was in the police court this morning charged with obstructing an ambulance. He was fined $5 and costs. Corson was driving on Ocean avenue last evening at a time when the police ambulance, driven by Patrolman Frank Philopena, was rushing to Lawrence-Memorial hospital with John Davidson, a former painter in the employ of the Thames Towboat Co., who had been thrown beneath a New Haven railroad passenger train, crushing his right leg. Whenever the ambulance was speeded and an attempt was made to pass Corson's auto, which was proceeding in the same direction, Corson would swerve in front of the ambulance and despite, repeated sounding of the siren, Corson refused to give the ambulance the right of way. The markers on the auto were noted by Philopena and when the car was found parked on North Bank street an hour later it was tagged. Notification was given Corson to present himself at police headquarters. Corson ignored the summons when he returned to the auto, so this forenoon he was arrested.

On Critical List

The condition of Davidson was reported at the hospital this evening as very serious; the man is on the critical list.

Mrs. John P. Giaccum, East Orange, N. J., has returned home, having been a guest of Miss Kathryn Prindeville, superintendent of Lawrence-Memorial hospital.

Cutillo Hearing Next Week

Carmine Cutillo, of Hope street, Niantic, who was arrested by state police officers yesterday, following his discharge at Lawrence-Memorial hospital, was given a hearing in the East Lyme justice court last night charged with driving while under the influence of liquor. Cutillo was allowed his freedom on his own recognizance and will be tried in court next week. Cutillo was driver of an automobile last Saturday night in Niantic which collided with a car driven by Frank Power, 556 Bank street, this city, so the other car was forced to the opposite side of the highway, to collide head-on with a machine driven by James Buck, also of Niantic. Seven of the occupants of the autos, including Cutillo, were injured and were brought to the New London hospital for treatment.

JUDGE PRINCE UNOPPOSED FOR PROBATE NOMINATION

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 12.—The republican probate convention for New London and Waterford was held this noon at the county court house. Judge S. Victor Prince was renominated for judge of probate. The nomination was made by Miss Madeline Freeman and was seconded by Attorney Morris Lubchansky. Judge Prince was brought before the convention and extended his thanks in being again honored with the nomination. Frederic W. Mercer, Miss Madeline Freeman and William D. Harris were elected a probate committee for two years. At the adjournment of the convention Judge Prince entertained the delegates and guests at a luncheon at the Hotel Mohican.

A still alarm was received at fire headquarters yesterday afternoon when a plot of grass on the Dolan premises, 675 Ocean avenue, was discovered ablaze. Ockford Hose company subdued the fire with chemicals before damage resulted.

Mrs. P. R. Whiton, of Niantic, a patient at Home Memorial hospital, was discharged today.

Mrs. Rosemary O. Anderson, of the Hotel Mohican apartments, is spending a few days in New York.

Samuel Prince, agent for real estate at 45 Fourth street, East New London, today made complaint to the police that recently 18 windows in the house were destroyed, presumably by boys hurling stones through the glass.

Joseph Menghi, 35 Menghie street; Morton Munna, 158 Parkway; Mrs. Harry Decker, Waterford; Mrs. Victor Frederick, 33 Walbach street; Helen Cutler, Mystic; Jean Chappell, Black Point, patients at Lawrence-Memorial hospital, were discharged today.

An official of the Pequot Laundry Co., Pequot avenue, today made complaint to Automobile Patrol Officer William Corcoran because of damage done to three automobiles owned by the company, and theft of their equipment. The automobiles are stored in the yard of the company at night and on more than one occasion spark plugs have been stolen and sand thrown into the engines.

SIGNAL YELLOW TO DRIVER— COP DECLARES IT RED

Henry H. Forquhar, 25 Edgar lane, Hasting-on-Hudson, N. Y., was arrested this evening by Patrolman Henry Sylvia charged with violation of the state traffic law. He posted a bond of $15 for his appearance in the police court tomorrow. Forquhar was driving on Bank street and at the corner of Howard street, passed the traffic signal, which displayed red. Sylvia remonstrated with the driver, who insisted that the light showed yellow and not red. The altercation resulted in Forquhar being arrested.

William R. Lubchansky, 199 Huntington street, was arrested this evening charged with blocking traffic and will be in court tomorrow. Lubchansky was driving on Bank street when he stopped his auto beside another auto that was parked alongside the curb. Where Lubchansky selected to park was in a location where much traffic existed and resulted in a trolley car and a line of six or seven autos being compelled to come to a stop because of it being impossible to pass the parked auto as the trolley car was in advance of the machines. Patrolman Henry Sylvia was on the trolley car and when he alighted to go to Lubchansky's auto, the driver then attempted to drive to a position parallel with the curb.

Joseph R. Overman, 15 High street, Hartford and 245 Pequot avenue, this city, was arrested this afternoon by Patrolman Clyde Murphy charged with parking his automobile longer than a half hour on State street. The driver posted a bond of $2 for his appearance in the police court tomorrow.

Home Hospital Matron

Mrs. Agnes R. Gay, Jacksonville, Fla., newly appointed matron of Home Memorial hospital, has arrived in New London and has begun her duties. Mrs. Gay succeeds Miss Mabel Graig, who will be married next month. Mrs. Gay was until recently superintendent of the Children's Orthopedic hospital at Jacksonville and at one time was assistant superintendent of the Emerson hospital at Concord, N. H. She also performed oversea duty during the World war.

NEW HAVENER DETAINED FOR HIS OWN SAFETY

John Tierney, New Haven, is locked up at police headquarters here tonight more for his own safety than for an act of criminality he may have committed. Relatives of the man will probably come here and take charge of him. Tierney was driving his automobile in Niantic and evidently lost control of the steering wheel for it entered the river. He disappeared from the location of the accident. But while the locatio nof the accident, but while State Police Officers William E. MacKenzie and John Smith were making an investigation, Tierney returned to where the car was marooned and upon being questioned, it was plain to discern that he was suffering from apparent temporary mental trouble, due partially to business trouble. Because of his extremely nervous condition the man was brought here and locked up.

TWO BAY STATE BOYS, 17, ARRESTED IN STOLEN CAR

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 12—A pair of youths, solely bent on seeing the world and, as is almost always the case, New York first, were arrested on the New London approach of the Thames river highway bridge this evening by state police officers. They are prisoners at the Groton barracks charged with the theft of an automobile, for they stole two cars in their endeavor to reach the metropolis. They will probably be given a hearing in Groton town court tomorrow morning. The youths are Edward Hurley, 17, of 159 Forest Hill street, Jamaica Plains, Boston, and John Nihill, 17, of 11 Kenton road, Jamaica Plains. The young men decided to make the trip this morning and being without funds they stole an auto in Jamaic Plains which they found parked on the street. The trip was then started and all went well until Norwood, R. I., was reached. There the supply of fuel became exhausted and not having money, the youths started hitch-hiking. They reached Mystic late this afternoon and while roaming about the village they espied the new Ford roadster owned by Otto Weischer parked at a curb. The youths entered the auto and speeded away. However, they were seen to steal the machine and a telephone message was sent to the state police barracks and to New London police headquarters, with the information that the thieves were headed toward this city. Two officer swere sent to the bridge from this city, but a few minutes before they arrived there. Sergeant George Webber and Officer William MacKenzie, who were maintaining a lookout on the bridge, observed the stolen auto approaching and the pair was arrested.

CLAIM SUPT. OF SCHOOLS HAS BEEN EXTRAVAGANT

The long expected taking to task of Superintendent of Schools Warren A. Hanson for the methods he is alleged to have employed in expending money appropriated for the conduct of the various schools, occurred at the meeting of the board of school visitors in the banking rooms of the Mariners Savings bank yesterday afternoon. The meeting, the first to be held since early in the summer, was of three and one-half hours' duration, due to the lengthy questioning of the superintendent and the reading of minutes of several previous meetings. Principal among the offnses laid to Supt. Hanson were the hiring of four more teachers than it is claimed he was authorized to employ and the spending of money that exceeded the amount of appropriations in 13 instances. The meeting adjourned without any action being taken relative to the allegations against Supt. Hanson, but when the new board which will handle the school affairs convenes for the first time in October, it is understood that drastic action will be taken to prevent any repetition of the conduct of expending school appropriations in the future. In reference to the appropriations being overdrawn, Supt. Hanson said that under the city charter the director of finance was supposed to notify the former whenever an appropriation is overdrawn, but declared he never received any such notification.

The temperature of the water at Ocean beach is more agreeable than at any time this year and many go to the short daily for a swim.

THE SOCIAL CORNER

to three picnics this summer. Sorry I could not attend more, but was very busy papering, painting, etc.

The first picnic was at Alfara's and such a time as we had finding it! Got there late, but received such a warm welcome, and had such a good dinner it made up for all the extra miles we drove. Mrs. Alfara, you sure can shake a wicked foot.

The next picnic was at Wheeler's and such a lovely ride—75 miles. The place, lunch and crowd were ideal. No wonder Whirlwind, Blue Aster and friends don't mind such a long drive. At the journey's end there is always a recompense.

My last picnic of the summer was at Tuny Ann's and again the glad hand. Mother felt repaid for the hard climb up the hill on crutches. She does enjoy going even under such difficulties and I want to thank you all for being so perfectly wonderful to her.

Olga and Bachelor Maid: So sorry not to have been able to see you there. Was very much tempted to come after you myself but Lonesome Pine said you were not home.

My friends that have been with me to the picnics this summer have enjoyed them so much they are going to ask permission to join our ranks. They agree with me that the Corner is rightfully named "Social."

Jennie: Thanks for the clippings; also letter and contents. Just how handy the contents were will tell you when I see you which I hope will be some afternoon soon. If I may, I am coming up after school (which will be 2.30 p. m. this year) and spend the rest of the afternoon and evening with you. Please continue to send clippings.

Bay State: I will keep my promise to you soon, before cold weather.

Lowthorpe and Meadow Lark: Shall stop and say "hello" and "goodbye" when on my way to Bay State's. I surely feel as though I belonged once more to the beloved Social Corner.

Sis Hopkins: Where are you! Wrote you a nice long letter immediately upon receipt of yours, but it came back. Would be glad to know of your whereabouts.

My best wishes and sympathy to each and any that are shutin, bereaved or sick. We all think at times our trials are hard, but instead of looking around for those better off and complaining because we haven't as much as they, if we would look around and find those worse off than we, and do our bit to make life a little more worthwhile for them, we would be so much happier ourselves.

I saw a blind couple on the streets of Meriden, neither of them over 45, singing and playing and depending on the nickles and dimes of the crowd, I thought I am deaf, but thank God I am not like that. There is always some one worse off than we are.

I don't write often and my letters are so long when I do write, guess its a good thing I don't write oftener.

Again you hostesses a wonderful time at each picnic and hope to meet with you all many times next summer.

YOUTH INDICTED FOR THE MURDER OF HIS AUNT

LAWRENCE, Mass., Sept. 12.—(P)—Bernard S. Thompson, 22, of Boston, was indicted today by the Essex county grand jury for the murder of his aunt, Mrs. K. Edith Wight, of Saugus, July 17, at the Wight home.

Thompson attempted to commit suicide yesterday at Salem jail by slashing himself with a razor.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Broadway Theatre

The fact at Warner's Broadway theatre local movie lovers are to have the privilege of both seeing and hearing the world's greatest tenor, through the medium of a Fox movietone production in which he is starred, brings to mind the thought that, to speak of John McCormack's successes is to invite a certain uniformity, so unvaried is his long list of triumphs. "Song O' My Heart" is the latest in the series.

Since his American debut at the Manhattan Opera House, New York city, with Madame Tetrazinni, his career has been meteoric. His name is spoken in almost all sections of the habitable globe and in this country he is a national figure. To America he is something more than an artist, he is enshrined in the hearts of the public.

A famous editor recently wrote: "John McCormack's voice and art have given more real delight and inspiration to a greater number of people than any other voice of all time. He has taken happiness and peace into thousands upon thousands of homes. His life and work have made millions happy and for that he deserves honor and happiness himself."

Palace Theatre

All the thrills of a great racing derby, all the melody of a magnificent singer's voice, all the pathos of a plot set amid the decaying southern atmosphere of wealth and chivalry are to be found in Al Jolson's latest and best picture, "Big Boy," which opens at the Palace theatre tomorrow for a four days' run.

Jolson in "Big Boy" plays the part of a colored jockey, the descendant of generations of slaves who have served the Bedford family faithfully for years and years.

But, sadly enough, the Bedford family is on the downward path. Like other great southern plantations, the Bedford acres are dwindling. The place is going to pot. The family desperately needs money. They are down almost to rock bottom, and only a gigantic break in fortune can help them. All they have to hope for is that their great racehorse, "Big Boy" can win the Kentucky Derby. It is a slim chance, but they are banking heavily on it. If "Big Boy" wins the Bedfords come back with a bang. If he loses—well, everything is lost. It is neck or nothing with them.

How outside interests enter the picture with insidious plots to wreck the family hopes makes this a picture of thrills. Al Jolson, as Gus, the jockey, is the man on whom the Bedfords are depending. But Gus does something that upsets Mrs. Bedford badly, and, to all appearances, he is not going to be allowed to race "Big Boy." But time and tide changes. Evil-doers fall into their own traps, and the end comes with surprising force. Today, for the last times, the Palace presents "The King of Jazz" with Paul Whiteman, and "Double Crossroads."

THE WEATHER

Conditions

The disturbance that was central off the northeast Florida coast Thursday night has increased greatly in intensity and moved northeastward to the North Carolina coast, where it is centered tonight as a storm of marked intensity, but small diameter, Cape Hatteras. At Cape Lookout, N. C., a wind velocity of approximately 95 miles an hour from the northwest was reported at 3:30 this afternoon.

Storm warnings are displayed on the Atlantic coast from Cape Hatteras, N. C., to Sandy Hook, N. J.

Pressure is high from Hudson bay, southeastward to the St. Lawrence valley, Nottingham Island, Hudson straits.

Pressure is low from Greenland southward to Newfoundland.

The indications are for occasional showers in the middle Atlantic and north Atlantic states Saturday and probably Sunday.

Winds

North of Sandy Hook: Increasing easterly winds, probably becoming strong over extreme south portion and reaching gale force Saturday night, and overcast weather, probably occasional showers Saturday.

Sandy Hook to Hatteras: Strong shifting winds with gales near center of disturbance and overcast; showery weather Saturday.

Forecast

For southern New England: Increasing cloudiness and cooler followed by showers Saturday and Saturday night; Sunday mostly cloudy, possibly showers.

Married Men Win Series

The Swanee Married Men defeated the Single Men's baseball team Friday evening at the J. B. Martin diamond by the score of 7 to 6, in a very thrilling game that kept the large attendance of fans on edge all through the contest. Henry Mileski, of the Single Men, got the longest hit of the game, a home run between center and left field. The fielding honors were divided between William Evans of the Married Men and Richard Seed, the star shortstop for the Single Men. By winning this game the Married Men won the series over their old-time rivals by taking two out of three.

Following the game, Manager Edward Nevins of the Newsies challenged the Married Men for a game or series. The lineup for the Married Men was: Scoffield, c; John Dowling, p; David Shahan, 1b; Michael Peter Rowkowski, 2b; Stephen Hoffman, 3b; Edward Riordan, ss; Gromko, lf; Harold Wickham, cf; Atchinson, cf, and William Evans, rf. Single Men: Bobby Enright, c and lf; Henry Mileski, p; Michael Shahan, 1b; Peter Farrell, 2b; Boltz, 3b; Richard Seed, ss; Edward Delaney lf; Alvin Barrows, cf; James Gay, rf. John Mullen acted as umpire and handled it in a very capable manner.

Miss Annie Shea and Miss Mary McDermott, of Boston, are spending a few days at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Delaney, on Eighth street.

Miss Celia Bouchard has returned to her home at Hartford, after spending a few days with relatives in Greeneville.

POLISH CITIZENS CELEBRATE— LEFTY DUGAS PRESENT

The Polish cits baseball team, champions of the Norwich Twilight league, were given a banquet Thursday evening in their honor at Pulaski hall by the Polish-American club which they represented in the league. A large number of prominent business men with the chairman, William Fitzgerald of the recreation commission was present, also the members of the governing board of the league, namely Edward Gleason, Dr. Clarence Thompson, Earle E. Brigham, also Hank Morin, the official umpire of the league. The evening's events opened at 8:30 o'clock with a turkey supper with all its fixings. The manager of the baseball team, Joseph Romanowski, was toastmaster of the evening and kept the party lively with his very witty wise sayings. President Grzymkowski of the Polish club addressed the large attendance and spoke in fitting words of praise to the ball players that brought the championship of the city league to his club and thanked them for their efforts. William J. Fitzgerald, chairman of the recreation commission, spoke and dwelt upon the good sportsmanship that was shown throughout the season of the league and of their success in the league and told them to go out and win the championship of the inter-city series with New London.

Hank Morin, the umpire of the league, gave a few remarks of praise to the members of the team. Dr. Thompson presented each member of the team a check of substantial amount which they received as a team of the league. During the evening Boots Greene rendered several solos in a very pleasing manner. The club to show their appreciation of the untiring efforts of the manager, Joseph Romanowski presented him with a beautiful wristwatch. Among the players present were Lamory, Joseph Boots Greene, Toney West, Leo Jarvis, Peter Finn, Stephen Cimikowski, Lloyd Jarvis, John Greene, Deo Gaudette, Peter Labenski and Walter Sydlo.

Rev. E. J. Norris, Mrs. Norris and Kathleen Norris have just returned from their vacation at South Lyme.

Lionel Norris is spending a brief vacation with his parents before returning to the University of Pittsburgh.

EXPECT RE-NOMINATION OF CONGRESSMAN FREEMAN

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Sept. 12—The convention of the second congressional district will be held in town hall here Saturday to nominate a republican candidate for congress. This convention, which will be called to order by Chairman Charles A. Gates, is to be attended by 196 delegates representing the 64 towns in the district of four counties, Tolland, New London, Middlesex and Windham. It is expected that the present incumbent, Richard P. Freeman, of New London, will be renominated without opposition. Following the convention the delegates will be guests at a dinner in G. A. R. hall of the town building.

STONINGTON DEMOCRATS USE CHECK LIST IN CAUCUS

(Special to The Bulletin)

STONINGTON, Sept. 12—There were 250 democrats in attendance at the party caucus to name candidates for town offices at the nearly one hour session held tonight in Stonington town hall. The caucus was called to order by Everett D. Wilson, of Mystic, chairman of the democratic town committee, who was named moderator. Matthew P. Lahey of Stonington, named clerk, read the call. The following nominations were made: Assessor for three years, Harry B. McKenzie, of Mystic; board of relief, John A. Allen, of Pawcatuck; selectmen, Joseph A. Vargas, of Stonington and Lawrence C. Purtill of Pawcatuck; agents for town deposit fund, Joseph A. Vargas and William C. Robinson.

When the call was made for nomination for tax collector James McKnight of Pawcatuck moved that it be left open to be filled by the town committee. Objection was raised by Thomas Donahue and James A. Ryan and the meeting turned it down. George A. Wheeler of the road district was named for tax collector. For constables discussion called for three instead of four names, at the conclusion of which the following were named: Manuel C. Davis, of Stonington, Christopher J. Ledwith, of Stonington; George I. Babcock, of Pawcatuck, and James Higgins of Mystic.

The only contest of the evening when a check list was used was that which followed the naming of a member of the board of registrars. From the first Stonington district the names of C. J. Gilmore and William C. Robinson were presented. Harry B. McKenzie asked for the check list and the results as announced were: For Robinson, 23 women, 111 men, total of 134; for Gilmore 11 women and 22 men, total 33. Robinson was declared the nominee. The registrars for the remaining districts were named without opposition as follows: Second district, Joseph H. McGuinnis; third district, James F. Main; fourth district, Harry B. McKenzie; fifth district, Archie Lambert; school committee for three years, William F. Walbridge of Old Mystic. The town committee was voted authority to fill all vacancies.

LEBANON WOMEN VOTERS HEARD TWO SPEAKERS

The Lebanon League of Women Voters held the regular meeting Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock in Lebanon town hall when the vice president, Mrs. Anna Lathrop, presided in the absence of the president, Mrs. E. J. Graham. After a short business meeting, Mrs. Lathrop introduced the speakers of the afternoon, Miss Elizabeth P. Andrews and Miss Sally Fanny Gleaton. Miss Andrews' subject, Preparing for Citizenship, dealt with the history of naturalization, which is as old as our republic, and the requirements.

Miss Gleaton's subject was a connect-up of league subjects with government. A rising vote of thanks was given both of our speakers.

N. F. A. SENIORS USE SLATER HALL ANNEX

TAFTVILLE

At Weller's store in the Ponemah building there has been on exhibition for the past few days a small branch from a chestnut tree to which four large burrs are attached. This is the first time in several years that such large burrs have been discovered, although each year someone brings in a small one. They have become quite a curiosity in recent years, since the blight introduced from China and Japan swept over New England, killing every chestnut tree which grew here. One of the curious incidents in connection with these burrs is that when children, some of them 12 or 13 years of age, come into the store, they look at the branch, and when asked if they know what it is reply that they have never seen anything like it before.

Rabbit breeders and pet stock fanciers from far and near are frequent visitors to the Shetucket rabbitry, the model rabbit breeding plant at Tafts station owned by Romaine J. Beauregard. In the most modern, improved hutches, insuring the maximum of cleanliness and sanitation, the visitor may cast his eye over some of the aristocrats of rabbitdom. Most numerous are the handsome chinchillas, whose skins are used extensively in the American fur trade as a substitute for the more expensive pelts of other animals. There is a fine lot of Blue Bevans with their peculiar blue-grey coats and big New Zealand white rabbits, developed from "sports" of the New Zealand red species. In some of the hutches may be seen the Flemish Giants, champion heavyweights of the rabbit world. Specimens of this breed have been known to attain a weight of over 20 pounds. In Europe they have been developed for size and are raised for meat.

The quarters where the animals are kept are of the up-to-date self-cleaning, sanitary type. In harmony with the methods of the large European rabitries, the rabbits do not come in contact with the ground. A bale of hay is used every few days at the rabbitry, and bushels of oats and fresh green vegetables disappear weekly.

Mr. Beauregard expects to develop his plant to an extent where it will accommodate several hundred breeders. Besides raising the fancy varieties, he will then be in a position to supply meat to New York markets.

Miss Agnes Dougherty entertained a number of friends at bridge at her home on Prentice street recently. The prizes were won by Miss Charlotte Johnson and Miss Doris Pulsifer.

Raymond A. Yerrington, of South Second avenue, and Lester Pingree, of North C street, have been visitors this week in Boston, Mass.

Edward Kearns, of Riverside grove, and Ralph Hunt, of Norwich avenue, are motoring to central New York.

James Troland, of Providence street, Hormidas Lamoreux and Charles Lamoreux, of Terrace avenue, motored to Boston, Mass., this week and returned with "Lefty" Dugas, who spent a short time with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Azarie Dugas, and family, of Providence street.

Formation of the 900 Nevada 4-H members into a state organization patterned on the plan of the Nevada state farm bureau has been completed.

FARM HOUSE AND BARN BURNED ON CANTERBURY ROAD; OWNER AWAY

Fire Friday night about 10 o'clock made a total loss of the Fred Smith farm house on Canterbury turnpike about half a mile west of Occum village. With the house was also destroyed a frame barn, about 25x30, but there were no cattle in the barn. No one was at home at the time of the fire.

Neighbors who saw the fire telephoned an alarm to the Taftville fire department, which mustered about 15 men under command of Capt. Philias Poirier and made a quick run to the place, but there was no water for them to work with when they got there and there was little but the frame of the house left by that time. However, they did effective work by the use of four gallons of chemical in saving a small building which stood near the house and had been occupied during the summer by Mr. Smith's son-in-law, John Evans and Mrs. Evans.

The farm house burned was a one and a half story frame building of about six rooms which Mr. Smith had occupied during the summer, it is understood, but had left here about two months ago and his son-in-law had been living in the house since then.

The Evans family was not at home at the time of the fire but neighbors said they believed Mr. Smith was now in Thompsonville, Conn. The loss was estimated at $2,500, partially covered by insurance.

Mr. Smith was burned out about five years ago near the present location.

HEAVY GAIN BY FASCISTS IN GERMAN ELECTIONS SUNDAY

Early Returns Indicated That They Would Have Well Above 100 Seats in the Next Reichstag, Instead of the 12 They Had in Elections of 1928—Success of the Extremist Parties Would Endanger the Bruening Cabinet—At Midnight the Two Anti-Parliamentary Groups Commanded More Than 150 Seats in the Next Parliament.

BERLIN, Sept. 14—(AP)—A landslide of votes today swept to a powerful position in the next reichstag the fascist party of Adolf Hitler, advocating the overthrow of the German republic.

With two-fifths of the returns in today's general election counted, the fascists, or national socialists, were assured of 50 seats in a parliament over which the shadow of a dictatorship has fallen. The last reichstag was dissolved in July under decree—law powers by Chancellor Heinrich Bruening.

If the landslide continued, it was estimated the fascists would have well above 100 seats in the next reichstag, instead of the meager 12 they had in the elections of 1928. They would thus constitute the largest party after the social-democrats, displacing the nationalists of Alfred Hugenberg.

Chancellor Bruening's party, the centrists, was trailing the social-democrats, fascists and communists.

Success of the extremist parties, widely predicted before the election, was considered a grave threat to the Bruening cabinet, which has been a minority government from the start and was saved from defeat in July only through President Von Hindenburg's sanction of the use of Article 48.

Even with the decree-law powers of this article, the government was believed to be facing defeat.

Of the chief reichstag parties lying between the two extremes, only the social-democrats were apparently holding their own. The nationalists lost heavily, more to Hitler's fascists than to the people's conservatives, who under the leadership of Gottfried Treviranus had split away from them.

The people's party of the late Gustav Stresemann, which had an influence during his occupancy of the foreign ministry out of proportion to its 45 reichstag seats, appeared to be in for a severe drubbing.

Besides the fascists, the chief gainers in the first returns were the communists. By midnight the two anti-parliamentary groups commanded more than 150 seats in the next parliament.

The next reichstag promises to be an unruly one, and President Paul Loebe if reelected will have the most difficult session of his career.

By the irony of fate Hitler will be unable to drect his triumphant fascists in parliament. As he is an Austrian, he is ineligible for the reichstag.

Early returns from the provinces reported similar gains for the fascists.

The Sexon district of Leipsic, embracing about one-third of Saxony, gave them eight times as many votes as at the previous election. This was the first of the 35 electoral districts of Germany to complete its returns.

It gave the social-democrats 288,000 votes, the communists 142,000, the fascists 116,000 and the people's party 78,000. The nationalists and others lost heavily.

OFFICIAL FINAL TOTALS IN REICHSTAG ELECTION

BERLIN, Sept. 15—(Monday)—(AP)—Official final totals in the reichstag election held through germany yesterday were given today as:

Socialists	8,572,016.
Fascists	6,401,210.
Communists	4,587,708.
Centrists	4,128,929.
Nationalists	2,458,497.
People's	1,576,149.
Economic party	1,360,585.
States party	1,322,608.
Bavarians	1,058,556.
Total vote cast	34,943,460.

VOTES CAST BY MEMBERS OF HOHENZOLLERN FAMILY

POTSDAM, Germany, Sept. 14.—(AP)—Members of the Hohenzollern family today performed their civic duties by voting in the elections at the Christian community house.

The former crown prince, Frederick Wilhelm, and his wife, Princess Cecilie, cast ballots while other voters held back respectfully.

Prince Oscar, fifth son of the exiled kaiser, voted at the same place.

TWO MEN KILLED IN PRE-ELECTION RIOTS IN BERLIN

BERLIN, Sept. 14.—(AP)—After a riotous pre-election night 500 persons were in jail in Berlin today. Two men were killed in a clash late in the night between communists and fascists.

An attack by a hundred communists against a suburban police station in a working class district, was beaten off by police. Many shots were fired but nobody was reported hurt. hurt.

The fight between the fascists and the communists began when a truck crowded with fascists passed the communist headquarters on Buelow square. Stones were thrown at the fascists and shots followed.

The police emergency squad was called out to handle the fighting political rivals and made 170 arrests on the spot.

FIGHTING IN WARSAW; 13 PERSONS WOUNDED

WARSAW, Sept. 17.—(AP)—Thirteen persons, including three policemen, were wounded today in a fight between a strong police force and supporters of the opposition movement against Marshal Joseph Pilsudski, prime minister of Poland.

The clash came as supporters of the opposition were filing out of a political meeting called by deputies of the left and center in the diet. The meeting was originally scheduled to be held in the open air but this was forbidden by the government.

At the door of the hall a group of communists suddenly appeared and attacked the police, throwing two hand grenades and firing several pistol shots. The police returned the fire.

The meeting had been widely advertised but attracted only 2,000 persons out of Warsaw's populace of more than a million. Though it was intended to aid the formation of an opposition bloc, the meeting really became a patriotic demonstration against alteration of the German-Polish frontier and changes in the Versailles treaty. Several anti-government resolutions were passed.

BROADCAST BY PROVISIONAL PRESIDENT OF ARGENTINA

BUENOS AIRES, Sept. 14.—(AP)—Speaking over a huge radio telephone-radio hook-up to the people of the United States tonight, provisional President Jose Francisco Uriburu pledged his administration to the friendliest of relations with all nations of the Western Hemisphere and declared his earnest desire to turn over the power of government to legally elected authorities at the earliest possible moment.

President Uriburu said that, with the sole exception of the party which the ousted president, Hipolito Irigoyen headed, the political, labor and business elements of the nation were united behind the new government in the endeavor to aid "the nation to recover its lofty ideals."

The goodwill address was delivered by the new chief of state while sitting at a radio telephone in the government palace here.

ANOTHER GANGSTER SLAIN IN CHICAGO

CHICAGO, Sept. 14.—(AP)—Gangland gurrillas sniped another member of the rapidly-thinning Moran gang early today—chose a busy night life section of Sheridan road for their work—and, in police belief, used the victim's sweetheart to lure him to his death.

Jack Costa, whose string of cabarets offered an outlet for floods of Moran beer and liquor, was the target of the latest underworld vengeance. He was shot down as he walked across the courtyard of an apartment building, next door to a large motion picture theatre at the buzzing intersection of Sheridan and Irving Park boulevards.

Confronted with a mass of circumstantial evidence, the girl, Margaret Reardon, 22, repeated time and again to Capt. Hugh McCarthy:

"I knew he was going to be killed but I didn't have anything to do with it."

ATTEMPTED EXTORTION FROM NEGRO CONGRESSMAN

CHICAGO, Sept. 14—(AP)—Two men, arrested last night on charges of attempting to extort $10,000 from Congressman Oscar De Priest, Negro, under threat of death, will be recommended for indictment tomorrow by the September grand jury.

One of the men, Solly Lason, was said by police to have confessed to his part in the plot, and to have named Julius Link, a minor politician in De Priest's district, as a partner in the scheme. Detectives also hunted Joe Gladstone, a confederate named by Lason.

De Priest received a letter last Wednesday to the effect the writers had been offered $5,000 to assassinate him. The note said De Priest's "enemies in Alabama" had commissioned them for the killing but, if he would deliver $10,000 in easily negotiable bills, they would not execute the plot.

De Priest took the document to Robert I. Randolph, president of the Chicago association of commerce and chairman of the "secret six" crime investigating committee. Working also with Walter Walker, attorney for the Employers' association, the congressman complied with the blackmailers' demands to signify his assent by running a notice in the personal column of a newspaper.

UNNECESSARY AUTO HORN TOOTING IS CONDEMNED

HARTFORD, Sept. 14.—(AP)—Steps to transform the motor vehicle, which he described as one of the greatest noise makers in the world, into a quiet and well mannered machine, were discussed by Motor Vehicle Commissioner Robbins B. Stoeckel in the monthly bulletin of his department, issued today.

Commissioner Stoeckel particularly condemned unnecessary horn tooting, whether of the over-cautious driver who toots furiously when there is no one to warn of the person who uses his horn rather than the door bell to inform friends inside a house that he has arrived, or of the impatient driver who relieves his feelings in a traffic jam by holding his finger down on the horn button. He took up cudgels, too, against "the young sporting gentleman, who wants the world to observe that he is out in his best clothes, in a nicely painted car and perhaps with a good looking girl beside him," and breaks the law by operating his automobile with the muffler cut-out open.

TWO AVIATORS WERE RESCUED FROM BAY

KINGSTON, Mass., Sept. 14.—(AP)—Oscar Parker, pilot, and Albini Shabot, both of Fall River, were rescued from the bay here this afternoon after their plane dove into the water out of control. John McCarthy and Clarence Winckley, working on a gunning stand nearby, swam out to the wreck and brought the fliers, unconscious from immersion and shock, ashore. They were taken to the Jordan hospital at Plymouth, where it was said they would recover. The airplane was owned by Raymond Dalnard, of Fall River.

CABLED PARAGRAPHS

LISBON, Portugal, Sept. 14.—(AP)—Rear Admiral Mariano Da Silva was appointed commander in chief of the navy yesterday. He replaces Admiral Mesquitela, who was retired on account of old age.

LUKEMBOURG, Sept. 14.—(AP)—The engagement was announced of Princess Hilda, eldest sister of reigning Grandduchess Charlotte and Bavarian Prince Adolph of Schwartzenberg.

BRUSSELS, Sept. 14.—(AP)—Henry Ford arrived here yesterday and visited the Ford works. He said he was touring Europe for a holiday and would leave soon for Germany and Switzerland, eventually returning to Paris.

ROME, Sept. 14.—(AP)—The Stefani news agency announced yesterday that the fascist government had approved an agreement by which Amedee P. Giannini's Bank of America and Italy takes over the business of the Italo-Britainnica bank on October 1. The agency says shareholders of the Italo-Britainnica bank will meet September 25 to ratify the agreement.

17 YEAR OLD GIRL SLASHED TO DEATH IN SOUTH BEND, IND.

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Sept. 14.—(AP)—Alice Waltman, 17, a grammar school student, was slashed to death in her home early today. Her assailant, believed to have been a house prowler, escaped.

The slaying, following close on the heels of the murder of 8-year old Marverine Appel, threw citizens into a state of intense excitement. Soon after word of the crime spread a huge crowd of angry persons was milling about the Waltman home. Special police details were required to disperse the gathering.

The girl was killed as she slept by the side of an 8-year old brother, who was not awakened.

The razor wielding assailant, after nearly decapitating his victim, leaped from a second story bedroom window. Besides her brother, two sisters, Henrietta, 20, and Evelyn, 19, also were sleeping in the room where the girl was slain. They were not disturbed.

Mrs. Kate Waltman, Alice's mother, heard the body thump on the floor. She rushed upstairs to find the mutilated body of her child.

After a hurried investigation, police launched a search for a youth whose name was not revealed, but who, described as a sort of a "ne'er-do-well" had formed an attachment for Alice and had embarrassed her with his attentions.

Recently he lost his position in a South Bend shop and told friends he was going to Florida. Officers were informed, however, that he was seen here yesterday.

To reach Alice's bed, the slayer climbed a rear porch, crept through a bed room in which her brothers, Harry, 14, and Henry, 15, were asleep, stepped into a hall, entered another bedroom and passed to the victim's bed.

Then, after accomplishing his task the killer left as he had entered. This was demonstrated by dirty finger impressions made in entering and bloody ones as he left.

FIVE STATES TO SELECT CANDIDATES THIS WEEK

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—(AP)—Selection of party candidates by five states this week will bring the primary campaigns to an end and send the off-year political drive into its final stages.

Tuesday, seven weeks to the day from the general election which will decide whether the republicans are to retain their control of congress, the voters in New York, Massachusetts and Wisconsin will drop the names of their party selections into primary ballot boxes. On the same day Connecticut republicans and Delaware democrats will hold nominating conventions.

The names of Lieutenant Governor Ernest E. Rogers and Governor J. H. Trumbull were mentioned as those to which the Connecticut republicans might turn in their choice of a candidate to suceed Trumbull. State Senator Edward W. Goss, a wet, was considered the probable selection for the house vacancy from the fifth district caused by the death of Representative James P. Glynn.

Few important contests were before the New York voters. Representative Ruth Baker Pratt was opposed for the republican nomination in the seventh district by George Hiram Mann of Brooklyn. The winner would be opposed by Louis B. Brodsky, a democrat, and Heywood Broun, socialist.

CONTEST OVER MICH. REP. GUBERNATORIAL PRIMARY

DETROIT, Sept. 14.—(AP)—Out of a combination of circumstances there appeared today the possibility that all the strenuous work of Alex J. Groesbeck and Wilber M. Brucker in the primary election campaign for the republican nomination for governor might go for naught.

Should Groesbeck persist in his determination to demand a recount of the votes cast last Tuesday it appeared more than likely that certification of the nominee would be delayed so long as to make it impossible to get the successful candidate's name on the ballot November 4.

On the face of revised and corrected unofficial and official returns Brucker won the nomination by 5,555 votes. The poll tonight stood: Brucker, 369,927; Groesbeck, 364,372.

BALLOON FAILED TO RISE FOR ALTITUDE FLIGHT

AUGSBURG, Germany, Sept. 14.—(AP)—The plan of Prof. Auguste Piccard to ascend 10 miles into the stratosphere suffered a setback today when his balloon failed to rise from the ground.

The amount of gas proved insufficient to raise the heavy gondola. He had provided 2,200 cubic meters of hydrogen, which filled only one-seventh of the balooon's capacity, expecting that as the high altitudes would be reached the gas would expand to 14,000 cubic meters. A strong downward wind arose immediately after the bag was filled.

THREE PERSONS KILLED WATCHING AUTO RACE

RAFAELA, Argentina, Sept. 14.—(AP)—Two men and a woman were killed while watching the 500-mile national automobile race here today.

Alberto Fontana, making a curve, lost control of his car and ran off the track into the crowd.

Turned Back From Trans-Pacific Flight

Bromley and Gatty Landed Only a Few Miles From Where Flight Started.

(By the Associated Press)

On three fronts yesterday weather or other adverse conditions repulsed—for the moment— man's ceaseless offensive to extend his conquest of the air.

After taking off Saturday from Samishiro Beach, Japan, and flying out into the fog-enshrouded silence of the vast Pacific, Harold Bromley and Harold Gatty, Americans, turned back from their attempt to reach Tacoma, Wash., and landed on Cape Shiriya, Aomori, just a few miles from their starting point. Their course had lain through dense fog and scant news had come from them during their long flight.

A long projected flight from Canada to England by Captain Erroll Boyd, Canadian war pilot, and Lieut. Harry Connor, was delayed again when rain held them at Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island. Last night they started from Montreal for Harbor Grace, Newfoundland, but bad weather forced the descent at Charlottetown.

At Augsburg, Germany, Prof. August Piccard's plan to soar in a balloon to the highest altitude ever reached by man was delayed when insufficient gas and a strong downward wind held the bag to the ground. He hoped to study cosmic rays.

BROMLEY'S FOURTH FAILURE OF NON-STOP PACIFIC FLIGHT

TOKYO, Sept. 15.—(AP)—(Monday)—The fourth attempt of Harold Bromley, American aviator, and his co-pilot, Harold Gatty, to span the Pacific ocean without a stop, ended in failure today with the grounding of their airplane near the village of Shiritsuka, on Cape Shiriya, Aomori Prefecture, at 6 a. m. (1 p. m., Sunday P. S. T.).

The flight ended within a few miles of Samishiro beach, near Sambongi, where at 5:08 a. m., Sunday (12:08 p. m., Saturday, P. S. T.), the huge monoplane "City of Tacoma," heavy with 1,020 gallons of gasoline, took off eastward for Tacoma, Wash.

The plane was in the air 24 hours and 52 minutes, and during much of the time the fate of its two occupants was cloaked in a silence deepened by fog and adverse weather conditions. Although the plane carried a wireless set, there was an almost total absence of reports while it was in the air. Rumors and conflicting reports were many, but not until news of the landing was flashed to Tokyo was the fliers' safety definitely established.

Although reports from the village near which they landed were meager, it was learned neither aviator was injured. Whether the plane was damaged in landing was not established.

ARREST OF SEVEN ALLEGED KIDNAPERS IN BROOKLYN

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—(AP)—After arresting seven men in Brooklyn, detectives declared today they had smashed a kidnaping ring that has extorted thousands of dollars from wealthy Italian families on threat of death to their sons.

The seven are accused specifically of kidnaping Louis Gondalfo, 22, son of a rich Brooklyn baker, holding him for almost two weeks and forcing him to write a letter to his father by which they collected $7,000.

Police said bank books of a man they identified as the brains of the alleged ring showed deposits of $10,000 in one month, although he said he was a $75-a-week salesman. He is Peter Mandella, 53.

Others arrested were Leo Noto, 30; Nicholas Cissone, 30; Vincent Cissone, 23; Leo Gardino, 24; Joseph Collitto, 33, all of New York, and William Cissone, 22, of Trenton, N. J.

Detectives declared Gondalfo was seized on the street May 30, blindfolded, taken to a house he was unable to describe, and forced to write a ransom letter to his father. The sum of $7,000 was paid through a relative of the kidnaped man, detectives said, but when $3,000 more was demanded, police were called in and the arrests resulted.

MAY BE USING FED. SHIP AS FLOATING DISTILLERY

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 14.—(AP)— Newspaper headlines this morning announced federal prohibition authorities were investigating to determine whether the historic old Stern-Wheeler Illinois was being used as a floating distillery.

But before most people read of the investigation the craft had burned and sunk in the Mississippi river near Alton, Ill., and federal authorities started a second inquiry, this time into the cause of the fire.

Investigation disclosed the boat's departure from an Alton dock had been hurried. Pumps used in removing water from the hull had been tossed ashore and the anchor remained on the dock. Police said the craft probably was towed out into the current and drifted.

Suspicion was directed toward the Illinois on August 6 when prohibition agents found it moored near Alton, between two barges, one of which proved to be a floating mash vat. Returning next day with search warrants, the agents found the steamer had vanished.

LEVITT RELEASED FROM BROOKLYN LAW SCHOOL

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—(AP)—Dean W. P. Richardson of the Brooklyn Law school of St. Lawrence university, said tonight that the release of Professor Albert Levitt, independent candidate for the republican gubernatorial nomination in Connecticut, from his professorship, was not due to political controversy but was a friendly faculty action.

Professor Levitt was released, Dean Richardson said, because the incoming freshman class will be smaller than in recent years.

GRAF ZEPPELIN MADE LANDING AT GENEVA

GENEVA, Sept. 14.—(AP)—The German dirigible Graf Zeppelin, with Dr. Hugo Eckener and a son of the German foreign minister, Dr. Julius Curtius aboard, dropped down at the Geneva airport today for a two-hour visit.

French Fliers To Start Good Will Flight Today

First Stop [illegible] At Hartford —[illegible]ght Will Be Spent [illegible]ston.

NEW [illegible] Sept. 14.—(AP)—Bearing th[illegible]ship of France through the [illegible] America, Dieudonne Coste [illegible] Maurice Bellonte takeoff tomorro[illegible] on a 15,000-mile good will tour in the scarlet sesquiplane Question Mark, which carried them from Paris to New York.

The flight will last 25 days and will take the famous airmen, first ever to fly westward over the North Atlantic from mainland to mainland in a heavier than air machine, across 30 states in which they will make 31 stops and pass over about 70 other cities.

The first stop will be Hartford, Conn., and the next Boston, where Monday night will be spent. Thence the course bends westward along a northerly route to the Pacific, and back through southern states. The last night, Oct. 9, will be spent at Philadelphia and the fliers will pause for lunch the next day at Trenton, N. J., on their way back to New York.

The tour is sponsored by a committee of 20 prominent men, and is generally believed to have been conceived by Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, who made a similar but more extended good will flight after his return in 1927 from the first solo flight across the North Atlantic.

Coste and Bellonte were dinner guests of the Lindberghs the evening after their arrival and it is understood that first plans for the tour were made on that occasion. The next day they left for Dallas, Tex., to win the $25,000 Easterwood prize and for Washington to be received by President Hoover, and in their absence the committee was formed, government approval obtained and the itinerary decided.

For a time it seemed there must be postponement of the tour, for on their return from Texas and Washington the French fliers discovered a split in one end of their wooden propeller, which is of a type not available in America. Factory repairs were made, however.

Two other planes will accompany the trans-Atlantic Question Mark. Preceding it on each leg of the long flight will be a department of commerce ship carrying Major George Witten, tour manager, and Rene Racover, the Frenchmen's interpreter. Trailing it will be the army plane of F. Trubee Davison, assistant secretary of war, carrying Coste's mechanic, who will check the engine at every stop.

The itinerary for the first week follows:

Monday—New York to Hartford to Boston, circling over Bridgeport, New Haven, Providence and Newport.

Tuesday — Boston to Cleveland, circling over Worcester, Springfield, Albany, Utica, Syracuse, Rochester, Buffalo and Erie.

Wednesday—Cleveland to Indianapolis to Detroit, circling over Akron, Columbus, Dayton, Richmond, Fort Wayne and Toledo.

Thursday—Detroit to Chicago, circling over Lansing, Joliet and Elgin.

Friday—Chicago to Milwaukee to St. Paul and Minneapolis, where the week end will be spent.

INVESTIGATING DEATH OF JOHN T. JOYCE IN CHICAGO

CHICAGO, Sept. 14.—(AP)—Inquiry into state Senator John T. Joyce's recent mysterious death took a sensational turn today as police held the former legislator's attractive 20-year-old foster daughter, Isabelle Daly, for questioning.

Seizure of Miss Daly came after the investigation of Joyce's death supposedly had been dropped. State's Attorney John A. Swanson had announced he would make no further inquiry after a coroner's jury held that death, which occurred Aug. 16, was due to poisoning.

The young woman was held incommunicado at an undisclosed police station and questioned throughout the night.

Mrs. Joyce, the widow, termed the interrogation of Miss Daly a plot by her political enemies to hinder her campaign to succeed her husband in the state senate. She was quoted by the Herald and Examiner as accusing the state's attorney's office of trying to show she had poisoned her husband because of jealousy of Miss Daly.

"I am not afraid of anything Isabelle may tell them," the Herald and Examiner quoted Mrs. Joyce as saying "They are trying to make out that I poisoned John Joyce because he had been too friendly with Isabelle. That's not true. If John Joyce was anything more than a kind foster father to the girl, I had no knowledge of it."

CIGARETTES CREDITED WITH SAVING LIFE

NORWALK, Sept. 14.—(AP)—A package of cigarettes today was credited with having saved the life of Russell Gargon, 23, who swore out a warrant for the arrest of Dominick Santello, 24, on a charge of assault with intent to kill.

Gargon told police he and Santello had an argument last night over the merits of a bottle of whiskey they were drinking. They came to blows, he said, and Santello fired a revolver at him. The bullet struck a package of cigarettes he had in the pocket of his shirt directly over his heart but was sufficiently deflected to leave him unharmed.

Santello tonight was being held without bond for a hearing tomorrow.

FAIR WEATHER IS FORECAST FOR THE YACHT RACE TODAY

Sir Thomas Lipton Took Defeat of the Shamrock V in Race Saturday Like a True Sportsman—With a Whole Sail Breeze, Today May Prove a Decisive Test of the Merits of the Enterprise and the Shamrock V—If the Enterprise Makes It Two Straight the Series May Be All Over But the Shouting, Barring Accident to the Defender.

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 14—(AP)—The billion dollar spectacle of the sea furnishing background for the America's cup yacht racing duel, will be resumed tomorrow with indications pointing to better weather conditions and high hopes held out that Shamrock V will yet make a fight of it against the defender, Enterprise.

A fair day with a whole-sail breeze from the southwest was forecast tonight for the second race of the series, to be run off around a 30-mile triangular course the first leg a beat to windward and two 10-mile reaches for the remaining legs home.

The storm area that brought with it heavy showers early today moved off to the Massachusetts coast and was followed by clearing weather and an eight-knot breeze.

A rising barometer tonight indicated continued clear weather with the low pressure moving northeastward. Smart southerly winds were looked for by yachtsmen who studied the situation with a calculating eye and predicted that one might "blow me down" if there wasn't a real race tomorrow.

It will be a keen disappointment to the thousands who have come here for the races if Sir Thomas Lipton's green sloop doesn't produce a return to form and make it more interesting for Harold S. Vanderbilt's Enterprise.

Never before has the sentimental support for the aging Irish baronet been so pronounced. Stimulated by Lipton's sportsmanlike fashion of taking his first set-back yesterday, when he swallowed the disappointment that must have been sharply felt, the sea-dogs hereabouts, young and old, have not yet given up hopes of Shamrock winning the "old mug."

Nevertheless, the second race well may be a decisive test and show whether Enterprise was the better, faster boat that she seemed in leading Shamrock to the finish by two minutes and 52 seconds in the opening race to leeward and windward.

If Enterprise repeats and makes it two straight, the race may be all over but the final shouting, barring an accident to the defender or as a result of bad breaks, even though it takes four victories to clinch the series.

If Shamrock's skipper, Captain Ernest Heard, should suddenly find conditions more to his liking and show the way home tomorrow afternoon, calculations will have to be completely revised and it will then be anybody's pick.

So far, with only one race in somewhat flukey winds on which to base their opinions and conjecture, yacht-racing experts have discovered nothing whatever on which to alter their previous belief that Enterprise would walk off with the series and keep the cup where it has been since the yachting war of 1851.

There was no little debate today over whether Shamrock was as expertly handled as she might have been under conditions that resulted in a very monotonous parade out to sea and back again. Some thought the challenger's skipper allowed himself to be seriously outsmarted on the getaway, furthermore that Shamrock's sails were too heavy for light weather and that she failed to capitalize her advantage when Enterprise was all but overhauled an hour out on the leeward run.

Others figured the outcome was strictly the result of Enterprise being the better boat, sail for sail, and that tactics had little or nothing to do with it on the whole, because of the extremely simplified conditions which called for no more than two or three tacks throughout the last 15 miles to windward.

The start tomorrow is scheduled for 10:40 a. m. (eastern standard time), depending on wind and weather.

TO INVESTIGATE COLLISION OF LOWELL AND C. G. BOAT

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Sept. 14.—(AP)—A federal investigation to determine responsibility for the collision between the steamer City of Lowell and the coast guard boat Wilkes near the course of the international yacht races off Newport yesterday will be instituted within a few days, Inspector Richard F Bailey of the United States steam vessel inspection service announced here last night, after examining the bow of the City of Lowell.

Inspector Bailey was in the pilot house of the City of Lowell with Captain Philip Oliweiler at the time of the collision. Examination of the hull of the steamer here last night revealed no damage except a denting and twisting of her bow above the water line.

Captain Oliweiler stated last night that the Wilkes approached the steamer from the port side and was warned by a sharp whistle blast. He said that the City of Lowell had been on a slow rate of speed and was put strongly in reverse just before the collision.

LIPTON NOT DISMAYED BY DEFEAT SATURDAY

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 14.—(AP)—The quiet and calm of a Sunday in a shipwise town by the sea hung over sleepy Newport today, where only yesterday all the rush and excitement, horn-tooting and crowds that go with the international races for the America's cup, gripped the island seaport.

The trim, fragile racers of England and America, the greenbodied Shamrock V and the lean white Enterprise, rolled in the sparkling waters of Newport harbor, slender masts stretched naked to the sky, sails lashed tight to the booms. There was no sign of life aboard the resting yachts, though the waters about them were gay with the sputtering gigs and tenders of the greatest flotilla of pleasure craft ever assembled in one harbor.

It was visiting day in the fleet and the perfect summery weather brought out all the color and gaiety reserved for an off day in the racing. Some of the hundreds of craft packed in the harbor had their anchors up early and were away on a cruise for the day. Many, satisfied that they had seen in yesterday's Enterprise victory, the forecast of the races to come, hauled away for home and relieved some of the congestion.

Even Sir Thomas Lipton, almost in retirement from the social activities of the occasion due to poor health and advanced age, chugged ashore before 10 a. m., to shake hands with all in sight of the Yacht club dock, visit briefly with friends, take an automobile ride about town, and chug back to his huge yacht, the Erin.

Undismayed at the defeat of his latest pride of the Shamrock line, he confidently assured his friends that there was another day coming and he was nowhere near defeat yet.

The entire Lipton party seemed to believe that only luck of the race, plus a poor start and misely breezes, brought about their opening defeat. The Shamrock nearly held its own on the fifteen-mile homeward leg in freshening breezes.

The wind was blowing up steadily today.

DEFENDER WON RACE BY QUARTER OF MILE

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 14.— By two minutes and 52 seconds, the Enterprise crossed the finish line yesterday afternoon a winner over Sir Thomas Lipton's Shamrock V in the first contest of the series for the America's cup. Harold Vanderbilt outmaneuvered his British rival in the 30-mile race, the American defender winning by a quarter of a mile although the weather was believed to be Shamrock weather.

The official times were: Enterprise started at 12:55, finished at 4:50:48; her elapsed time was four hours, three minutes and 48 seconds.

Shamrock V started at 12:55; finished at 5:01.40; her elapsed time was four hours, six minutes and 40 seconds.

REP. STATE CONVENTION OPENS IN HARTFORD TODAY

HARTFORD, Sept. 14.— (AP)—The republican state convention will open here tomorrow night in Foot Guard armory with all indications pointing to a session in which nothing will disturb the ordinary routine of such gatherings. An attempt will be made at the second session of the convention Tuesday morning, according to George W. Hull, Burlington delegate, to force a roll call vote on the candidacies of Lieut. Gov. Ernest E. Rogers and Prof. Albert Levitt for the gubernatorial nomination.

The state convention will be called to order at 9 o'clock by J. Henry Roraback, chairman of the state central committee, and he will present U. S. Senator Federick C. Walcott as the temporary chairman. Senator Walcott will deliver the "keynote address," after which the convention will elect honorary vice presidents and members of the committees on rules, resolutions, credentials and permanent organization. Each senatorial district names one member for each of these committees.

This is expected to complete the business of the first session.

CONTEST FOR MIDDLETOWN BOARD OF EDUCATION

MIDLETOWN, Sept. 14.—(AP)—Middletown voters tomorrow will decide a spirited contest for places on the town board of education. Three slates were in the field tonight, one composed of Mrs. Ida B. Nixon, T. MacDonough Russell, incumbents, and John F. Pickett. On a second ticket, William W. Wilcox, Jr., is named with Mrs. Nixon and Russell, while Edwin Wilcox, no relation to William, is to run as a one-man slate on an anti-vaccination stand.

NEGROES FOUGHT KNIFE AND GUN DUEL OVER GIRL

NORTH HAVEN, Sept. 14.—(AP)—Rivalry of two Negro youths for a girl early today culminated in a knife and gun duel in which Glenn Belton, 18, was critically injured. Willis Porter, 18, was being held without charge pending the outcome of Belton's injuries.

The fight occurred towards the end of a Saturday night dance in the Negro colony of the Montowese creosote plant.

Porter told police he and Belton for several months had been at odds over which was to be the recognized suitor of the girl. In July, he said, Belton, considerably the larger of the two, had beaten him up to discourage his advances to the girl. Shortly after midnight the argument was resumed. Witnesses said Belton, brandishing a knife, chased Porter from the dance. As he was about to overtake the smaller youth, Porter wheeled and fired at him with a revolver, inflicting a wound in the abdomen. Belton's name is on the danger list of a New Haven hospital.

SEVERANCE OF RELATIONS BETWEEN PERU AND URUGUAY

MONTEVIDEO, Sept. 14.—(AP)—Civilians close to the foreign office expect a complete severance of diplomatic relations between Peru and Uruguay.

Shortly after the military junta headed by Lieut. Col. Luis Sanchez Cerro took the reins of govenment in Peru away from Augusto B. Leguia, Uruguay recalled its diplomatic representatives from Lima.

It is believed that Sanchez Cerro will retaliate by abolishing the Peruvian legation in Montevideo.

TREGELO BOUND OVER TO SUPERIOR COURT

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, September 14—Joseph Tregelo, 21, of Meriden was bound over to the next criminal term of superior court Saturday when probable cause was found in police court on a charge of criminal negligence in the operation of an automobile on upper Jackson street, Tuesday evening, August 26, causing the death of Maurice L. Turcotte, 81, of this city. He was released under bonds of $2,500.

The witnesses were Civil Engineer John F. Collins, who presented a map of the scene of the fatality, Arthur P. Bergeron, Clarence N. Laramie, Oscar H. Gaudreau, Arthur L. Steitz, Arthur J. Dubreuil, Avis French, aged 11 ,Miss Fleurette Asselin, a companion of Trelego in the car, Leander Wright and the accused.

Tregelo, who was represented by Attorney C. J. Danaher of Meriden, said that he was temporarily blinded by the headlights of another machine coming toward him and for that reason failed to see the elderly man as he crossed the street. He said that he applied his brakes solely as a matter of precaution.

Clarence Laramie, an eye-witness, said that Mr. Turcotte walked in front of the car without looking to either side. He estimated the speed of Trelego's roadster at 30 to 35 miles an hour. He said that he was seated on the verandah of his home, some 50 feet away, at the time and that he did not see any other car or cars passing at the time.

Policeman William Hurley who conducted the investigation, testified as to the measurements he had made. Miss Asselin placed the speed of the car at 25 miles an hour and said that she had not seen another car prior to the accident.

Leander Wright said that he saw another car with very bright lights coming from the opposite direction as the Tregelo machine passed. He estimated the speed at about 30 to 35 miles an hour.

Trelego said that upon being blinded by the other headlights he had reduced his speed to 15 or 20 miles an hour. When he struck the man he applied his brakes and came to a stop within a short distance. He drove Mr. Turcotte to the hospital.

The little French girl, who made an admirable witness, said that Mr. Turcotte was crossing Jackson street from the west to east sidewalk. His head was down, he was smoking a pipe and was not looking in either direction, the girl said.

Four Other Court Cases

With a total of five cases on hand, police court did not adjourn until afternoon today. The case of William H. Segar of Hartford, formerly of this city, charged with passing a fraudulent check to the amount of $42.60 on Mike Mazzola of this city, was continued until next Saturday. Segar furnished bonds.

Mrs. Bridget Breault of Anthony street was charged with breach of the peace and assault on a neighbor, Mrs. Anna Sadesky. She pleaded not guilty. The allegation was that the woman had thrown four stones at the complainant, one of them striking her in the back. This stone was exhibited in court. After hearing the evidence the court was of the opinion that the whole matter was a neighborhood feud and so ordered a continuance of the case for one month with a recommendation that the families patch their troubles.

Stanley Forostosky of Eagleville, a milk dealer, was fined $7 and costs for selling a pint of watered milk. He pleaded not guilty but was convicted on testimony of Fitz Henry Payne of Abington, a milk inspector and William J. Warner, a commissioner of the dairy and food department. The sample of milk was sold to inspector Payne by Vincent Sledjesky, an employe of the accused. Forostosky contended that the sample did not come from his dairy but had been purchased from another dealer as on that occasion his own supply for customers had become exhausted.

James Shea, 18, of Meadow street, was charged with driving without a license to which he pleaded guilty and was fined $3 and costs. The youth, who was arrested by Officer Arthur Hurley, pleaded through Probation Officer William V. Palmer, Sr.

It is a popular belief that the democratic town caucus to be held Monday night to name a ticket for the elections October 6, will, as was the republican caucus, bring out a record attendance. The party is expected to endorse the incumbents, Frank P. Fenton, who has been town clerk and treasurer for 31 years, and William A. Buck, first selectman the past term. Jeremiah C. Healy of South Windham, who has been second selectman for the past four years is expected to meet a contest for renomination on the part of Eugene J. Dion, treasurer of the Windham Taxpayers' association. John M. Bransfield will stand for renomination as town auditor as will Thomas A. Shea for registrar. Alvin V. Nelson and Albert J. Piche, the incumbent, with the possibility of a "dark horse" will contest for the nomination for town tax collector. Michael L. Falvey, the secretary of the taxpayers' association will seek nomination for assessor.

Mrs. Katherine McGillicuddy

A solemn high mass of requiem was solemnized in St. Joseph's church at 9 o'clock Saturday morning for Mrs. Katherine McGillicuddy, with Rev. Michael J. Thompson as the celebrant, Rev. Francis A. Duch, deacon and Rev. Henry E. Quinn, sub-deacon. Mrs. Edmund R. Portelance was organ accompanist for solos rendered by Mrs. Henry Mathieu. Burial was in the family plot at St. Joseph's cemetery where Rev. Father Thompson read a prayer of committal. The bearers were John J. Sullivan, Timothy Gallivan, Francis Connor and Raouel Lariviere. Killourey Brothers had charge of the arrangements.

Edwin Menard

Services for Edwin Menard were held at the home in Amston at 8:30 o'clock Saturday morning followed by a requiem high mass in St. Andrew's church, Colchester, at 9 o'clock. Rev. Edward Morrison was the celebrant. Burial was in St. Andrew's cemetery with the following as bearers, Felix Menard, Felix Menard, Jr., Frank Menard, Frank Menard, Jr., and William and Charles Menard. Avery and Van Zandt had charge of the arrangements. The deceased died in the W. W. Backus hospital, Norwich, following a fall of 30 feet from a silo at his home in Amston.

A double compartment shed in the rear of the residence at 198 Jackson street, owned by Annie F. Sullivan was destroyed by fire of undetermined origin at 6:27 o'clock Saturday morning. Engine company No. 1 was called to the scene by a bell alarm from Box 56. The clapboards of two houses and another shed in the neighborhood were scorched by the heat.

A birthday party was tendered Miss Margaret Moran at her home, 156 Windham road Friday evening with games, dancing and refreshments making up an enjoyable night. Present were the Misses Alice Timmins, Lillian Sullivan, Marie Connelly, Esther Portelance, Ruth Costello, Anita Leclaire and Margaret Moran, James Timmins, Spencer Lincoln, Leo Cohen, Harry Larkin, Norman Williams, Russell Potter, Gerald Balloon, and Edward Hammill of Norwich.

People of this vicinity indicated an unusual interest in the formal opening of the city's first miniature golf course on upper Main street last week, there being an attendance of over 1,000. Some 250 played the course of 18 holes, several registering excellent scores. Daniel Connell and Ernest Bernard, local young business men, were complimented on their enterprise. Andrew "Duffy" Connell is manager of the course.

A fourth and final dividend of 8 per cent for creditors of the Quidnick-Windham Manufacturing company, which formerly conducted textile plants in Rhode Island and Connecticut and which has been in receivership for several years, was authorized under a decree entered Saturday in superior court by Judge Leonidas Pouliot, Jr., at Providence.

Previous dividends of 25, 12½ and 10 per cent had been paid, making a total of 55½ per cent with the final payment.

Rev. Harry Grimes, a former pastor of Windham Congregational church, has accepted a call from Braintree, Mass., to Newburyport.

BODY OF LOCAL CHILD BROUGHT HERE FOR BURIAL

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Sept. 14—The body of Lilliam Gow, 13, of 25 Bans street, who was fatally injured Saturday at South Windsor when an automobile in which she was riding went off the highway and crashed into a telegraph pole, has been brought back to this city. A pupil in the seventh grade of the Model school here, she left Friday evening with her grandmother, Mrs. William E. Taylor, to visit the family of Joseph Brown in South Windsor over the week-end. William Lockwood, 22, the driver of the car, was arrested for criminal negligence and driving without a license. Bernice Brown, 13, formerly of this city, was seriously injured in the crash. The deceased leaves her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. William E. Taylor of this city with whom she had always resided; her mother, Mrs. John Gow, of Bridgeport; and a sister, Miss Beatrice Gow also of Bridgeport. She was better known as Taylor.

Earl, well digger, and his bride will reside at 120 North street.

COLCHESTER

REPUBLICAN CAUCUS RENOMINATES C. A. KRAMER

Over a hundred were in attendance at the republican caucus held in Grange hall at seven o'clock Saturday evening for the nomination of candidates for town offices for the October election. Charles F. Brown was chairman and Jesse F. Bailey was clerk. The candidates nominated were: First selectman, Charles A. Kramer, renominated; second selectman, George H. Standish; board of relief, George B. Miller; assessor, Robert S. Brown; tax collector, Joseph Dember; grand jurors, George Gilmore, Harold F. Brown, John M. Riley and Charles F. Brown; agent of town deposit fund, Cyrus E. Pendleton; constables, Elmer H. Foote, Arthur L. Standish, Nelson Stern, Edward Levine; registrar of voters, Samuel Freedman; town school board, Rev. A Wallace Canney. The treasurer and town clerk were elected last year for a two-year term. It was voted to empower the town committee to fill any vacancies which may occur in the list of candidates. Charles A. Kramer, who has been first selectman for four terms, was renominated without opposition. His conservatism and business-like transaction of the town's affairs has won him wide support among members of both parties. His running mate, George H. Standish, a well known farmer in the Westchester Center section of the town, has a considerable following in that district and his name was received with acclaim at the caucus session. The new candidate for tax collector, Joseph Dember, was nominated unanimously, a large crowd of his supporters in favor of more effective tax collection being in attendance.

OBITUARY

Mrs. John Squires

Mrs. Fannie Shaller Squires, 89, died at her home on South Main street early Saturday morning after a short illness. She had been about the house as usual up to Friday evening when she was taken suddenly ill. Only a few days ago she had gone by automobile with her daughter to visit her brother, William Shaller, in Lebanon and seemed to feel no ill effects from the trip. Mrs. Squires was born in Colchester, June 17, 1841, the daughter of Calvin and Julia Shaller. She attended the public schools and Bacon academy. Her husband, John Squires, who died a number of years ago, was a prominent member of Wooster lodge, No. 10, A. F. and A. M., of Colchester. For many years she was a faithful attendant at Colchester Methodist church. She is survived by a daughter, Miss Louise F. Squires, two grandchildren, Ray and Miss Vera Squires, all of Colchester, and a brother, William Shaller, of Lebanon.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Broadway Theatre

John McCormack, acclaimed the world's greatest tenor, who stars in "Song o' My Heart," the Fox Movietone production which is now playing at Warner's Broadway, has more imitators, perhaps, than any singer in history. This distinction would probably be shared by Patti and Caruso. In the last eight or ten years hundreds of tenors have been heard, who, in the estimation of their managers or enthusiastic friends and relatives were "greater than McCormack," but they gradually but surely slipped from public notice.

Music lovers the world over will be delighted to know that in McCormack's first picture his voice will be heard in 11 songs.

This Fox Movietone, the early scenes of which were filmed and recorded in Ireland and completed in Hollywood, has Maureen O'Sullivan and Alice Joyce in important feminine roles, John Garrick, youthful lead of "The Sky Hawk," and Miss O'Sullivan play the youthful lovers. J. M. Kerrigan, Farrell Macdonald, Tommy Clifford and Effie Ellsler are seen in interesting characters and the balance of the supporting company and even the extras are true Celtic types. Tom Barry wrote the story.

Palace Theatre

"Big Boy," which opened Sunday at the Palace theatre, is the newest film in the great career of Al Jolson, screen favorite of all times. "Big Boy" will be shown at the Palace through Wednesday and it is expected that the capacity crowds which always attend Jolson shows will be on hand as usual.

While "Big Boy" is somewhat different from the usual Jolson productions it is certain that everyone will enjoy it. It is the story of a family of aristocrats whose fortunes have dwindled until they are dependent upon their horses to win races and thus help out their financial troubles. Jolson plays the part of Gus, descendant of an old family slave. He is the jockey for the family and as the time approaches for the big Kentucky Derby he gets the horse in readiness. Through a twist of fate he is given notice and a conspiracy against the horse is formed. The day of the race is at hand and it looks bad for the family. How it turns out and how Gus saves the day with true loyalty is a thrilling episode.

The setting for "Big Boy" is one of the most interesting features of the film. An authentic Kentucky mansion with its stables and servants' quarters and its expansive lawns and gardens was built in one of the show places on the Pacific coast especially for the film and every detail was given the most careful consideration.

Among the stars in this picture are Claudia Dell, chosen especially for her southern accent, and Louise Closser Hale.

"Big Boy" is supported with a great bill of short features. Our Gang comedy is the funniest of all; Baby Follies, a Technicolor masterpiece, and other shorts; in all, this is a show for young and old.

Tired Feeling Called Nature's Protest for Poor Care of Body

Constipation more apt to be cause than ordinary day's work . .

A regular well cleaned system is the first and perhaps the biggest step toward health and strength, according to many modern specialists. Bad skin, pimples, headache, biliousness and general run-down or tired feeling may all be signs of poor bowel functioning.

Yet there is now no real need to suffer from constipation and thousands and thousands of people are finding relief in Feen-a-mint—the modern chewing gum laxative that you can purchase everywhere. This is because Feen-a-mint works on an important new principle—that of uniform internal distribution.

Because you chew Feen-a-mint it is effective in milder doses than ordinary laxatives. For the effectiveness of a laxative is not so much dependent upon the quantity swallowed as upon the thoroughness of its distribution throughout the alimentary tract.

While you chew this delicious bit of gum the tasteless laxative it contains is gradually released and mixed with the saliva. Thus it is carried to the intestinal tract smoothly, evenly, without shock to the system or the distressing after-effects so common with old-fashioned laxatives. Each particle of the laxative in Feen-a-mint works with utmost efficiency, gently encouraging the intestinal muscles to resume the activity necessary for healthful elimination.

The action of Feen-a-mint is thorough, gentle, dependable. With the proper dosage, it is not necessary to increase the amount of Feen-a-mint you take nor to switch to another laxative for a change. Feen-a-mint is harmless and contains no habit-forming drugs. Truly the health laxative. Ask for a package at any drug store. —Adv.

DANIELSON

CEMETERY TOOL HOUSE USED AS PETTING PLACE

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Sept. 14—Something akin to horror attaches to contemplating how parties, whose identity is fairly well established, have been breaking into the tool house in the older part of Westfield cemetery, and there, among the revered dead, have left evidences of petting parties they have indulged in. Aside from an old couch, there is nothing but tools and other equipment used in cemetery work stored within the building, which sits atop a high bank above the winding course of the Assawauga river. State officers have been checking on the matter. Entrance to the building has been gained by those desecrating the peaceful resting place of the dead through a window in the toolhouse.

Donald Simmons of Schenectady was before Justice Asa Scranton in Woodstock yesterday, after his car had been in collision with another car operated by Philip Hopp of Putnam. Simmons was charged with failure to grant half the traveled right of way, was found guilty and was fined $5 and costs, which he paid. His appearance in court was ordered by a state officer of the Danielson barracks, who checked up on the accident.

Gertrude Lappan, who has been in charge of a beauty parlor here for several years, for a Providence owner, was committed to jail on Saturday in default of bonds of $50. She was taken into custody early Saturday evening by a state officer, and charged with intoxication and breach of the peace. It was understood today that she had been discharged from her position. She is scheduled to appear in the town court on Monday.

Crecinzo Rendene of East Providence will come to court here Monday for doing something with a motor truck he was driving that is contrary to the motor vehicle laws of the state. Rendene was arrested out on the Providence road for coasting, it is charged, his heavy truck down a steep hill, a practice that state officers, realizing its danger, are constantly trying to break up.

FUNERAL

Ignazio Longo

From the home on Water street Saturday morning, the funeral of Ignazio Longo, who died in Norwich the past week, was held, with services at St. James' church at 9 o'clock. The officers of the solemn high mass of requiem were Rev. J. F. Tobin, M. S., Rev. J. A. Demers, M. S., and Rev. F. Baldwin, M. S. Burial was in Holy Cross cemetery, Rev Fr. Demers conducting the committal service. The bearers were Michael Dascoll, Michael Peters, Damase Boulais, Joseph Giraca, Antonion Longo and George Gendreau. L. E. Kennedy was in charge of the arrangements.

Traffic over the trunk line highways through this territory has slumped at least 50 per cent, since the high peak of the season was reached over the Labor day holiday. It is now possible to ride over the main arteries of traffic hereabouts, even over the week-end period, without trailing along in close packed lines of cars. Not in years has the traffic fallen off so decidedly in such a short time after Labor day as has been the case this year.

Only two weeks remain until the voters of Killingly will go to the polls to register their choice for town officers for the year beginning the first Monday in October. This particular Sunday there was considerable doing among those who concern themselves with politics in a more or less intimate way. Leaders of both parties improved the opportunity for talks with voters in outlying districts, telling them the this or that of the campaign and what it may bring forth—if the said voters should happen to cast their ballots other than as advised. Old-timers in the racket will tell you that this personal campaigning often decides a small town election. And there's a fight on in Killingly this year!

Every day there is a constant invitation to accident in the crowded business section of Danielson, because altogether too many motorists haul their cars out from where they have been parked into the traffic lane without giving any indication that they are going to do so. There is a clause of the automobile laws having to do with "failure to give the proper signal." On the strength of that there are to be some court appearances unless drivers of parked cars do better than they have been doing, in many instances, here in town.

An East Killingly resident called up today to say that community is still on the map, and how! Believe it or not, the story is to the effect that several cows of a herd up there were noticed eating late-developing huckleberries Saturday, and that when they were milked this morning they gave huckleberries and cream, which was once an outstanding favorite delicacy among the old-timers of these regions. And if that doesn't put East Killingly back in the running with Winsted again, it's no one's fault around here. Hen stories out of East Killingly have been scarce of late.

Some of the local men who were out at sea off Newport Saturday, watching the race between Enterprise and Shamrock V, attested today that they would not have missed the thrill of the spectacle for many dollars, nor would they go through following the racing yachts along the course again for an equal number of dollars. The answer to this is that there were so many vessels of all kinds out there following the race—ships that ran up to 24,000 tons and all kinds of other craft down to little runabouts—that the water was churned into a ferment, and that the little craft, like the local men were riding on, got kicked around plenty by the disturbed waters. Some of the local contingent rode from morning until late in the afternoon on a craft that never once deigned to be quiet.

It is possible that from some official source in Killingly, mayhap within the borough of Danielson, a request will have to be filed in the near future with the state highway department for permission to install traffic control lights in Main street, opposite Water, Academy, Reynolds streets and Westcott road. Main street rates a double trunk line highway. It carries the through traffic between Hartford and Providence and Norwich and Worcester, and, in addition, all the local traffic.

Getting out of the feeder lanes mentioned is extremely difficult during the greater part of any given day. The through traffic now has the right of way, and no sensible driver trying to get out in there from the side streets is likely to dispute it. Traffic control lights, it is held, would give the feeder lane traffic drivers an even break, and they contend they are entitled to that.

Many a tale has been printed about hit-and-run drivers, but not so many yarns about the missed-and-run driver of a horse-drawn vehicle. Ignatius Zurkowski of Plainfield is going into court in that town the first of the week because he is alleged to have ducked out of a situation brought about by the fact that he was driving his horse along a state highway without having a light on the vehicle in which he was riding.

Because of this alleged violation two automobiles got into a jam, and both of them were considerably damaged. One of the cars was operated by Orrie Lane of Providence, the other by Oscar Barr of Plainfield. These machines were traveling in opposite directions. When Zurkowski's rig loomed into the range of the headlights of either one car or the other, which one is not quite clear, there was some ducking and dodging to avoid hitting Zurkowski's rig, with a resultant crash of the cars.

Meanwhile it will be charged in court, Zurkowski complacently drove off, leaving the motorists to mend their troubles, but he was later rounded up and ordered to appear for a hearing. It was hinted today that, in case of conviction, he may be asked by the owners of the cars to settle for the damage to the machines.

Numbers of requests from property owners have come in for publicity relative to the manner in which children are making life a burden to many people because of the manner in which the youngsters are roller skating on the new sidewalks in various sections of the borough. They allege that it isn't safe to try to proceed along one of the new walks during much of the time that the children are out of school, and that noisy manner in which they disport themselves is an irritant to elderly people especially. The allegation is that the kids with the roller skates have become an outstanding nuisance, and that something should be done about it. The warden and court of burgesses, complainants have been advised, are the proper persons to whom formal protest should be made.

Owners of many properties in the territory outside of that served by the local city water system are eagerly awaiting rain. Wells have gone dry on many places, duplicating the inconvenient situation that was experienced at this time last year.

Reports came in today that "jacklight" hunters for deer are again operating in this territory. The lights used are said to be operated by batteries and are practically as powerful as a real searchlight.

That chestnuts are slowly making a comeback was illustrated to many people who looked into the show window of a store here at the week-end and gazed with interest at a branch taken from one of the young chestnut trees that are so plentiful hereabouts and to which was attached a well-filled burr.

Progress is being made on the construction of the shoulders along the nearly three miles of concrete roadway that recently was constructed between Wauregan and Danielson. Fences that are to border the new highway at certain points remain to be constructed.

In the absence of Night Officer Laird Winchell from duty in the business section Saturday night, Special Officer Hosea Greene was on duty. Officer Winchell was in Boston on a business trip.

New Teachers At High School

In Plainfield high school, Principal John L. Chapman outlined the year's work at a recent teachers' meeting. There are six new members on the faculty and two more to be engaged soon. The new teachers are: Miss Aling, home economics, clothing; Miss Clsar, home economics, food; Miss Nicholson, mathematics and girls' physical education; Miss Madelyn Cronin, English and latin; Mr. Ringland, science and assistant in boys' physical education; Mr. Upham, commercial subjects.

The high school enrollment of 340 is much higher than that of last year. With the increased enrollment it has been necessary to engage extra teachers. The class officers are: Seniors, Miss Helen Cronin, faculty advisor; Isadore Messier, president; Mary Loring, vice president; Eva Bellanance, secretary; Hilliard Smith, treasurer; Thomas Lang, student council representative. Juniors, Miss Madelyn V. Cronin, faculty advisor; Peter Koss, president; Aurise Theroux, vice president; Frank Koss, secretary; Earl Leach, treasurer; Percy Wilcox, student council representative. Sophomores, Miss Clsar, faculty advisor; Dorothy Babcock, president; Laura Gallup, vice president; Elise Krauss, secretary; Velkko Laakso, treasurer; Thomas Lyons, student council representative. Freshmen, Miss Ailing, faculty advisor; Frederick Pease, president; Doris Stankovich, vice president; Alice Smith, secretary; John French, treasurer. The freshmen have not yet elected a member to the student council.

Miss Dorothy Pike, of South Manchester, spent the week end in town.

Mrs. Herbert Smith is at a hospital in Fall River for observation.

MEAN THIEF STEALS WHEEL AS WELL AS SPARE TIRE

Miss Vera Lee and Mrs. David Bothwell had an unpleasant experience at Pachaug fair Friday, when they started for home in the evening. Miss Lee's machine was parked outside the grounds, and one of the wheels on the machine had been stolen, and the spare tire, also. Packages belonging to Mrs. Bothwell were stolen also. Not noticing anything wrong, they got into the car, which went down on one side as they attempted to start, and it was found to have been jacked up, and left that way, minus a wheel.

A committee from the Congregational Ladies' society and the Missionary society, Mrs. L. G. Buckingham, Mrs. Andrew McNicol, Mrs. F. E. Robinson, Mrs. George A. Ross and Mrs. Abraham Zeeger, has set the date for a chicken pie supper, the chickens being donated by Mr. Ross.

Mrs. F. E. Robinson has been called to Holyoke, Mass., by the illness of her sister-in-law, Mrs. Walter Harvey.

The American Legion auxiliary meets in the Red Cross room this (Monday) evening.

Mr. and Mrs. George H. Prior, Miss Ellen Prior, Mrs. Harry Davis and Miss Bertha Davis are at J. E. Phillips' cottage at Groton Long Point for a week.

More than 2,000,000 persons pass over the bridge between Eagle Pass, Tex., and Piedras Negras, Mexico, each year.

PUTNAM

DEMOCRATS NOMINATE STRONG TICKET FOR COMING ELECTION

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Sept. 14—Inspired by their victories scored at the polls in the state campaign of 1928 and the town campaign last year when they elected their candidate for tax collector, the democrats of Putnam at an enthusiastic and largely attended caucus held Friday evening, by filling out their ticket have confronted republican opponents with stiff opposition that assures the voters of a campaign that will be lively and keenly contested.

The democratic ticket is one of the strongest ever presented in the party's history. While the names of a few of its office seekers are those of men who will receive their political baptisms this year, the majority of candidates are well seasoned timber veterans of many campaigns. Heading the ticket is Edward F. Girard, minority representative on the board of selectmen who is nominated as his party's choice for first selectman. Allied with Selectman Girard in his contest to secure a democratic majority on the town governing board is Alderman Francis X. Vandais, democratic leader in the common council, whose nomination, like his running mate's was made by acclamation.

The democrats see high hopes of a victory in the Girard-Vandais combination, since both are well known residents of the city and have long been identified with democratic politics.

Other nominees for town offices on the democratic slate, which was compiled after a series of heated debates and two contests are: Adelard P. Pepin, assessor; Daniel F. Labossiere, board of relief; Alfred Bonneville, tax collector; George Basley, Thomas Duquette, David Beausoliel, John Durand and Alberic Robitaille, constables; George Potvin, registrar of voters; Dorothy Jones Bartlett and John Mitchell Hogan, town school committee and Mrs. Mary E. Keefe, Mrs. Valerie Delage and Bernard J. McGarry, town library directors.

Anticipating a contest for the office held by him for a number of years, George Potvin of Mill street, party registrar of voters, appeared at the caucus with the pledged strength of a large number of electors. When the order of business reached this point the name of Frederick H. Berthiaume was offered as a candidate, followed by the nomination of Potvin. The check list mode of ballotting was resorted to and the outcome of the ballot count showed there to be a total of 104 votes cast, 67 of which were for Potvin and 37 for Berthiaume.

By securing a majority of 13 votes, M. Edward Duffy of High street, democratic representative in the common council from the 4th ward, secured the party nomination for auditor over his opponent Edward W. Mullan, business man and school board member. This was the first time in many years a contest for this office had taken place.

In his nominating speech, Frederick P. Dumas, a member of the town committee, stated that in placing Mr. Duffy's name in nomination, he wished to clear in the minds of the voters the erroneous opinion, "that Tom Ryan and Frank Dumas are running the democratic party in Putnam." Such statements Mr. Dumas emphasized, are false and absolutely without foundation. Expressing that he hoped harmony would prevail at the caucus, he said that he had no idea that Mr. Mullan sought the auditor's office, when he promised Alderman Duffy he would nominate him as a candidate, and in view of the fact that he had agreed to name Mr. Duffy for the appointment, he said he had no alternative other than creating the contest, in which 109 ballots were cast, 61 going to Duffy and the remaining 48 to his opponent. Mr. Duffy will succeed Captain J. J. McGarry, democratic town and city auditor for a number of years, who did not seek re-nomination.

The party's candidates for the school board are Mrs. Bartlett, the incumbent, and John Mitchell Hogan, who has the distinction of being the youngest candidate in the field. Mr. Hogan is well known in Putnam where he had lived nearly all of his life. He is 27 years of age, a graduate of Putnam high school, and a graduate of St. Joseph's college in Philadelphia, where he received his degree of A. B. Mrs. Estelle Delisle was nominated for the school board but withdrew her name in favor of Mr. Hogan. Mrs. Delisle explained that she did not care for the position and asked that her name be withdrawn to avert the necessity of a third contest.

Thomas P. Ryan, city clerk and member of the town committee presided as moderator and James J. Charron was clerk of the meeting. Other officers of the caucus were Edmund Keane and Eugene H. Berthiaume, checkers, James J. Charron, chief teller, and Mrs. Delisle and Fred Mathieu, tellers.

Peter Racette, proprietor of a fleet of livery cars, on Thursday was served with a summons to appear in city court and upon his arraignment Friday morning he was charged with violation of the public utility rulings governing the operation of taxi cabs. Racette was without counsel and at his request, a continuance in the case until Wednesday morning was granted by Judge M. H. Geissler. Racette was arrested a few months ago on a similar charge but was cleared when the state was unable to furnish sufficient evidence to substantiate the allegation.

FUNERAL

Miss Mae E. Sabin

The funeral of Miss Mae E. Sabin, former resident of this city, who died Friday in Hartford, was held this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at the home of her brother John P. Sabin on School street. The services at which Rev. Henry Hodge, pastor of the First Baptist church, officiated were largely attended by relatives and friends and by a number of nurses from the Hartford hospital, where Miss Sabin had been a nurse for a long term of years. Burial was in the family plot in Grove street cemetery. Services at the grave were conducted by Rev. Mr. Hodge.

Miss Sabin was born in Putnam 49 years ago. She received her education in local public and high schools and was affiliated with the nursing staff of the well known Hartford institution almost continuously after she completed her nursing studies. Besides her mother Mrs. Charles Sabin of this city, Miss Sabin is survived by a sister, Mrs. Grace Vaughn of Hartford and two brothers, John P. and Nedd Sabin, both of Putnam.

Priest island, the state park in the south end of the city, was searched Friday evening by police for perpetrators of alleged shooting matches that have been taking place there during the past week. Late Friday evening a resident of Park street called the police and informed them that someone was using firearms on the island. When the officers arrived there a lone report came from a gun which seemed to have been fired in some part of the island. A long search was unsuccessfull in establishing the source of the shots which have alarmed the people of that part of the community. While police were beating down the woodlands, two local newspapermen who happened upon the scene, narrowly escaped serious consequence when they made an effort to investigate the cause for the occasional beams of light only to be mistaken by the police for the culprits responsible for the reported shooting. Strangely enough when the newspapermen's identity was learned, the policeman and their civilian assistant were easily convinced of the reporters' innocence after a few moments were devoted to their explanation of how they happened to be present.

Elzear Harper of Rye, N. Y., was a visitor in this city over the week-end.

Erwin Chlhowski of Revere, Mass., formerly of this city spent Sunday with friends in Putnam.

A number of important events arranged for the benefit of the nurses home fund of the Day Kimball hospital are scheduled for this week.

William Shann, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Shann of Fremont street, left Saturday for Pittsburg, Penn., where he will study at Carnegie Institute of Technology.

Russell Sherman, Putnam high school graduate in 1929 will leave this week for New Brunswick, N. J., where he will enroll at Rutgers Prep school.

George Westhaver, sub-master at Woodstock academy last year has succeeded Eugene H. Ellis, a principal of the school. Mr. Ellis resigned his position in June to accept the superintendency of schools in Farmington.

School street, from the intersection of Front to Walnut streets is a one way street, with entrance allowed only from the Front street end. The street was ordered closed this week by engineers at work on the laying of a new water pipe line. Traffic from Providence and North School streets is diverted through May and Railroad streets to the center of the city.

DR. LAMARCHE DIES AFTER ILLNESS OF A YEAR

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Sept. 14—Dr. George T. LaMarche, 66, for the past 12 years a Putnam physician and widely known throughout the county, died this morning at 6:45 o'clock at his home on Sabin street. A year's illness of chronic myocarditis followed by a heart attack late last evening caused his death today. Although ill for the past year, it was less than a month ago, when he was forced by his fast failing health to retire from the practice of his profession. Fully aware of his physicial condition Dr. Lamarche made a determined but nevertheless vain effort to overcome the affliction with which he was affected and despite the advice of his associates, to refrain from further practice, he continued to administer to the sick in the same traditional manner common among members of the medical profession. For the past two weeks his illness attained greater proportions, confining him to his bed where he remained critically ill.

Dr. Lamarche was born in St. Vincent's, Canada, P. Q., October 16, 1863, the son of George B. Lamarche and Marie Potvin. After completing his elementary and secondary education in schools of his birthplace, he entered the Victoria Medical college in Montreal from which he was graduated with a degree of doctor of medicine in 1890. He practiced in Montreal until 1898, when he came to the United States, and after successfully passing the state board of medical examiners for Massachusetts, settled in Springfield, where he built up a large practice. In 1918, Dr. Lamarche came to Putnam where he soon built up a wide practice, which was particularly extensive among the French-speaking people of this section.

Dr. Lamarche was an ardent student of literature and devoted a great deal of his leisure hours to this field. His pleasing personality won for him a large circle of friends who were deeply affected when they learned of his untimely death today. His interests knew few bounds and he was a painstaking and careful doctor, devoting a great deal of his time to the safeguarding of the health of school children. He conducted regular examinations of all the students attending local schools where for the past ten years, he had been retained by the department of education as the director of school health departments and rendered a similar service at St. Mary's parochial school. He was a faithful and devoted communicant of St. Mary's church and was intensely interested in the entire field of religious thought. Besides his affiliation with alumni and fraternity organizations of the Canadian Medical college from which he was graduated. Dr. Lamarche held membership in the American Medical association and was active in the fraternal orders of the L'Union St. Jean Baptiste, Catholic federation, and the order of Franco-American Foresters.

Dr. Lamarche was married shortly after the completion of his medical studies to Miss Hermine De Martigny who died a number of years ago. Of this union four children were born, all of whom survive their father. They are Mrs. Gabriel Provost of Montreal, Philip, of Fall River, Mass., George, a soldier in the U. S. Army and Paul Lamarche of Danielson.

After the death of his first wife, Dr. Lamarche was married to Miss Helen Dumaine. Three children were born of this marriage, two sons, Jean and Jacques and a daughter, Guy, and they together with the widow, survive their father.

FREEMAN'S RENOMINATION

When the republican delegates of the second congressional district assembled in convention and nominated Congressman Richard P. Freeman to succeed himself as the district's representative in Washington it was an anticipated and commendable action.

Congressman Freeman is now serving his eighth term, which means that because of such service he has not only become thoroughly acquainted with the district which he serves and its problems but he has gained a standing in the house of representatives which means invaluable prestige and has risen to important places on committees of that body. With the exception of Congressman Tilson, republican floor leader in the house, Congressman Freeman is the oldest in years of service in the Connecticut delegation at the national capital. That means acquaintance, knowledge and influence when it comes to serving his constituents or in administering his legislative duties.

During all the time that he has been at Washington, Congressman Freeman has displayed a keen insight into the requirements of the office, a willingness to learn of district requirements, a desire to do all possible on his part to secure advantages and solve problems and the ability to secure results.

The congressman has been among the strong supporters of the administration and the administration's policies. His aim has been to serve and serve faithfully and that he has succeeded in that respect is clearly indicated by the fact that he has been repeatedly reelected. The second district knows that it will retain a valued public service if Congressman Freeman is made to succeed himself, the convention has interpreted that sentiment by giving him a renomination by acclamation and there is no doubt but what the voters will heartily endorse it when they get a chance to cast their votes in November.

THE ST. LAWRENCE IDEA

Among the instructions given to Hanford MacNider, our new minister to Canada, was that to learn the attitude of the dominion government toward coming to some agreement with this country relative to the development of the St. Lawrence waterway.

Minister MacNider has immediately got busy. He has asked the government at Ottawa what the intention of the new ministry is regarding to changes in the St. Lawrence that will permit sea-going vessels to enter the Great Lakes, and in connection therewith he has asked for the appointment of a commission to consider, along with Americans, any questions which may be raised concerning the ownership of waterpower that may be developed with the work.

It is desirable to know what Canada proposes in view of the time that has elapsed since the proposition was suggested and the fact that the dominion government has been displaying a non-enthusiastic attitude.

Political conditions in Canada have changed, however, and it is on the strength of that that there is hope that the new ministry will help rather than handicap the idea. This is based upon the fact that during the campaign in which the liberals were ousted by the conservatives, that the leader of the latter bore down heavily on the fact that the leader of the liberals had failed to encourage the development. It doesn't appear that the do-nothing policy was the real reason for the return of the government to the conservatives, but with the coming into office of those who have been urging action it is timely that this government should try to find out how soon it can be expected that Canada will be lending its cooperation in getting the project started.

There is deep interest in this proposed development throughout the states bordering the lakes and others nearby. They appreciate the help that would come from such water service and all that seems to be needed now is to get the two governments together in some such manner as has been suggested. If the new governcussions, it should be prepared to do ment can be judged by campaign dis its part.

FRANCE AND ITALY

Ever since the London conference there has been uncertainty as to what would be the outcome of the naval discussions between France and Italy. It was unfortunate that they could not have come to an understanding whereby they would have participated as signers of the pact. There were questions raised between them, however, which made it impossible for a brief discussion to accomplish adjustment. The positions taken by the respective countries made a long and careful study necessary.

Such a study has been underway. Some progress has been made, and from Geneva comes the assuring report that it will not be long before there is a settlement of the tonnage differences between the countries. Though all predictions are not carried out it is certain that these neighboring countries have every reason for profiting by the good example that others have set. If others have been able to settle their differences and make agreements that will be advantageous, there is no good reason why they should not do so. In fact, it seems time for them to do so.

Instead of watching each other with a suspicious eye and making preparations to forestall any action that might be taken by the other, there is justification for the belief that they can come to an agreement regarding naval tonnage which will replace distrust and suspicion with confidence and accord.

Both of these countries can make good use of the millions they would be putting into naval construction. There are other channels where they could be employed with far more beneficial results, and with a naval agreement there would be no impairing of the naval defense by either country.

One report leans to the belief that the adjustment will come through the arrangement of a long naval holiday. That would have a beneficial effect and would permit of a thorough test of an agreement between the countries. By the good results of such action it could easily result in even broader results later on. If there is a disposition to get together on some agreement, the actual terms should be reached without great difficulty.

GOOD GOVERNMENT

With many city governments it is necessary for the citizens to wait until the expiration of the term of office of its mayor if they desire to get rid of his services because of a dislike for the kind of government he is providing.

In the city of Detroit that wait is not necessary. Provisions exist there for recalling the mayor if there are enough of that mind, and the city has gone through that experiece. Not only did they succeed in recalling the mayor, but they insisted upon electing another in his place when the test at the ballot box came. According to the Detroit law, when a mayor is recalled he automatically becomes a candidate for reelection, along with any other candidates that may be presented.

When the recall election showed that the mayor had been disqualified, several other names were presented in opposition at the election to follow. Time eliminated all but two, but in spite of the endeavors of those who backed the recall it was impossible to concentrate that opposition in one. With a divided opposition there was a chance for the deposed mayor to get back into office but Detroit stuck by the recall vote and selected another.

Under such circumstances the Michigan city has a right to look for something different in the way of city government. It should expect an end to the objectionable practices that prompted the recall. It has indicated that public sentiment is against them and no better evidence of a demand for better government could be asked. Knowing the shortcomings of the past head of that city's government, the new mayor should have his course very clearly charted. Furthermore, he knows that if it is not forthcoming, it lies within the power of the voters to insist upon getting good government.

LOOKING WELL AHEAD

There remain two years yet before the next presidential election but there are indications that the democrats are laying their plans in anticipation of the battle of ballots.

When Joseph Robinson, senator from Arkansas, was made the democratic vice-presidential candidate back in 1928 he was expected to offset some of the objection to Alfred E. Smith for president. It created a balance between the north and south elements in the party, also between the drys and wets.

Naturally Arkansas was delighted that its leading political star should be recognized. But, what's more, it doesn't propose that he shall be sidetracked by any such action. In the state convention of the Arkansas democrats, action was taken endorsing Senator Robinson as presidential candidate for 1932. That was a jump ahead of some of the other states, for while the names of Governor Roosevelt of New York and Governor Ritchie of Maryland have been mentioned quite frequently as possible candidates they have not actually been nominated by any state convention.

That this placing of Robinson's hat in the ring will be the cause for much political discussion is to be expected. It doesn't appear that he is responsible for it but the others mentioned for the democratic nominee are already making denials of what was said about them to the Arkansas convention and especially that part which dealt with their support of Senator Robinson. It doesn't look as if they were as ready to release any and all claims they might have or desire to make upon the party candidacy. At the same time, while it is stirring up a discussion of candidates, it remains to be seen what effect the Arkansans' action will have upon the conventions in other states.

CLARISSE

Eddie had something to say. Only the longer he stood in the presence of Clarisse the more difficulty he had in uttering it—for she was beautiful, though cold, like an iceberg that has found its way into southern seas.

He kicked at imaginary golf balls and toadstools on the carpet. He wiggled his toes desperately inside his shoes. He tied and untied his arms behind his back.

"Clarisse," he gulped at neighboring oxygen for support, "you know the little cashier—that is you don't know her, but if you did know her. What I mean to say is that if you knew that you knew her—hang it, Clarisse, anyway, this little cashier is a—er—pretty nice kid."

But Clarisse only stared at him expectantly, with those perfect blue eyes that were so like slices of inland sea. Her lashes were tropical ferns bending over the azure pools, and the limpid gold of the equatorial sun was in her flaxen hair.

"Clarisse, there isn't anybody got it on you for looks. You've been like a wonderful sister to me. Don't know really what I should have done without you when I first started working here at Blair's department store. Honestly, you just can't imagine what a lonesome fella I was—everybody seemed strange, everything was different. But from the beginning you were a real gold brick. Clarisse, you do look so warm-blooded and human, but Clarisse—forgive an old friend—you're awfully cold, so far away, but so uplifting.

"Anyway, this little cashier out in the hosiery section—"

Clarisse seemed suddenly to have grown sad, wistful, lifeless.

"Aw, kid, don't make me feel worse about it. Don't make it any harder. Gee, I don't want to hurt you, Clarisse, but you know this little cashier—that's right, you don't know her, do you?—she's a little thing, so high, not nearly as good looking as you. Why, come to think of it, nobody could be as good looking as you—nobody ever will, for me, regardless—nor as good and kind and above everybody. You've been like a goddess to revere and look up to—all gold and blue and perfect.

"Anyway, this little cashier—she, her folks, invited me over to Sunday dinner last week. Don't feel badly, Clarisse, I know you haven't any folks to invite me to Sunday dinner. I know you're an orphan and all alone like myself. But Gladys' folks—that's her name, cute, don't you think—treated me royally, just like their own son, you know. There was baked ham and sweet potatoes and hot apple pie—and little Gladys cooked it all. Can you imagine that! I was surprised dumb when her mother whispered to me that the kid had spent all Sunday morning in the kitchen in a big white apron preparing this marvelous food with her own small hands.

"I know, Clarisse, I'm not holding it against you that you can't cook. You simply weren't born to cook—you're too much of an artist, too delicately molded. Besides, the heat would probably spoil your beautiful complexion and take the curl out of your hair. I'm just trying to make you not blame yourself that you're not like other girls. You're above them. But honestly, it was amazing what little Gladys could do to common ordinary ham and sweets and apples.

"Well, anyway—you just ought to meet this little girl. She's much shorter than you, Clarisse. You're tall and graceful and stately—I mean, Clarisse, that you're the one and only queen in my life, and I don't want any other.

"So, Gladys and I went to a—a movie last night. Oh, we'd been to a few before, but I mention last night because, well, because I—er—held her hand.

"Aw, Clarisse, don't look so reproachful. What could I do? Her hand was there, and it was dark, and the orchestra was playing something romantic, and the fella in the picture was holding his girl's hand—what could I do? And it was very warm, honestly, Clarisse, you never felt such warm and friendly hands. Yours now, Clarisse, are—pardon me—awfully cold, but, of course, you can't help that, it's your circulation.

"After that, I, we—that is, us—or we decided to be engaged. Clarisse, Clarisse, you're not going to faint? Don't weep! Keep calm. Count ten. That's the girl. That's Eddie's gold brick. So, we're engaged, Gladys and I—a wonderful little girl, really ought to meet her sometime. But I'll come and see you often, and you'll always be the same perfect you to me—Eddie's own queen."

And he closed the door on the display storeroom, softly, as though on a finished chapter in his life. For he was young and a window trimmer's assistant.

While she—she was a model of wax.

YOUR HEALTH

Do Not Fear The Hospital

By Henry Parker Newman, M. D.,
San Diego.
(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

What is the place for the sick one in modern society? The old homes with their spacious interiors are passing and the average family house or apartment contains just enough room for the minimum requirements of living. Organized industries look after our laundry work and provide us with public dining rooms and places to read, play games, and dance. Sleeping, bathing, and caring for the children are the principal functions of the domestic interior.

But as we restrict our intimate quarters to the bungalow and the single apartment, the hospital is growing in efficiency of accommodation and in capacity. It is also growing in public esteem. Formerly it was said: "They have taken him to a hospital" in pity and reproach; now they say: "Haven't they taken him to a hospital?" in astonishment at such neglect.

Do not fear your hospital. Nowhere else can the sick be cared for adequately today. No home possesses the equipment essential to the elaborate requirements of the modern patient. For as science becomes more knowing every day, it is understood that the weapons with which disease may be fought and comfort and cure effected are many and complex. The laboratory, the x-ray, the hydro-and mechano-therapeutic measures, the instruments for studies in metabolism and the thousand niceties of surgical technique are all beyond the possibilities of the home—as they are of the ordinary consulting office. Yet every sick person is entitled to every advantage to be gained from any of these and other scientific means of examination and treatment.

Make your hospital the health resort. Find out if it is an accredited, standardized hospital. If it isn't, find out why it isn't. A careful yearly survey of hospital is conducted by the American College of Surgeons, which has furnished the minimum standard. If your hospital is on this list it is a safe place for you to go when you are ill. Do not fear it and do not wait until you are seriously ill before you give in and say to your physician "all right, I'll go." The medical profession and the community have much hard work before them before they place the hospital before the general public as the health resort. In the future it is to be hoped that with the appearance of first menacing symptoms of ill health, the tired business man and the ailing woman, the suffering child and all others will think of the hospital as the place of help—the best place to fo. It will then be the harbor where the body's rocking boat will come into safe waters, and the time of shelter there will be looked back upon with many pleasant memories instead of with the old repugnance and fears.

The next time you are ill and your doctor advises hospitalization, do not imagine you are seriously sick, accept the suggestion as the most economical one that could be made. When you are dismissed from your hospital nine times out of ten you will be a hospital booster and you will see to it that other members of your family will go there when they are ill and not be subjected to make-shift appliances that the average home affords.

A Washington Bystander

Associated Press Staff Writer
By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14 — This business of supplementing the regular agencies of government with special commissions and committees has developed surprising proportions.

And congress itself is just as prone to resort to it, apparently, as the white house.

There always is an outbreak of objection in congress when a new Hoover commission project shows up; but in almost the same breath a new congressional joint or special committee or commission will put in its appearance.

Another Pamphlet

Tyler Page, veteran clerk of the house, checked these extra assignments over, covering both senate and house, toward the close of the last session of congress. He found so many of them that he put out a little pamphlet telling who was who on them all.

Some of the projects are dead, or virtually so, but many are lively, though somewhat inactive for the summer due to bye-election necessities.

There are about 50 of these joint and special congressional affairs listed by Page which do not appear among the more than 70 regular committees of the two houses or the 63 "miscellaneous" commissions and what-not enumerated in the Congressional Directory.

That means administrative or other agencies not under direct supervision of any of the ten great executive departments. You find such important concerns as the interstate commerce commission, the farm board, the shipping board, the tariff commission in the miscellaneous classification of Uncle Sam's huge and far-spreading bureaucracy.

Honorary Jobs

But the congressional side lights grouped by the Page pamphlet do not appear elsewhere. And you find quite a lot of interest and a little amusement in looking 'em over.

For instance: You discover that due to their positions as presiding officers of the senate and house respectively, those two clashing personalities, Charles Curtis and Nicholas Longworth, are associated on a number of commissions.

There is the "Commission on Enlarging the Capitol Grounds," or the "Arlington Memorial Bridge Commission." And then these two, with President Hoover, are "exofficio commissioners" of the "Commission for the Celebration of the Two Hundredth Anniversary of the Birth of George Washington."

Of course, most of these commissionerships are largely honorary jobs. The commissioners actually don't meet often, if ever. An office force does the work, or perhaps other commissioners or committee members particularly interested in each project.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Happy Days

Some fall in love and do not know it
While to the world they plainly show it.
—Old Mother Nature.

Impy was beside himself with happiness. It seemed to him that the whole Great World had changed. Whereas only such a short time before it had been a gloomy old world, it now was the brightest old world imaginable. And it was all because a certain little Chipmunk, little Miss Frisky, had allowed him to touch noses. Such a thrill as ran all over Impy when he felt the touch of little Miss Frisky's nose! Then little Miss Frisky jumped back and ran. Impy ran after her.

"Don't run away!" he begged. "Don't run away!"

Little Miss Frisky seemed not to hear. She dodged behind a big stone. Impy hurried after her and almost ran into her. There she sat behind that big stone. Once more they touched noses. Once more little Miss Frisky ran and Impy ran after her. It was like a game. Presently, Impy noticed that each time little Miss Frisky ran a shorter distance. At last there came a time when after touching noses she didn't run.

"Did that big fellow with whom you fought hurt you much?" she asked.

"No," boasted Impy. "Of course he hurt me some, but I'm all right now."

"It was awful," said little Miss Frisky; and the way she said it made Impy tingle all over. "I was afraid he would kill you, because he was so big and strong."

"He—he did make me run," confessed Impy.

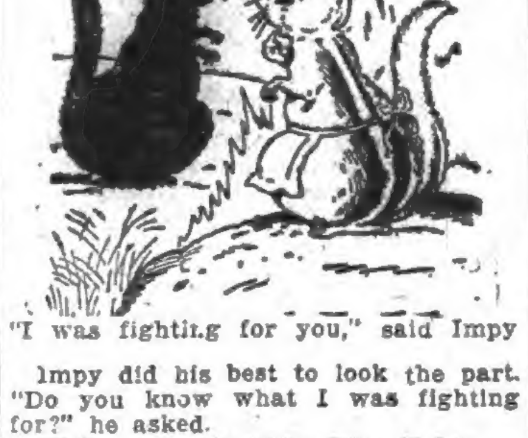
"Of course he did!" said little Miss Frisky brightly. "I never was so glad in my life as when finally you ran away."

Such a funny look as crossed the face of Impy. "But running away meant that I was beaten," he protested. "Do you mean that you were glad to see me beaten?"

"Of course not! How silly!" exclaimed little Miss Frisky. "I was glad to see you run, because I knew if you didn't you would be killed. And I didn't want you to be killed."

"Why not?" asked Impy.

Little Miss Frisky pretended not to hear that questions. "I ran away and hid from that big fellow," said she. "He hunted and hunted for me but he couldn't find me. I made sure that he had gone away before I showed myself at all." Little Miss Frisky reached over and gently licked one of Impy's wounds. Impy almost wished that he had a dozen wounds. "You are so brave," whispered little Miss Frisky.



"I was fighting for you," said Impy

Impy did his best to look the part. "Do you know what I was fighting for?" he asked.

"Tell me," said little Miss Frisky.

"I was fighting for you," said Impy.

"Not really?" replied little Miss Frisky.

"Yes, really," retorted Impy. "You see, I was afraid you would go off with him and I wanted to drive him away. I didn't want you to go away. You won't, will you?"

"No," said little Miss Frisky, "I won't go if you don't want me to. Are you happy?"

"I never was so happy in all my life," replied Impy.

"Neither was I," said little Miss Frisky.

And this was the beginning of many happy days.

Stories That Recall Others

Extra Compensation

Betty Lou's father gave her a nickel every week for learning her Sunday school lesson. One Sunday morning when he offered her the customary five cent piece she refused it.

"What's the matter?" he asked in surprise.

"Well," replied Betty Lou, "there's a lot of hard words in the lesson this week so I'll have to charge you ten cents."

New Stuff Enough!

Twice in a day vans stopped to make deliveries at a neighboring house. Apparently, it was new furnitrue. One of the neighbors, peeping through the curtains with growing curiosity, couldn't wait any longer to know what it was all about. She just had to know! The telephone gave her the answer:

"Say what have you got new at your house?"

"Plenty!" was the reply. "A chair, a typewriter stand and the measles!"

Judge J. B. Robinson, of Marysville Kas., was called out of bed four times during May to perform marriages.

Mr. and Mrs. Reichert came to Norwich to convey their daughter, Mrs. Catherine Reichert, back to their home in Worcester, from the W. W. Backus hospital, where she has been a patient for more than two weeks, following an attempt on her life by shooting, by her divorced husband, August A. Polachi, of Worcester, who then committed suicide. The former Mrs. Polachi, who resumed her maiden name, Reichert, when divorced, is not yet able to bear her weight on her foot which she severely injured when she jumped 18½ feet from a roof at the rear of the house when confronted by Polachi, who had threatened her life on several occasions. Mrs. Polachi gets around with the aid of a cane and by pushing a chair in front of her. She is to recuperate at her former home in Worcester for a few weeks, after which it is expected she will return to Norwich.

The Reichert family and the Muckensturm family have been acquainted for a number of years, and due to this fact, the daughter Catherine sought her Norwich friends, when she separated from her husband, some time ago.

BACKED INTO HYDRANT ON PUTNAM STREET

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Sept. 14.— Charles Van Brunt Cushman, of "East Lands," Pomfret, a wealthy and widely known sportsman, was under arrest in this city tonight on a charge of operating under the influence of liquor. His arrest took place shortly before midnight after he had backed his machine into a hydrant on Providence street near the state trade school. Special Officer Ernest L. Chandler, performing special duty on School street, arrested Cushman when he attempted to drive his car away from the scene of the accident. Cushman was released tonight on bonds of $250 for his appearance in city court Wednesday morning. Bonds were furnished by Leonard Swain of Pomfret.

OBITUARY.

Nicholas Jackson.

Following several months of failing health, Nicholas Jackson, 69, formerly of Broad street, died at 7 o'clock Sunday evening in Preston. He was born in Buckingham county, Virginia, the son of James and Charlotte Jackson, and since 1899 has resided in Norwich, where he was employed for several years with the People's Coal company.

Surviving Mr. Jackson are two brothers, Andrew and James Jackson, of Norwich, two nieces, Misses Blanche and Lucille Jackson, of Norwich, two nephews, Walter Jackson of Norwich, and Alfred Jackson of New York, and four cousins, Mrs. Susie Weaver of Norwich, Mrs. Martha Brooks of New London, Mrs. Mary Norman of Richmond, Va., and Mrs. Laura Carter, of Philadelphia. His wife, Martha, died in Norwich, in 1925.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph P. Connor, Jr., (Ruth Langdon Cotter), who have been guests at the Park Central hotel, New York, since their marriage Tuesday in Hartford, are sailing this (Monday) evening at 6 o'clock on the Munson liner Pan America for Bermuda.

Mrs. A. Thatcher Otis, now of Hartford, a recent guest at the home of the Misses Hyde, on Washington street, has been for several days at the Hotel Mohican and was accompanied by her sister, Mrs. Willis Gowdy, also of Hartford. During Sunday Mrs. Otis' son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. O. F. Houck motored down from Hartford to take them home.

A birthday party for ten was given Saturday at New London by Mrs. Henry Bill Selden, of Chapel street for her daughter Jane, who was eight years old. The children entertained were Louise Dagilan, Nancy Meyer, Barbara Lambdin, Patricia O'Neill, Ruth and Jane McCloskey, Jane Creighton, Pearl Howard and Nancy Miner.

CONVENTION RENOMINATES FREEMAN FOR CONGRESS FROM THIS DISTRICT

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Sept. 14 — The honor of a ninth renomination to succeed himself as congressman from the Second Connecticut district was accorded Richard P. Freeman of New London in a rising vote at the republican second district convention held in the town hall here Saturday noon. Congressman Freeman, who is completing his eighth term in the house of representatives was escorted to the platform following his nomnation. He closed a fitting speech of acceptance with an invitation to the delegates to be his guests at a dinner in the G. A. R. rooms of the town building.

The nomination of the incumbent was made by Judge S. Victor Prince of New London. Chairman Louis A. Woisard of Killingly, presiding at the convention, called for further nominations and there being none District Chairman Charles A. Gates of Windham moved for a rising vote. This vote was supplemented by an outburst of applause as the congressman was escorted into the hall by a committee composed of Judge Prince of New London, Daniel R. Kane of Saybrook and Charles A. Thompson of Ellington.

Lieut.-Gov. Rogers Present

While this committee had retired Lieutenant-Governor Ernest E. Rogers of New London, who is a candidate for governor, was announced as being the guest of the convention by Sheriff Charles A. Gates and he was escorted to a platform seat. Following the acceptance speech by the nominee, the lieutenant-governor arose to endorse the candidacy of his former schoolmate, Richard P. Freeman, urging a strong party unison in the fall elections.

Freeman Accepts Nomination

Congressman Freeman accepted his nomination with the following address:

"Mr. Chairman, delegates to the congressional convention of the second district:—

"I thank you for your cordial greeting and the warmth of this reception. I feel myself very fortunate in the wealth of good friends, who have gathered here today in this convention. It is said that 'only he who knows how to be a friend, deserves to have them.' I feel that in you I have them, and I trust that my actions have merited this friendship. It is not only with pleasure that I receive and accept from you this nomination to be again your representative in congress, but also with a deep appreciation, because it shows your continued confidence in me. I want you to know how I interpret your action of today. Some of us right here in this hall have known hardships and conditions unquestionably far from satisfactory during the past year. It doesn't matter whether they were of our own making or through the unhappy circumstances that have prevailed almost everywhere. It has been up to us to 'carry on' courageously and hopefully. We have been able to do so because of our faith and our confidence, in the ability, the resourcefulness, and the devotion to duty of our president, Herbert Hoover. There has been during this year almost constant need of a display of remarkable talents of both mind and heart, and no one can say that President Hoover has ever been found wanting. We congratulate ourselves on our most fortunate leadership, realizing all the while that any less competent executive would have made a critical situation incomparably worse. I feel sure that you people of Connecticut, and many others like you, are wise enough, and generous enough to want your representatives to stand by him, and see him given loyal support. Acting on this belief I shall continue to help to the utmost of my ability, and not to hinder or retard our able president in fulfilling his duty to the nation, and by doing so I shall feel assured that I am carrying out your firm wishes.

"The republican party next Tuesday, in state convention assembled, will name an exceptionally fine man, and one exceptionally well qualified as well, to serve as governor of this state, in my friend and fellow townsman, Lieutenant-Governor Ernest E. Rogers. Few candidates for the governorship of Connecticut have ever had the advantage that the experience of his years of service for the state—in various offices—have given to him. You know his many fine qualities and qualifications, just as well as I do, and I know you will be proud to give him this high honor next November.

"In closing, let me, on behalf of the congressional committee of this district, invite you all to a luncheon provided by our friends of the Woman's Relief Corps in the dining hall down stairs."

Following the address during which Congressman Freeman was frequently applauded, the following committee on resolutions was chosen: William P. Johnson of Pomfret, Everett C. Payson of Lebanon and Leroy V. Walker of Willington who prepared the following resolution read by the clerk:—

"Resolved, that we, the republican delegates of the second congressional district of Connecticut, in convention assembled, this 13th day of September, 1930, hereby reaffirm our faith in the principles of the republican party.

"That we heartily commend to the electorate of this district, irrrespective of party, the nominee of this convention for representative in congress of and for the second congressional district, Honorable Richard P. Freeman of New London which is in recognition of his ability and record of sixteen years in congress."

The convention was called to order by Sheriff Charles A. Gates of this city, chairman of the district committee. Attorney Louis A. Woisard of Danielson was chosen chairman and Bertram Tourville of Saybrook, clerk.

Following the reading of the call, the committee on credentials, Attorney John H. Buckley of Union, Mayor Walter R. King of this city and Mrs. Mabel Prentiss of New London, stated that the roll as prepared by the chairman was correct and their report was accepted. The roll call showed 160 out of the 199 delegates present, including several proxies.

The final business of the convention was the selection of a district committee for the ensuing two years, consisting of Charles A. Gates of Windham, John M. Mallon of New London, Arthur M. Brown of Griswold, Marcus A. Covell of Thompson, Fred O. Vinton of Mansfield, R. W. Ellis of Stafford, Wilson F. Reynolds of Cromwell, Bertha W. Goodrich of Portland, George M. Smith of East Haddam, W. F. Clark of Old Lyme and Isabel W. Chappell of Windham.

The convention adjourned after being in session 22 minutes and those in attendance were guests of Congressman Freeman at a dinner prepared and served by members of Francis S. Long Woman's Relief Corps No. 28 in the G. A. R. rooms.

DIED WHILE SITTING ON RUNNING BOARD

James B. Towne, 42, of Canterbury, a peddler of tea products, died suddenly early Saturday evening while sitting on the running board of his automobile near South Canterbury railroad station. He suffered a heart attack.

After supper at home, where he resided with his daughter, Mrs. Henry Larkham, his mother, Mrs. William Towne, and his four year old son, he had gone to a neighbor's and then to the station and for a walk along the Quinebaug river. His friend missed him and returning to the automobile found Towne sitting on the running board. Efforts to arouse him were fruitless and it was found he was dead. The body was taken in charge by Undertaker Tillinghast of Central Village.

SHORT CIRCUIT STARTS FIRE IN AUTOMOBILE

An Essex coupe owned by James Murtha of the Norwich state hospital was slightly damaged by fire early Sunday evening due to a short circuit in its wiring system. Engine No. 5 and Deputy Chief Dennis Brennan responded to a telephone call at 7.05 o'clock for help, but were not required to use any chemical or water. The wires leading to the storage battery were disconnected. The automobile took fire in front of No. 143 West Main street.

AUTO HIT SIGNALMAN ON PUTNAM STREET

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Sept. 14.—Henry Hurdman, 166 School street, this city, is a patient at the Day Kimball hospital suffering from injuries sustained when struck by an automobile operated by Walter Krzemien, 39 Powhasset street, this city. The accident occurred at 8 o'clock at the junction of Barber and School streets where Hurdman was on duty as a signalman. Hurdman would not comment on the cause of the accident after he had collected his senses at the hospital, but the driver of the car and Edward Noga and Stella Krzemien, passengers in the car, told Sergeant A. J. Sponcey of the local police that they did not see the flagman until after they had run him down. They said that he waved no signal and made no visible gesture to indicate that the street was closed. They stated that their speed at the time was about 20 miles an hour.

No arrests as yet have been made but the investigation of the accident will be resumed tomorrow. There were no eyewitnesses to the affair.

PACHAUG FAIR TRACK HAD LIVELY CONTESTS

(Special to The Bulletin)

JEWETT CITY, Sept. 14—The last day of Pachaug fair was very largely attended. The horse racing was the most exciting feature of the sports on any day. Saturday there were more horses on the track than at any other time. The results were as follows:

Class saddle horses, William Lathrop, judge, 1st prize, Colonel Wing Riding academy, ridden by Eliza Button; Happy Go Lucky, 2nd, Chapman's stables.

Ladies' race won by Buckey, 40 sec., ridden by Lucy Culver against Billy, ridden by Miss Dayton.

All winners first race, judges, J. T. Kelly and R. E. Nelson, 1st race 1-8 of mile won by Happy Go Lucky, 42 sec.; 2nd, Molly; 3rd, Chateau; 4th Colonel.

Second race, all winners, won by Happy Go Lucky, 37 sec.; 2nd, Chateau; 3rd, Colonel; 4th Molly.

Match race won by Blazer in 39 seconds, Wing Riding academy ridden by Jack Donohue against Captain ridden by Johnny James.

One exciting feature not scheduled was the race between Billy Dearnley and Jack Donohue, who raced around the track in record time, Billy winning out. Mason Gray's big team of grays in the over 2,800 class, pulled all the available rocks with eight men piled on top, with perfect ease. Charles Pendleton had two teams under 2,800 pulling against each other. Jack Potts, Jr., supervised a tug of war in which Pachaug won. The members of the grange tug of war team were Hermon Frink, Charles Campbell, LeRoy Holmes, John Medick and Harold Geer. Jack Potts' men were Ethphiage Chenette, Frank Clark, John MacNeely, Horace Dawley and Del La Porte. The grangers won by one-sixteenth of an inch.

In a running race of one mile it was a close race, Sullivan of Norwich coming in a little ahead of Gray of Jewett City, Mahoney of Norwich arriving third. The time was five minutes and thirty-five seconds.

Thursday night there were boxing exhibitions between Steve Wozniak and Minski, and Joe Slonski and Pete Minta. Friday night between Steve Wozniak and Stanley Manicki, and Bennie Slonski and Ernest Govan (Taftville), and Jimmie Quinn (Norwich), and Tennant of Greeneville, all arranged by Jack Potts, Jr.

Fair Notes

Mrs. Ida Benjamin of Jewett City received the fishpole set given away by Ashland Lake sites.

The paid admissions were 3,500 in number this year, against 4,000 last year.

Supt. Tanner had the grounds in fine condition on the opening day of the fair. Concessionists from Indiana said they were in the best condition of any of the fairs they had visited en route.

The last night was great sport for the large number of dancers, who enjoyed the dancing in the flower house which was cleared for the dancing. The music was furnished by Charles Ruszenas' radios and victrolas. Arthur Chester Brown of Gardner's lake entertained with sleight of hand tricks each day. Ashland Boys Band played every afternoon under the direction of their leader, Fred Bourque. They played remarkably well, especially the cornetists. The entertainment was in charge of A. W. Parks, the horse races in charge of Charles Latham, and the horse pulling of Willis Morgan.

SCOUT LEADERS ENJOY OUTING AT BEACH POND

Eighteen Norwich scout leaders spent Saturday night and part of Sunday morning at the site of Camp Hippecan at Beach pond, Voluntown. The leaders slept in pup tents, prepared their own meals, and engaged in other camping activities. Following a plunge into the waters of the pond and a swim the men cooked their suppers. Many different dishes were prepared, including corn roasted on the cob, bread made in an oven, chicken roasted on a spit, etc.

Following the supper a round table was held around the campfire and the season's activities discussed. The leaders went on record as favoring the acquisition of an overnight camping place should funds be obtainable for that purpose and adopted the major part of the program proposed for the year. Through the courtesy of the Connecticut Light & Power company blueprint programs were distributed showing the proposed activities of all committees, including that of the executive board, the round table and the council as a whole.

It was recommended that a modified standard achievement grading be arranged for each month and that some form of recognition be given each month to those troops reaching the standard. An advanced training course was adopted to start in October. Closer cooperation between the other towns in the council were urged and a committee was appointed to arrange if possible for sessions of the advanced training course to be held in Stafford Springs, Putnam and Willimantic—a kind of round robin lecture course.

The scout leaders favored a jamboree to be held in the spring and left its discussion for another date. Charles Gilbert was appointed chairman of a committee to cooperate with the American Legion in observing Armistice day. Many of the leaders were in favor of a field day to be held this fall at Fort Shantok, followed by a campfire.

The men were unanimously in favor of sending Robert W. Perkins a letter expressing regret over his recent accident with the hope for immediate recovery. Mr. Perkins has been especially generous to the Boy Scouts and has lately become interested in assisting the scouts to acquire a camp of their own.

Songs, stories, and fun were interspersed with the serious business of the evening and the scout leaders declared that the hike was the most successful ever held. The rain served to add a touch of real camping atmosphere; when it came everyone was under cover in beds made of pine needles under waterproof pup tents.

Following the morning plunge in the lake and breakfast, the leaders left for Norwich. Mr. Briggs, owner of the land on which the men camped, was warmly thanked for his interest in the Boy Scouts and it was recommended that a letter be sent attesting that appreciation.

Norwich Produce Market

Furnished by Bureau of Markets Conn. Dept. of Agriculture

The potato market was showing firmer developments. The publication of the crop estimate for September first by the United States department of agriculture wherein the total crop for the country as a whole was estimated to be 339 million bushels, caused a suddenly firmer selling attitude on the part of growers. Local trading was not reacting as sharply as outside markets. New Jersey is practically through shipping while Long Island is sending most of its supply to New York where high prices were being paid. Maine has started shipping heavily, but shippers there at last reports were holding for as much as $1.20 per bushel for Irish Cobblers delivered to this state in carloads.

The general line of vegetables with the exception of tomatoes were in moderate supply in the local market, and in fair demand. Offerings of tomatoes were more liberal and very draggy. Peaches of excellent quality are flooding the market and selling at rock bottom prices.

Live fowl were in slightly better demand. The coming of the Hebrew New Year celebration on September 22-24, when live fowl will be wanted will doubtless increase the activity in this line. The egg market was firm.

If your little one is irritable and restless—there's a reason: Often it's worms. They are much more common than most mothers think.

Look also for the following symptoms: picking the nose, grinding the teeth, crying in sleep, offensive breath, loss of appetite or weight, nausea or general restlessness. Any one of these signs may be your warning that worms are present.

Wise mothers take no chances with these dangerous and disgusting childhood pests. Even if worms are only suspected they give the child

KACEYS-CITIZENS GAME ENDS IN RIOT WITH SCORE 0 TO 0 IN 10TH

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 14—Norwich-New London rivalry, which has smoldered for many years and breaks out afresh every so often, had a blowoff here this afternoon.

The Polish Citizens-New London Kacey's inter-city series game at Mercer field, the fourth of the set, was broken up in the last half of the tenth inning, one man out and a runner on first, by a free-for-all riot that made further thought of play impossible. There had been no score up to that time.

On Saturday in Norwich, in the third game of the series, the Kaceys triumphed, 2 to 0, behind some great pitching by Tillie Daniels.

Umpire Forfeits to N. London

The final score appears a little hazy. Umpire Cranker, after he had announced the game "no contest," made it known that he had forfeited the game to New London by the customary 9 to 0 score. He based his action on the grounds that Norwich refused to continue to play.

In this course, however, it appears that he has little grounds for any such decision and Norwich, accordingly, while willing to let the game go as a no-contest no-score affair, will, if any forfeits are handed out, claim one for themselves and they feel they have sufficient grounds on which to stand for such a move.

The untimely ending to a beautiful pitching duel between Johnny Greene and Joe McInniss came so suddenly as to leave the some 3,500 fans stunned for an instant before they broke into a wild, milling crowd that could not be controlled, swarming over the field and starting half a hundred individual fights that continued for fully an hour and a half. Even the summoning of a squad of local and state police was to no avail.

How the Trouble Began

The trouble all came about when with John McInniss, who was the inning's first batter, on first as a result of a single to center, Coyle slashed one past Pete Finn at third that went into left field. McInniss rounded second and started for third but when Gaudette, in left, played the ball fast McInniss immediately retraced his steps. Gaudette whipped the ball to Leo Jarvis, the second baseman, and McInniss slid in. It was a close play and Umpire Tellier called the runner out.

This was a signal for half of the Kacey team to bound out of their dugout and start for Tellier. Four of them reached him where he was standing near second, almost at once, and they all began to pummel him. This also was a signal for the crowd, or a goodly part of it, to pour out of the stands and make for the fuss, where Tellier was in the midst of the swinging.

There was no police protection and the mob was soon out of control, Tellier receiving a general mauling all the time. The fans did not confine their attention to Tellier, however, but decided to have it out between themselves and they were at it.

Police Arrive on Riot Call

Tellier was finally gotten out of danger but the other brawls continued. Somebody in the meantime had put in a riot call and about ten minutes later local and state officers arrived. They could not cope with the situation and it was decided to avert further trouble by calling the game.

Meanwhile, the Cits had taken their position in the field, ready to resume play, but as Umpire Cranker made no move to clear the field the game could not go on.

Here is where the Cits have a big point in their favor, as the following rule clearly states:

Rule 77—Every club shall furnish sufficient police force to preserve order upon its own grounds, and in the event of a crowd entering the field during the progress of a game, and interfering with the play in any manner, the visiting club may refuse to play until the field be cleared. If the field be not cleared within 15 minutes thereafter, the visiting club may claim and shall be entitled to the game by a score of 9 runs to 0 (no matter what number of innings has been played).

This is as clear as day. The Kaceys, the home team, could not clear the field within 15 minutes, or even 30 minutes or longer, and there was nothing else Mr. Cranker could do but hand it to Norwich. This would give the Cits the series, as they had already taken two out of the first three games. But they don't wish to take games this way, it was stated by them tonight. Where he conceived the right to present the Kaceys with the contest is not quite clear. The Cits had shown their willingness to play while the Kaceys, who started the trouble, also had not done their part in clearing the field and making it fit to continue play.

Cits Were Ordered Off the Field

Another point in the Citizens' favor was brought out late Sunday night when it became known that Capt. Leo Jarvis was notified by the police to take his team off the field before any further trouble started. This fact was also admitted by the New London management, so it would have been hard for them to have continued under this condition.

It was extremely doubtful Sunday night whether the series would be continued or not. The managements of the two teams will hold a confab at the K. of C. home here Monday night and try to thrash out the trouble.

SATURDAY'S GAME

Daniels was a bit too good for the Cits on Saturday, although Boots Greene, the young Citizen hurler, also pitched a grand little game. Daniels allowed only three hits. Boots should have been beaten by 1-0, a mighty home run by Bill Barry over the center field fence, for the other run came on a bad break in the seventh inning, when, with Joe McInnis on first, Whiton's single bounded over Johnny Greene's head and allowed the runner to score.

As in all the other tilts, it was a nip and tuck affair, with no scores for six innings and then the Kaceys breaking through for runs in the seventh and eighth.

The Cits lost plenty of chances to score. Their best, perhaps came in the eighth, when, two runs behind, Johnny Greene led off with a two-bagger against the fire escapes and Gaudette walked. With Boots Greene all set to lay it down and place two men in scoring position, Johnny was caught napping off second. This seemed to kill their hopes for Boots forced Gaudette and Cimikoski flied out. In the ninth Lamory was hit but West fanned and after Lloyd Jarvis was safe on a fielder's choice to second with Lamory beating the play to second, Lamory stole third as a play was made to catch Jarvis off first. Finn, however, fanned for the final out. This gave Tilly three strikeouts in this inning as he had fanned Leo Jarvis to start things off.

The teams played errorless ball before the crowd of over 3,000.

SUNDAY'S GAME

The game itself on Sunday was the best of the entire series. Both pitchers had to be at their best all the way and they were. Each team lost opportunities to score, especially the Cits.

The Kaceys could not put a man to third on Greene, having five as far as second.

The Cits lost their golden opportunity in the ninth but it took a beautiful piece of outfield work by Bill Smith to turn the trick. With two away and Lamory on first by virtue of a hit, his first of the series, by the way, Finn connected solidly and sent a long drive to deep left field. It went over Smith's head and hit the fence in the extreme corner, bounding back down the banking. Lamory started with the crack of the bat and was legging it around the bases with all signals open, while Smith retrieved the ball. Smith to John McInnis, who whipped it to Coyle and Lamory was just nipped at the plate. It was a beautiful play all around and sent the fans into an uproar.

Four double plays, two on each side, helped the pitchers considerably.

The Cits started off the first inning auspiciously when Leo Jarvis singled to left but Gaudette fired into a double play. In the second Tony West led off with a single through the box but was forced at second and the next two batters went out easy. In the third Johnny Greene dropped a double back of third and after Sydlo had bunted him to third, Leo Jarvis lined to Tuneski and Johnny was doubled off the bag.

In the fourth Gaudette led off with a bingle. Lloyd Jarvis laid it down and Tony West was purposely passed but the next two stickers could not supply the punch. In fact, in all but the sixth and tenth the Cits had men on bases but were stemmed by McInnis, who was making his third start of the series. He lost the first two games by counts of 2 to 1 and 3 to 2.

The Kaceys were retired in order in four innings and only in the fourth and seventh did they seriously threaten. In the fourth Barry, leading off, walked and was forced by Tuneski. Tuneski was safe at second on his attempted steal when Cimikoski dropped Lamory's good throw, only to have John McInnis line to Leo Jarvis and Tuneski be doubled off the bag. In the seventh John McInniss doubled to right with two away but Coyle hit to Finn, who chased McInniss back to second and tagged him out.

So the series still stands two wins for Norwich, one for New London and one whatever-you-may-choose-to-call-it.

NOTES OF THE GAMES

Well, what happened anyway?

It was a typical Norwich-New London sociable gettogether.

Sunday's string of goose-eggs gave Johnny Greene a total of 18 innings and only one earned run scored against him. In beating the Kaceys last Sunday 3 to 2, he allowed only one run of the earned variety.

Maybe things will seem different to yesterday's contestants in the morning after the night's sleep and they may take things in a different light.

Whether you've noticed it or not, there were three sets of brothers and a father-and-son act in this series. The McInnisses, Jarvises and Greenes are the brothers and the Hams the father-son.

The Cits claimed that, just prior to Umpire Cranker's announcing his forfeit of the game to the Kaceys, that their captain had agreed with the Kacey leader to call it no-contest and play it over next Sunday.

Walt Sydlo made his first appearance in the series for the Cits and looked pretty good.

Tony West hit one over the right field fence in practice but could not get the range during the game. The Kaceys played cautiously for him every time.

Had 11-Man Team

The I. Y. M. C. Jrs., that defeated the L. H. A. C., used in the ninth inning eleven men, in their game Sunday.

The two extras were the two umpires. The score stood 11 to 7 in the last half of the ninth when the I. Y. M. C. scored five runs, four of which were by walks. George Geoppfert pitching for the Athletics previous to this inning had allowed two hits, struck out twelve, and walked none. The umpire on balls, called four walks on perfect balls which cut the plate perfectly. The Athletics desire to play this team again with the same men with professional umpires, losing club to pay for the umpires. The Athletics will play for fun, money or marbles. Game can be arranged for next Sunday by calling 332-J or through The Bulletin.

Didja ever seen such a game?

Everybody had more fun than a three ring circus. That is—those that weren't performers.

Everybody got their money's worth, even those that paid a half a dollar instead of 35 cents as advertised. The extra fifteen cents was probably for the boxing bouts that followed the main attraction.

There was only one thing the matter They should have put those bouts on separately instead of trying to run them all at once It's awfully difficult to try to watch fifty bouts at once and keep track of who's winning.

As you no doubt have heard the score of the ball game was nothing to nothing but the results of the boxing matches have not yet been tabulated. Perhaps a New London paper might take a straw ballot on them.

Just when you got interested in one fight another would break out that was even better than the other. A lotta good ring talent went to waste down there yesterday. A good boxing manager could have grabbed off a lotta good prospects if he'd been on the job.

Those who like to see the umpire get socked sure had their desire satisfied. Billy Barry oughta know better than to go out of his class like that. If he wants a bout with Tellier he oughta make Tellier make his weight. Of course, Barry had two or three other players with him so that the combined weight of New London against Norwich was about even. Only they ought to have given Tellier two or three more pairs of hands.

Poor Old Joe Cranker, the grand old man of New London baseball, pulled a boner when he forfeited the game to New London but it might have been a diplomatic forfeiture on his part. He ought to know the New London crowd, if anyone does.

Joe surely erred on that one. The fans can excuse a missed strike now and then, making allowances for old age, but he should know his rule book. He oughta dig out the old rule book and study rule 77, it's been in there for over 20 years.

The situation in a nut shell. The New London ball players jump on umpire; the New London fans poke Norwich fans in the eye; no police protection is furnished at the grounds; police (when they do arrive) order Norwich team not to go on field; and then Old Joe forfeits the game to New London. There ain't no justice.

From all reports there's more black-eyes and sore jaws than there were dollars taken in at the game. One Norwich doctor took two to the jaw but swung a hard left in return and the New London opponent took the count. Hurrah for the doctor.

Butchers in New London and Norwich should have a big sale on beefsteak today.

MOORE BESTS CROWDER IN PITCHING DUEL

CHICAGO, Sept. 14— (AP) —Jim Moore, rookie hurler from Little Rock, bested Alvin Crowder, the Senators ace, in a 10 inning pitchers' duel here today, Chicago winning 2-1. Moore blanked the Senators after the second inning when a walk, a scratch hit and two sacrifices scored their only run. From the fourth to the tenth he pitched perfect ball, not allowing a man to reach first. Hits by Barnes and Appling followed by Tate's sacrifice fly tied the count for the Hose in the second and after that Crowder matched Moore until the tenth. Then with two out, Watwood tripled and Reynolds singled to win the contest.

YALE'S PROSPECTS FOR STRONG TEAM THIS SEASON CONSIDERED VERY GOOD

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 14—(AP)—Around Yale they say Old Eli will have as good a football team this year as last, which is quite a football team—and it may be better.

There are problems for Mal Stevens, the young head coach, as there always are, no matter what the material, but there are few on the campus of the old New England institution who cannot see a bright season ahead. The line will need some working with but the backfield is just a matter of selection and reserves are strong for all but a couple of spots in the forward wall.

Albie Booth, whose dazzling play electrified thousands in the Brown, Army and Dartmouth games last fall, is back as a junior, bigger and better than ever and in himself considerable of a start toward a respectable college football team. With the Mighty Mite again in the quarterback post there are four ball carriers from the 1929 ranks to help.

Dunn is back at fullback along with Snead, Austin and McLennan for the halves.

It seems that Booth again will miss most of the first periods of the major games this fall, waiting for the psychological moment to trot out and unloose his shiftiness on the foe. One of several sophomores from the crack 1929 freshman squad may play the Booth part a considerable amount of the time. No departure from the Yale style of straight football is expected.

Of the 16 letter men back, six of whom started the Harvard game, there is the nucleus for another sturdy Yale line. Graduation took two centers, a tackle, a guard and an end. Fred Loeser, crack center in 1928, will be back after a bad year due to injuries, and Hare, Stewart and Esselstyn will fill the guards. Capt. Fay Vincent and a sophomore find, John Wilbur, look to be the best tackles, with the veterans, Barres and Walker, on the ends. There is plenty of material in a squad of 150 men.

Two of the teams that spilled the Elis last fall are back on the schedule for another try. Maryland comes back to the Bowl Oct. 4 hoping to better the 13-13 tie of 1929, and Georgia will be here a week later in an effort to repeat the 15-0 licking of last October.

The remainder of the schedule: Sept. 27, Maine; Oct. 18, Brown; Oct. 25, Army; Nov. 1, Dartmouth; Nov. 8, Alfred; Nov 15, Princeton at Princeton; Nov. 22, Harvard.

ROBINS DOWN REDS TO TAKE LEAGUE LEAD

BROOKLYN, Sept. 14—(AP)—The Brooklyn Robins won their tenth straight victory and the Cincinnati Reds suffered their tenth straight defeat here this afternoon when three of Dan Howley's pitchers bowed to the weight of Brooklyn bats. The final score was 8 to 3. The Reds got all of their runs in the first inning, when they hammered Hollis Thurston out of the box, but Jim Elliott pitched shut-out ball for the last eight and two-third innings.

Although the Robins continued their spurt, they were hard hit by the loss of a second fielder in two days. Johnny Frederick, hurt in Saturday's game, may be out for the balance of the season with an injury that is diagnosed as a split muscle in his right thigh. Eddie Moore, the versatile utility man of the Robins, who had to leave second base last week because of a charley horse, played a brilliant game in Frederick's place today until his leg went bad again. Rube Bressler, the regular Brooklyn left fielder, is laid up with a broken finger.

Moore opened the Brooklyn attack in the first inning by beating out a perfect bunt, starting the Robin rally of two runs. In the third, by brilliant base running, Moore stretched an ordinary single into a two base hit, the opening wedge for a four run rally of the Robins. He had to leave the game shortly afterward.

The Robins bunched their ten hits off Rixey, Kolp and May for almost the maximum effectiveness. The Reds went down fighting, however, making five double plays in the course of the afternoon.

ATHLETICS MAKE CLEAN SWEEP OF INDIAN SERIES

CLEVELAND, Sept. 14—(AP)—The league leading Athletics blanked the Cleveland Indians in their two game series when they won the second game today, 7 to 1.

The Indians failed to score until the eighth, when Averill made the run after he, Morgan and Hodapp had singled.

Earnshaw, who started the game yesterday for Philadelphia, pitched the whole route today while Wesley Ferrell, whom the Indians had intended to place against Lefty Grove, the Philadelphia ace, weakened in the seventh and was replaced in the eighth by Belve Bean. This was the third lost by Ferrell in a row after he had won 13 straight victories.

The game started off with a homer in the first by Dykes.

Simmons also hit a homer in the seventh, scoring Cochrane ahead of him.

The crowd was estimated at 22,000.

C. G. WHITNEY WILL BE ACADEMY BASEBALL COACH

Courtland G. Whitney, present football coach at the Academy, will also coach baseball at the school starting with the next spring, it became known over the week end. Whitney, who was an all-around athlete in his student days at N. F. A., succeeds Earle E. Brigham, who has resigned to accept a position as athletic director of Worcester high schools.

Whitney played third base on the baseball team and quarterback in football. He has also played with several local semi-pro nines. He is a graduate of Middlebury college, where he also starred on the diamond and gridiron.

PIRATES PRACTICALLY DROP GIANTS FROM PENNANT RACE

NEW YORK, Sept. 14—(AP)— The Pittsburgh Pirates reduced the Giants chances of taking the National league pennant to almost nothing today by winning both games of a double header, 8 to 6, and 7 to 3. The first game went ten innings but the second was called at the end of the seventh because of darkness.

The double defeat put the Giants 5 1-2 games behind the Brooklyn Robins, today's league leaders, with only 12 games to go.

After scoring six runs in the fourth inning of the opener, the Pirates allowed the Giants to tie the score as their infield played badly, but Glenn Spencer relieved Ray Kremer and pitched shut-out ball for the last two innings to get credit for the victory. He also drove in the winning run. Bool's home run with two on base topped the big Pittsburgh rally.

Charley Wood held the Giants to four hits in the second game but retired after Bill Terry's homer in the sixth due to a sore arm. French finished.

RUFFING STARS AS YANKS WIN EASILY OVER TIGERS

DETROIT, Sept. 14—(AP)— Charlie Ruffing pitched and batted the Yankees to a 10 to 3 victory over the Detroit Tigers in the fourth game of their five-game series here. Detroit had won the first three games.

Ruffing drove in four runs with a triple and two doubles and also scored twice. He kept seven Detroit hits scattered while New York collected 15 safeties off Whitehill, Hogsett, Sullivan and Cantrell. Byrd hit a home run with none on base in the seventh inning.

NEW TENNIS CHAMPION NOT TO GO IN DAVIS CUP PLAY

NEW YORK, Sept. 14—(AP)—John Hope Doeg of Santa Monica, Calif., the youngest American singles tennis king since "Little Bill" Johnston won in 1915, looked forward to many things today as he spent the first 24 hours of his reign at the seaside home of his fiancee, Miss Dorothea Scudder, at Rumson, N. J., but Davis cup tennis was not one of them.

Marriage and an early entry into business in New York were foremost in the plans of the bronzed young giant who succeeded Big Bill Tilden as American champion yesterday.

Before the great final when he topped off his victories over Tilden and Frank Hunter with a sensational triumph over young Frank Shields of New York, Doeg decided that, win or lose, his competitive tennis in the future would be limited to tournaments in the metropolitan area, where his home and business will be located. He indicated today that he did not expect to withdraw from this decision.

By one of the ironic strokes of fate, the strapping 21 year old southpaw was taken all the way to France this summer with the Davis cup squad but was never sent into action when America made its third unsuccessful bid for international supremacy. Tilden, whom he defeated at Forest Hills Friday, and George Lott, who was trimmed in the second round by the old ex-champion, Richard N. Williams, were used in singles. In doubles the Wilmer Allison-John Van Ryn combination, which was trimmed in the final of the national tournament at Brookline, Mass., two weeks ago by Lott and Doeg, was selected instead.

The United States' forces had a champion in their midst and did not know it. But up to that time Doeg's play had been only fairly impressive.

BALTIC SACS TAKE MEASURE OF McGRAW'S ALL STARS

Sunday, at Sayles field, Baltic, the Baltic Sacs were too fast for McGraw's All Stars. Coady, on the mound for Baltic Sacs, held the All Stars to 3 hits, while his teammates pounded the ball all over the lot for 16 hits. The only chance the All Stars had to score was in the 9th when Fontaine, pinch hitting for McGraw, was given his base on balls and stole second and third, but was stranded when the next batter flied out to left field ending the game. The Sacs are still looking for a game next Sunday and would like to play a home-and-home series with Dayville or Wauregan, first game on their ground and the Sunday following in Baltic. The score:

WILLIMANTIC GOLFERS GET REVENGE ON NORWICH TEAM

Smarting under a 53 to 18 defeat administered to them last week the Willimantic golfers took sweet revenge on the Norwich mashie wielders Saturday afternoon at Willimantic Country club and trimmed them 46 to 35. A. B. Nascin, of Willimantic had low net with a card of 74 (14)—60. Prizes were given for other net scores and gross scores. James P. Mustard was the high scorer for the Thread City team, getting nine points from his three Norwich opponents.

After the match a very enjoyable dinner was served and it was voted that the Willimantic boys were indeed genial hosts.

GAGER WINS WEEK END TOURNEY AT GOLF CLUB

C. A. Gager won the selected-best-12-holes handicap at the Norwich Golf club over the week end with a net score of 36. M. E. Standish was second with a net score of 39 and J. B. Dick took third with a net score of 40. The entry list was small owing to the team match at Willimantic on Saturday and the threatening weather of Sunday.

DANIELSON TRIMS GOODYEAR IN FIRST SOCCER GAME

The Danielson Soccer football team defeated Goodyear at Goodyear Sunday afternoon by a 3 to 2 score. Danielson scored two goals in the first half. Martinelli scored the first goal on a free kick when Corria fouled the ball with his hand. The Danielson kickers showed real class and fast footwork. The second half found the Danielson players just playing with the ball, passing it to and fro as they will. Joe Vitalo held his position as goal tender down fine, stopping a lot of hard shots Goodyear threatened in the second half after Danielson had eased down a little and scored two goals, but the Danielson players tightened up and were never in bad thereafter. Manager Deforest plans to play several more games before the Eastern Connecticut league opens, of which Danielson is a member. Danielson plays its opening league game with New London at Danielson Oct. 5. Sunday at the Paco grounds, Danielson, Goodyear will come to Danielson for a return game. The lineups:

ASHLAND TEAM NOSES OUT WORCESTER TOWN TALKS

(Special to The Bulletin)

JEWETT CITY, Sept. 14—The Ashland team nosed out the Worcester Town Talks here today, 4 to 3, with a two run ninth inning finish. D. Young led off the ninth with a long two-bagger to center. Burda laid down an intended sacrifice but the catcher threw wild to third and the run came in to tie the score. The next two men walked, filling the bases. Juber then hit to third who made a fine play to get a man at the plate but the catcher made a wild throw to first letting in the winning run.

Swett, Worcester first sacker had four hits in four times up. Jab Burns, Norwich catcher, was behind the bat for Ashland and played a fine game Next Sunday the big series with the H. N. S. will start.

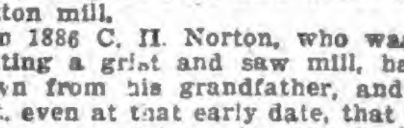
TAFTVILLE TO GIVE DUGAS A WELCOME-HOME PARTY

Taftville is to welcome home a native son, Lefty Dugas, in royal fashion on Saturday, October 4, if present plans, now fairly well along, go through as expected.

Dugas, who has more than made good in his first year of professional baseball in which he was one of the main guns of the Wichita team of the Western league as it copped the pennant and also leading hitter of the league for most of the season, will be the guest of honor at a field day at the Providence street grounds on the above mentioned date, according to an announcement made Sunday. It is planned to have a ball game and several other features.

Lefty, along with Joe Faber, another local boy who has enjoyed a good year in the Western league, will appear on one of the teams. Dugas and Faber, the latter a second baseman with Omaha, were both chosen on the all-star team picked by the managers of the circuit.

A HISTORY OF CONNECTICUT INDUSTRY



Released by Manufacturers Association of Connecticut

The C. H. Norton Company, North Westchester.

The paper and fibre board mill of the C. H. Norton company is located on one of the oldest water rights in the state of Connecticut at North Westchester in the town of Colchester, on Jeremy stream, a tributary of the Salmon river. This water power was used in the early days to run, successively, a grist mill, iron works and a cotton mill.

In 1886 C. H. Norton, who was operating a grist and saw mill, handed down from his grandfather, and who felt, even at that early date, that there was a poor future in his business, bought the site, water privilege, and an abandoned mill and started in a small way the manufacture of binders board.

For several years the output was small and limited to that one line of board. Then came the years when paper and paperboard were suggested as substitutes for various other products and Mr. Norton, through experiment with his particular product, became a pioneer in the making of board used to manufacture buttons—shoe and upholstery—and more recently clothing buttons. At the same time he went into the then new line of paper and fibreboard for shoe findings, and these two lines, together with high grade binders board constitute the principal products of the mill today.

These lines increased during the late 19th and early 20th centuries, until the mill reached its present size and capacity. Both steam and electricity have been added to supplant the water power, and today the mill is equipped with modern machinery, a large part of which was installed in 1928 following a serious fire. During the first six months of 1930 a 50 per cent greater volume of business was done by the company than in the same period of 1929.

Through all the history of the business Mr. Norton has been personally in charge of its management, with R. S. Brown holding the position of superintendent for over 25 years. Mr. Norton is still active in the determination of the company's policies, while his son, Edward H. Norton, is the manager.

The business was incorporated in 1916 with C. H. Norton, president; Edward H. Norton, secretary; and Miss Sylvina C. Norton, treasurer.

POETRY

A Pastoral Prayer

O God of life, in whom we have our being,
We wait in worship, hushed before Thy face;
Expectant, bowed in humble adoration,
Grateful recipients of Thy rich grace.
O, God of mercy, God of loving kindness,
Our simple, penitent confession hear—
Our sins Thou knowest; cleanse us and forgive us,
With love and confidence cast out our fear.

O, God of healing, God of comfort, hear us,
And touch our ailing bodies; make us whole;
Refresh us by Thy Spirit, heal, revive us;
Lift sorrow's burdens from the weary soul.
O, God of peace, that passeth understanding,
Keep Thou our hearts and minds still staid on Thee,
In patient quietness our soul possessing,
In fellowship and calm serenity.

O, God of truth—unchangeable, unchanging,
Teach us to hate all subterfuge and lies,
To scorn hypocrisy, despise all falsehood,
Till truth shall triumph and all error dies.

O, God of power—almighty and unfailing,
Lend us thine aid to do Thy work, Thy will,
And when resources fail and strength is waning,
With power and life anew our pulses fill.

O. God of light—eternal and unwavering,
Cast Thy rich radiance about our way,
That we may see our common task transfigured
And live with Thee in glory here today

—Rev. Frank von Christierson, in Presbyterian Advance.

Lunch Hour

Blue skies—a blue lake
Rippling in the breeze;
Blueberries flowering
Buzzing bumblebees.

Wild mint and sweet fern,
Checkerberries red;
Princess pine—a songbird
Just overhead.

Blue skies, a blue lake,
An island, tall pines;
Sizzing fat and wood smoke—
The fisherman dines.

"What time do you get up in summer?"

"As soon as the first ray of the sun comes in at my window."

"Isn't that rather early?"

"No, my room faces west."—Loughborough Herald.

Mrs. Brown and family were standing before the lion cage at the Zoo. Suddenly she turned toward her husband and said: "John, if the lions were to escape, whom would you save first, me or the children?"

"Me," said John without hesitation.—Exchange.

During the conversation the question of superstitions arose.

"Of course, I never walk under a ladder," avowed Mrs. Smith. "I think that's the unluckiest thing."

"But how absurd!" put in Mrs. Wilson. "Why, I walk under every ladder I meet! I just cross my heart and cross my fingers and I make sure that I have a piece of wood to touch and when I have passed under the ladder I turn in my tracks three times. You see, it's simple, and if you do that every time you walk under a ladder you'll be perfectly safe. I really can't stand these silly superstitions."—London Answers.

An eight-year-old Arkansas City (Kas.) youth is able to speak the language of Hungary, Roumania, Spain, France and Germany in addition to Yiddish and English.

Archaeologists find evidence in the Indian ruins of the southwest to show that prehistoric tribes carried on an intertribal commerce reaching into California and down into Mexico.

MOOSUP WINS SECOND GAME OF BIG SERIES

Sunday afternoon the Moosup club took the second game of the series with Plainfield by winning 13 to 8 in a loose and weird game. Eno and Robitaille was the battery for Moosup while Clocher and Beausoleil worked for Plainfield. Each team has won a game and a third will be played next Sunday.

Taicoun Wins Royal Oak Stakes

LONGCHAMPS, France, Sept. 14—(AP)—Taicoun belonging to Senator James Hennessy, former minister of agriculture, won the Royal Oak stakes, feature race of the opening day of Longchamps autumn meeting in dismal, rainy weather today. Taicoun, a son of Sourbier out of Tahiti and ridden by the American jockey, Frank Keogh, won by a length from the even money favorite, Chateau Bouscaut. The winner paid 10 to 1. The race, over a course of a mile and seven-eighths, was worth [illegible].

OUTLOOK FOR TRADE AND INDUSTRY CONTINUED DUBIOUS LAST WEEK

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—(AP)— With September half over, and widely regarded as a critical month in business, the outlook for trade and industry still remains misty, even dark in spots, but numerous rays of sunlight have broken through to impart better cheer during the past week.

Seasonal trends are normally upward at this time of year, so mild improvement here and there cannot be regarded as conclusively indicating an important change of trend. Reports showing gains in retail and wholesale sales, larger movement of railway freight, and quickening of steel mill output, however, have had decidedly reassuring effects of business sentiment.

The automobile industry continues to drag, and reduced requirements from that quarter are still being felt by the steel industry.

While commodity price indices generally retained the more stable undertone of August, renewed heaviness of the wheat market was displeasing.

Copper statistics for August showed further piling up of stocks of refined metal, and the market for this metal remained extremely dull. Large producers continued to ask 11 cents a pound, but all requirements were apparently served by custom smelters at 10 3-4 cents. The market for zinc was so quiet that quotations were largely nominal. Silver, however, was a little firmer.

Crude oil production continued to decline, and gasoline stocks were reduced further.

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—(AP)—New state and municipal securities scheduled for award this week total $28,-058,467, compared with municipal offerings of $46,056,000 last week. Among the larger issues to be placed this week are $5,000,000 for Los Angeles, to be awarded Tuesday; $5,250,000 State of North Carolina on Saturday, and $3,940,000 Jersey City, N. J., bonds on Friday.

Public offering is to be made tomorrow of $2,500,000 Illinois Pacific Coast Co., 6 per cent. convertible gold bonds, due 1945, at 98 1-2 and interest to yield 6.15 per cent. The financing is a result of the consolidation of the Pacific Coast Glass Co. and the Illinois Pacific Glass Corp.

An offering of $2,235,000 Chicago Great Western railroad 4 1-2 per cent. equipment trust certificates of 1930 Series A, to be issued under the Philadelphia plan, is being made by Salomon Bros. & Hutzler, and Evans, Stillman Co. The certificates mature from 1931 to 1945 inclusive, and are priced to yield from 3.75 to 4.70 per cent.

WESTERLY

TUG WRECKED ON REEF IS A WESTERLY BOAT

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, Sept. 14.—The tug boat "Westerly," Capt. Harry Baker, of New London, master, which piled up on Horseshoe reef off Groton Long Point in Fishers Island sound and filled with water about 8 a. m., in a heavy fog on Saturday, is a Westerly-owned craft. It is a familiar boat in the waters off the Connecticut and Rhode Island coasts. The boat was built in Tottenville, N. Y., in 1912 and financed by Westerly interests to take the place of a former tug boat, "Westerly," now of Albany, N. Y., and built at Mystic in 1879. The contract price for the craft was $12,900 but the total cost before being placed in commission was $18,000. In the Westerly tax book the Westerly Towing Co., owners of the tug Westerly, is taxed for $8,000. To those versed in marine values today it was stated that the boat might bring about half that price and that there was no market for such a boat.

The Westerly Towing Co. has Charles E. Sherman, of Westerly, as president and Everett Barns as treasurer and general manager; among other stockholders being Frank N. Wilcox, Oliver D. Andrews, of Ashaway; E. E. Bradley, of Stonington; William Segar, Charles Segar, Arthur M. Cottrell, Mrs. Sarah A. Segar, and others. Will D. Hoxie, at the time the boat was built, furnished the boilers for the boat and his stock holding was to that extent. When built the tug was brought to Westerly by the late Capt. Frank H. Robinson, who died in the hospital as the result of the accident when struck by the pilot wheel as the rudder was thrown by a floating ice pack in the Pawcatuck river near the head of navigation at the Commerce street wharf. Engineer Patrick H. Mullaney, of Pawcatuck, was in charge of the engine room and both men were employed on the tug for many years.

Although the captain was reported as not at the wheel when the boat went on the rocks, the crew of the tug at the time included Captain Baker, Engineer Louis Faulkner, Cook Elmer Bullert and a deck hand, all of New London, and Fireman Perry Underwood, of Main street, Westerly. The crew took to the small boat when it was found that the hull of the boat had been so wrenched that doors would not open and close and a bulkhead dislodged put the boat's pump out of commission, and they reached the Connecticut shore safely.

Tugboat Westerly has a gross tonnage of 68 tons, 36 tons, net; her length over all 68.1 feet; breadth 18.2 feet; depth 7.2 feet, and a crew of five men, with an indicated horsepower of 200, and was originally papered from Providence. The old tug Westerly which was replaced by the later tugboat had a gross tonnage of 41 tons, 20 tons net; was 66.6 feet long; 16.7 feet breadth, and a depth of 6 feet.

Many older Westerly people have occasion to remember "Horseshoe Reef" from an experience some years ago. The excursion steamer, Ella, formerly on an excursion run from Norwich to Watch Hill, was chartered to take an excursion party from Westerly with membership made up from employes and friends of the Solway mills, formerly occupying the Main street mill now occupied by the Clyde mills. The Ella with Pilot Walker at the wheel ran upon the reef and the boat and passengers were held prisoners for an uncomfortable length of time. The rocks, in a horseshoe shape, from which the reef takes its name, are in the channel and marked by a buoy, but there is deep water on each side.

Harry R. Milner, chairman of the municipal improvement committee of the Westerly chamber of commerce, makes the following report relative to Westerly's summer business: "There are 12,000 to 15,000 summer guests of the South county, who make Westerly their base of supplies for about three months in the year and bring to our merchants an immense amount of business.

"The property investment of the summer guests along these South county shores runs into hundreds of thousands of dollars; the enlargement and upkeep of their investments in this state furnish employment to our masons, carpenters and painters at a time of the year that they might otherwise be idle. The money paid caddy boys at the golf clubs during the summer season by our guests enables many boys to continue in high school and on to college and gives them the financial means to become more useful citizens through their higher education.

"If this advantage to the merchants, mechanics and school boys is to be continued and enlarged as it should be, it is necessary for our state and town to assure summer guests of safe and adequate traffic facilities in the South county.

"I would respectfully call to the attention of the Rhode Island state board of public roads the following editorial which appeared in the Providence Evening Bulletin under date of Sept. 4, 1930, and ask them seriously to consider this editorial and its relations to bridge and interstate traffic conditions at Westerly, the proper solution of which by the Rhode Island state board of public roads can add wealth to our town, county and state, and it is most important at this time of unemployment to spend money upon projects where we are certain financial advantages to our state and town are proved by the following editorial to result:

Shore Town Valuations

"'Westerly reports an increase of $1,350,000 in taxable property valuations this year and North Kingstown a gain of better than $440,000. In the case of the former community the advance amounts to six per cent, while in the latter it is five.

"'The substantial gains are in sharp contrast to the figures for inland towns, many of which show stationary or declining valuations.

"'Both Westerly and North Kingstown are shore communities and a considerable part of their taxable property consists of summer homes. These, although usually owned by non-residents, are an increasingly important source of local revenue.

"'A Connecticut survey not long ago demonstrated that typical shore towns in that state are growing in property valuations several times as fast as comparable inland places. The same thing appears to be true here in Rhode Island. Those communities in Washington and Newport counties (and to a less degree in Bristol and Kent) which border upon the sea or bay are thus in an extremely favorable position for future development, providing they realize and take advantage of their opportunities.'"

Norman Falls, 17-year-old Central Falls, R. I., boy, who escaped the past week-end from the Liberty street Pawcatuck lockup where he was being held by Pawcatuck Police Patrolman George L. Seidel, pending the Westerly arrival of authorities from the Sockanosset school to return the boy to the institution whence he had escaped, has again been captured. He was apprehended at Turford, near New Haven, by Connecticut state police officers after he had stolen a bicycle. This time he was brought into court in New Haven and given a sentence to pay a $25 fine. Without funds, he was committed for 35 days. At the end of this time the Stonington police will go after him and later he will be turned over to Rhode Island authorities.

A gang of young hoodlums who have followed a practice of gathering on the Pawcatuck river bridge and moving from the Connecticut to Rhode Island side or vice versa when warned by Pawcatuck or Westerly police officers were up to their old tricks on Saturday night. After being warned by Officer Adin R. Sheldon some half dozen youths, when they saw Officer Sheldon closing in on them from the street side of the bridge, made a wild dash to Rhode Island soil of the north sidewalk. In their extreme haste to escape the clutches of the law one of the boys struck and knocked a four-year-old girl to the hard cement sidewalk surface. Derisive shouts for the police officer were their only apology.

Real Estate Transfers

Recorded in the office of the Westerly town clerk appears the following transfers:

Sept. 11. Mary E. Champlin, et al., to Lewis L. Lefferts, tract of land at Avondale.

Sept. 13. Albert L. Saunders, of West Medway, Mass., and Miss Carrie L. Saunders, of Westerly, heirs of Alzada A. Saunders, to Town of Westerly, two certain tracts of land.

First tract at Misquamicut on southerly side of Atlantic avenue and bounded southerly by Atlantic ocean, westerly by land of Ernest E. Boyington and wife and easterly by land of Raymond B. Case, of Norwich.

Second tract at Misquamicut, a parcel of marsh land bounded southerly by Atlantic avenue, northerly by Winnapaug pond easterly by land of Mary S. Damerel, and westerly by land of John Monte and wife.

Sept. 13. Easement. Alexander S. Thompson to South County Public Service Co., right of way for electric light and power lines and across land off Beach street, known as Thompson terrace.

Chairman Everett A. Kingsley on Saturday night presided at a meeting of the republican town committee which was attended by all except one member of the first voting district and all but four from the second voting district. Various candidates were discussed for the assembly ticket and endorsement given candidates whose names are to be presented at the republican caucus to be held next week. In case of a contest developing, under the special Westerly caucus act a second voting caucus will be held from 2 p. m., through the evening. Upon introduction of Chairman Kingsley the following resolution was passed: "Resolved and Voted, That the republican town committee endorses and pledges its support to the nomination and election of Hon. Jesse H. Metcalf to the United States senate as his record while in that responsible position is one to be proud of and his untiring efforts in behalf of his native state should be rewarded by his continuance in office."

The names of candidates endorsed were not made public by the republican towns' committee.

Albert Boardman, of Norwich, was a Westerly visitor on Sunday at his former home here.

W. J. Lauchlan, after visiting relatives in Westerly, returned to New York city on Sunday.

Edna M. Saunders left Westerly the first of the week to pass a vacation visit in Jackson, N. H.

Mr. and Mrs. Harrison C. Noyes and Mr. and Mrs. Lester Greenman were week-end motor visitors at Weekapaug.

Michael Pescetello, of Philadelphia, Pa., is the vacation guest of relatives and friends in Pawcatuck.

George E. Leonard returned to his Pawcatuck home on Saturday night, after viewing the International Yacht races off Newport, making the trip by large fishing boat from Point Judith.

Wayland F. Bateson, of New York, was the week-end guest of his Westerly associate, Judge William A. Wilcox, in Pawcatuck, and attended the International Yacht race off Newport with him, making the trip from New London.

Mr. and Mrs. Claude I. Spencer have returned to their Pawcatuck home from a motor vacation trip through the Berkshire and Green Mountains.

Miss Jean N. Smith returned the past week-end to her Westerly home from a motor trip through Ohio.

Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Kenyon, of Pawcatuck, are enjoying a motor vacation trip through New York state.

September term of Washington county superior court comes in this (Monday) morning at the West Kingston, R. I., courthouse. Members of the bar did not know which justice had been assigned to preside at Kingston, but it is believed Judge J. E. O'Connell will occupy the bench.

There are nine cases on the attorney general's docket assigned for trial at this session of the court, including larceny, assault, operating automobile under the influence of liquor and liquor possession charges.

There are 20 new actions at law whose assignment day is tomorrow and 30 new divorce cases appear on the docket which will be taken up on Tuesday. The petit jurors will report for duty on Wednesday.

Enrollment of students in the Westerly high school continues to increase in numbers since opening day a week ago until at the present time there is a total membership of 585 pupils.

A largely attended wedding was held at the chapel, Watch Hill, on Saturday, when Miss Frances King Cross, daughter of Harry Parsons Cross, of Providence and Watch Hill, and Benjamin Louis Johnson, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin L. Johnson, of Ithaca, N. Y., were married Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock at Cloverly cottage, the summer residence of Mr. and Mrs. Cross.

The Very Rev. Francis J. M. Cotter, dean of the Cathedral of St. John on North Main street, performed the ceremony. The traditional wedding marches were played by an orchestra of stringed instruments.

NOANK

Neighbors and friends are keenly interested in the news which comes from Mrs. Lizzie Potter, widow of Rev. Andrew Potter, who is a patient at Lawrence Memorial hospital, New London. Since being taken to the hospital for treatment, first for eye trouble, Mrs. Potter, in reaching from her bed had a fall which broke her right hip. However, the excellent care which she is receiving is having its effect on her general health and at present she is very comfortable.

Henry Ellis has returned to Preston after a visit with Mr. and Mrs. John Robertson.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph St. Jacques have returned to Providence, having been guests of local relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul T. Galt and family have returned to Hartford, after spending a vacation at Groton Long Point.

Mrs. Mary K. Burns has returned to Hartford after a visit at Groton Long Point.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Ebbetts and son, Carl, have returned to New York after a visit with Mr. Ebbett's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Ebbetts.

Mizpah class of the Baptist church met at the home of Mrs. Nellie Wilcox Friday afternoon, a pleasing program having been arranged by Mrs. Ada Fitch. At the close of the afternoon refreshments were served. Mrs. Wilcox was assisted in serving by Mrs. Minnie Searles. Present were: Mrs. Margaret Strong, Mrs. Stella Rathbun, Mrs. C. V. Oliver, Mrs. Ada Fitch, Miss Annie C. Spicer, Mrs. Mary Chesebro, Mrs. Jennie Ashcroft and Mrs. Minnie Searles.

James Ringland, John Morrison and Edward Morgan attended the meeting of the 40 and 8 held in Norwich recently.

Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Hynes, of Hartford, spent the week end at their summer cottage at Groton Long Point.

Mrs. Arthur Caron has returned to Providence.

The infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Ballestracci has been named Alfred Otis.

The fishing boat Roswell P, owned by Elbert Palmer, is on the ways at Rogers boatyard for minor repairs and painting. The Jennie T, owned by Albert Musante, of Groton, has been repainted. The Mononoto pleasure boat, owned by Capt. Everett Davis, of Fishers Island, which has been reconditioned, has been launched.

Mr. and Mrs. M. S. Sinnott, of West Hartford, are spending several days at their cottage at Groton Long Point.

The following from the village were nominated at the republican caucus held at Poquonoc: Walter Wolverton, for assessor for two years, to fill the unexpired term of Charles Burrows; board of relief, John P. Ebbetts; constable, L. C. Brown; registrar of voters, Warren D. Murphy; school visitor, Dr. William M. Hill.

Arthur Falconi is ill.

Speedy Fire Drill

A fire drill was held at Noank grammar school Friday morning. The entire nine class rooms were vacated in three-quarters of a minute. The alarm was sounded by James Ashbey, caretaker.

Mrs. George Roy has returned to Providence, after a short visit with local relatives.

UNLICENSED PLUMBING WORK RESULTS IN NEW LONDON ARREST

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 14—Elias Nahass was arrested today by Detective Sergeant Nelson Smith charged with violation of the city's plumbing law in doing plumbing work without having obtained a license. He was released upon furnishing a surety on his bond of $50 for his appearance in police court tomorrow. Nahass, it is claimed did work where the plumbing is connected with a public sewer and water main. Nahass' arrest was at the instigation of a city official and it is understood that other arrests for the same alleged offense are likely to be made.

CORTICELLI THREAD MFG. DEPT. MAY GO TO FLORENCE

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 14—There is a possibility that the thread manufacturing department of the Corticelli Silk company, Church street, will be transferred to the company's mill at Florence, Mass. A meeting of officials of the company, it is learned, was held this past week for the purpose of considering the advisability of transferring that branch of the company's business to Florence. No decision was reached, but it is expected that during the coming week it will be decided whether the change will be made. If the transfer is decided upon, it will mean the closing of but one room in the Church street mill, for the manufacture of fabric will continue. Several months ago when the company closed its Reed street mill, the machinery was taken to the Florence mill.

Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Robbins B. Stoeckel Saturday ordered the suspension of the drivers' licenses of George O'Brien, 50 Oneco avenue and Charles H. Sternberg, 120 Riverview avenue. Commissioner Stoeckel ordered the return of the license of Joseph Renzoni, 212 Shaw street.

An automobile driven by S. R. Basson, 78 Washington street, in being backed on North Bank street in front of police headquarters Saturday night, hit two of the police motorcycles parked there. Both cycles were knocked over and their fenders disfigured. Basson said that he would pay whatever damage had been done.

Otto Holm, contractor, made complaint to the police today that during last night an electric saw and motor were stolen from Cedar Grove avenue where he is erecting a church. The saw and motor are valued at $200.

Groton Girl Struck

An automobile driven by Gordon W. Mahan, 189 Broad street, hit Dorothy Petty, 14, of Pleasant street, Groton, Saturday afternoon. The girl was taken to Lawrence-Memorial hospital where an examination revealed that she had sustained injuries no more serious than bruises and scratches.

WM. A. WORDELL, DESPONDENT, SUICIDES BY GAS INHALATION

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 14—William H. Wordell, 73, widely known restauranteer, who made his home at the residence of Clarence Parmalee, Neptune avenue, Ocean Beach, committed suicide Friday night at his restaurant, Wordell's Pavilion, Ocean Beach by gas inhalation. His body was found Saturday. Mr. Wordell has been a resident of New London about 45 years. He is survived by his wife, from whom he had been estranged for many years, by a daughter, Mrs. Florence Smith. Mr. Wordell's act was the result of financial difficulties due to recent losses, also he frequently referred to a falling off of his business this summer and had been greatly depressed because of this condition, so much so that he recently made an attempt to destroy himself.

Mr. Wordell had been the proprietor of the Ocean Beach restaurant many years and until the past two seasons the shore dinner house had had a large patronage. He came to New London from Massachusetts and first engaged in business in the Winthrop hotel building, State street. Later he opened an elaborate restaurant in the former Bacon hotel block, now the Hotel Royal, Bank street. Subsequently Mr. Wordell established himself in business on Golden street, and finally became the proprietor of the Ocean Beach business.

Mr. Wordell suspended business for the season about 10 days ago. He went to the restaurant daily and Friday when he left his home nothing unusual in his manner was noted. He did not return home during the afternoon or evening and Saturday forenoon, about 11 o'clock, Mr. Parmalee went to the restaurant and found the building locked, but he could see Mr. Wordell's coat and hat on a hanger. Mr. Parmalee telephoned police headquarters and requested that a search of the restaurant be made. Motorcycle Officer William Corcoran went to the restaurant and forced an entrance. The building was filled with gas and going to the kitchen Corcoran found Mr. Wordell lifeless, lying on a table but with his head resting on a gas stove and over two burners, which were emitting a full flow of gas. Medical Examiner Charles Kaufman was notified and after having rendered a verdict of suicide, gave permission for the removal of the body.

Mr. Wordell left a note addressed to Undertaker Samuel M. Prentis, instructing the latter to take charge of his body and care for its burial, stating that the suicide had recently purchased a lot in Cedar Grove cemetery and described the location of the lot. He also told of $306 being in his clothing, to defray his funeral expenses.

BEER AND GIN SECURED IN RAID AT FABBIN'S

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 14—A large number of cases will be presented in the police court Monday, for there will be more than a score of men charged with various violations of the law. None of the offenses alleged, however, constitute a serious infraction of the law.

Enrico Fabbri, 10 Smith street, will be charged with violation of the liquor law on two counts, keeping with intent to sell and illegal possession. Fabbri, who has been arrested several times this year, was taken into custody Saturday night when his drinking resort was raided by Sergeant John Courtney, Motorcycle Officers George Cockell and William Corcoran and Patrolmen Clarence Wells and Arthur Powell. The officers went to the Fabbri resort, which is a small building in the rear of his restaurant and which is equipped with tables and chairs. Entrance was easily obtained and a search revealed six cases of beer and a quart bottle nearly full of gin.

Albert Lockhart, 30, a seaman, of Columbia, Pa.; Stanley Jankowski, 28, a marine fireman, of Philadelphia; Edward C. Burke, 28, a seaman, of Portland, Ore.; Benjamin Brown, 32, a seaman, of Camden, N. J.; Daniel White, 24 and colored, a cook, of Virgin Islands and Richard Heath, 27, a seaman, of London, Eng., will be charged with breach of the peace. The sextette were on Main street Saturday and were arrested by Patrolmen George Bruhns and Arthur Feeley.

Edward McCarthy, 41, of Boston, a laborer, will be charged with breach of the peace and intoxication. He was arrested at the Union station where he created a disturbance Saturday night by Sergeant John McGrath and Officer Harold Swanson, of the New Haven railroad special agents.

Sol Charlop, 291 Huntington street; Robert Hunter, U. S. S. Amidon; Helen Saindon, 143 Shaw street; Mrs. Arthur Freedman, 105 Riverview avenue; Mrs. Charles Vickerman and infant daughter, 23 Sharaf street; Mrs. Arthur Arcione and infant daughter, 119 Jefferson avenue; William McLaughlin, 73 Stuart avenue, Ocean Beach; John Smith, 28 Willetts avenue; Miss Evelyn Meuse, Stonington, patients at Lawrence Memorial hospital, were discharged Saturday.

FUNERALS

Mrs. William M. Lewis

The funeral of Mrs. Ada A. Lewis, wife of William M. Lewis, was held Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock at her residence, 37 Federal street, the services being conducted by Rev. J. J. Allen, pastor of the First Baptist church. Burial was in Cedar Grove cemetery.

Mrs. Harvey Reeves

The funeral of Mrs. Catherine A. Reeves, wife of Harvey Reeves, was held Saturday morning at 9 o'clock at St. Mary's Star of the Sea church and was attended by a large gathering of mourners. The high mass of requiem was sung by Rev. Raymond J. O'Callaghan. The bearers were Patrick Murphy, Patrick Magner, Joseph Caldron, John Murphy, James Cotter and Antone Alexander. Burial was in Jordan cemetery.

Youthful Thieves Fined

Edward Hurley and John Nihill, both 17 and both residing at Jamaica Plains, Boston, were tried at a special session of the Groton town court Saturday, charged with theft of an automobile. The youths pleaded guilty and were fined $50 and costs each. The penalties were paid by parents of the boys, who came to New London Saturday forenoon.

Tierney Irresponsible

John Tierney, New Haven business man, who was arrested Friday night by State Police Officer John Smith on a technical charge of reckless driving, was in the East Lyme justice court Saturday. He was released upon furnishing a surety on his bond of $100 and will be given a hearing next week. Tierney, who is suffering from worry over financial difficulties, was driving near the Niantic river highway bridge Friday afternoon when he lost control of the steering wheel. The auto plunged off the embankment and landed in the river mud flats. Tierney fled from the scene of the accident, but when he returned Officer Smith was there and arrested the driver, for his mental condition indicated that he was irresponsible and not capable of driving with any degree of safety. Tierney was accompanied home by a friend who came to New London for that purpose.

GILCHRIST CASE NOLLED— INJURED BOY RECOVERS

Edward Gilchrist, 56 Spring Garden avenue, Norwich, was in the police court Saturday on a technical charge of reckless driving, the count being nolled. Gilchrist had been at liberty under bail of $1000 several weeks because George Botchis, 7, of 73 Woodbridge street, who was run over by the Norwich man's truck, had not been discharged at Lawrence Memorial hospital. Not until the past week did the child return home when it was definitely known that the boy would recover.

THEFT CHARGE AT LEBANON RESULTS IN ARRESTS

Fred and Joseph Smart were arrested Saturday night by State Police Officer Arthur Whitmarsh, charged with theft at Lebanon. The men were locked up at police headquarters and will be taken to Lebanon Monday for a hearing.

Driver Reprimanded

Roy Hart, driver of the apparatus of Nameaug Engine company, was suspended Saturday by Deputy Chief Calvin Edmunds on a charge of insubordination. Hart was given a hearing later by City Manager William Holt, who reprimanded the driver and then ordered him restored to duty. Hart was observed wearing a pair of light tan shoes by Edmunds, and as the rules and regulations of the department call for the wearing of black shoes, Hart was rebuked for ignoring the rule. An altercation between the deputy chief and the driver followed, with the result that Edmunds preferred charges against Hart.

Opportunity for Charity

Announcement was made from the pulpit of one of the Catholic churches Sunday that the local office of the Diocesan Bureau is seeking a home for two little brothers, one 4 1-2 and the other 8 1-2. The children are of good parentage, but unfortunate and the desire is not to separate them. Their case was compared to the night at Bethlehem, when an application was made for shelter and the response was "no room in the inn." Since that date, the appeal of the destitute child to Christian homes and hearts has often been the same. The hope was expressed that a response, prompt and charitable, might be met with in this particular case.

William R. Lubchansky, 199 Huntington street, charged with blocking traffic, was given suspension of judgment.

Henry H. Forguhar, Hastings-on-Hudson, was charged with passing an automatic traffic signal that was set at danger. He did not appear in court so his bond of $15 was forfeited.

James Dolan and John Sullivan, laborers, the former residing at Fishers Island and the latter living at Roxbury, Mass., were arrested Saturday night on Main street by Patrolman Henry Sylvia and William Corcoran charged with intoxication.

NO FANCY FOOD FOR SCHOOL CHILDREN—PLAIN DISHES BEST

Now that school days are here you must pay strict attention to the family menu if you want your children to greet your meals as happily as the pair above.

By Louise Bennett Weaver

School days are here again—happy days for children and their parents if the children are feeling fit.

Plain, well-cooked and mildly seasoned foods are probably the most important factor in keeping children healthy and happy.

The growing child requires three meals a day and possibly lunch periods in the morning and mid-afternoon.

The underweight child needs these lunches. They may consist of milk and graham crackers, milk and fruit or milk and a sandwich.

The child's food should be plain. His natural appetite is normal and he has to acquire the taste for highly seasoned and spiced foods which are not good for him.

Here are some balanced and nutritious menus:

Breakfast
Orange Juice
Cooked Wheat Cereal Milk
Buttered Toast
Dinner
Broiled Lamb Chop Baked Potato
Buttered Carrots
Graham Bread Currant Jelly
Celery
Baked Apple Milk
Supper
Corn Meal Mush Milk
Stewed Prunes Fruit Cookies

Breakfast

RARE GEMS TO SPARKLE ON CAPITAL'S LEADERS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14—(AP)—Rare antique jewelry and family heirlooms in modern settings will blaze and sparkle from the throats of capital society leaders when the social season opens.

Washington, probably more than any other city in the country, boasts a treasure hoard of rubies, diamonds and emeralds which have been handed down from one generation to another.

They have lain in secret cupboards and tapestried wall safes in Paris, Buenos Aires and Shanghai. They were only taken out on rare occasions until brought to the United States capital by their owners. They belong to members of the diplomatic corps, many of whom descended from old Spanish families.

Sentiment, superstition and romance cling to the gems. Some are reputed to have been part of pirates' loot, others to have graced the crowns of kings.

But for practical reasons their women owners prefer this season to have their heirlooms in modern setting. A leading Washington jeweler employs a French craftsman whose time is wholly occupied resetting rare old gems.

Four beautiful uncut emeralds which belonged to a woman from South America engrossed his attention the other afternoon in his studio. He had designed a pendant with diamond background for the green stones.

Capital society leaders arrayed in full-jeweled splendor on state occasions often wear thousands of dollars' worth of gems.

KING'S MOUNTAIN NATIVE TO DIRECT BIG PAGEANT

ASHEVILLE, N. J. Sept. 14—(AP)—A woman, born in the shadow of King's mountain, has been chosen to direct the mammoth historic pageant to be presented there at the sesquicentennial celebration on the famous battle ground October 7.

She is Laura Plonk, of Asheville, whose work in organizing pageants has attracted wide attention.

The pageant will depict the history of the Revolutionary period, beginning with the Boston tea party.

LAST MINUTE PARIS LOOK AN OLD FASHIONED SASH

PARIS, Sept. 14—(AP)—Old fashioned sashes, with loops and splashing ribbon effects are the debutante's best bet for obtaining that last minute Paris look.

The woman dressmaker who first launched robes de style, precursors of long full skirts, is behind the bigger and brighter sash movement.

Her adaptions of the sash to modern requirements include some eight-inch-wide versions of shirred satin made with double loops in back.

Such girdles, for that's what they are, predominate the costume which becomes a mere background of pastel colored or white tulle, taffeta or starched chiffon, for a bright band of crushed satin.

Most dressmakers are content to indicate the approximate waistline with a band of bright velvet ribbon.

The contrasting ribbon belt is much younger and newer than one that matches. Paris goes in for bright colors on white, for turquoise and emerald green on black.

Older women fasten velvet ribbon belts with twin jeweled buckles but the bowknot is newer and more sprightly.

More than one noted dressmaking house has belts of fur on lace, chiffon or velvet evening dresses. A narrow strip of ermine is decidedly new around the waistline of a black frock.

Belts of shaved lamb and astrakhan are everywhere used on afternoon ensembles which have other touches of fur, either on dress or coat.

TWO WOMEN HELP HUNT WHITE RHINO IN AFRICA

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 14—(AP)—Two women will hunt white rhino in Africa this winter with their husbands.

Just back from a trip of exploration in Africa, Rudyerd Boulton, of Carnegie Museum here, and his wife, Laura, were induced by Ralph Pulitzer, New York newspaper publisher, to return to hunt for a white rhinoceros and for Africa's most elusive animal, the giant sable.

TAR DROPS ON TULLE SUBSTITUTE FOR JET

PARIS, Sept. 14—(AP)—Little drops of tar make a fine substitute for jet, Paris has discovered.

Tarred tulle is among the novel fabrics used for evening dresses. It gives the effect of jet spangles highly effective under bright lights.

STOVEPIPE MUFF WORKS SPARE TIME AS CUFF

PARIS, Sept. 14—(AP)—A stovepipe muff of shaved lamb or broadtail that can be slipped onto the coat sleeve forming a foresleeve is one of the brand new ideas of autumn.

Another innovation is fur lined gauntlet cuffs which can be folded back forming a fur muff with cloth lining.

Muffs are smartest this season when they are crushed instead of plain and flat.

Fur Apes Fabrics

PARIS, Sept. 14—(AP)—Shaved smooth furs like pony and galliac are used like fabric for some of the prettiest sport coats of the new season. They have trimming touches of rough caracul or lamb.

New Choker Beads

PARIS, Sept. 14—(AP)—A recent arrival in costume jewelry circles is the choker collar of pearls like tea balls.

They are shown by a dressmaker who suggests them for wear with street ensembles of gray and dark blue with small flat astrakan collars. The beads ride atop the fur collars with youthful and amusing effect.

Capital Deb's Flying Dress

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14—(AP)—Miss Katherine Lowman, daughter of the assistant secretary of the treasury, wore a simple, one piece, sleeveless white linen frock when she took an air flight with her fiance, William Jardine, Jr. She also wore short white gloves and a soft white linen hat.

Aid Women Prisoners

BERLIN, Sept. 14—(AP)—A committee of German women, including leading welfare workers, has been formed to alleviate conditions of women in Soviet prisons.

WOMAN IN LIFE AND IN THE KITCHEN

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

Devilled egg salad is particularly god when served with Russian dressing.

For mixing flour and water us a fork or egg-beater to make it smoth and free from lumps.

Fish requires quick cooking at high temperature to seal the juices. Fish cooked long is tasteless.

Little molasses cakes and coffee make a delightful lunch to serve afternoon guests on a cool day.

Never serve food in a dish that is too large for the amount of food served. It detracts from the appearance of your table.

Screws and nails which are rusted into wood can be lossened by dropping a little hot paraffin on them. After a short time they can be removed very easily.

Waxing linoleum has been found very satisfactory. First wash a small area of the linoleum with steaming hot water. Dry while still warm, add wax and rub well.

Be sure the water is at boiling point before putting vegetables into it to boil. If it is cold or lukewarm the freshness and flavor will soak out into the water.

When making jam, let the fruit boil for about ten minutes before the sugar is added and only about one-half the quantity of sugar will be required.

Leather picture frames, portfolios, etc., may be cleared with benzine. Apply it with a soft cloth and if the benzine removes the polish apply the well-beaten white of an egg.

It is always a good plan to place the piano a few inches from the wall of a room, especially if it is against an outside wall. The dampness coming through often ruins the tone of an instrument.

When you wish to use only the white of an egg, break a tiny hole at the end of the shell and let the white drip out, then cover the opening with waxed paper and the yolk will keep for several days in a cool place.

When your jelly will not jell do not run it back into the pan to cook again, but take a large dripping-pan and half fill with water. Set your undisturbed glasses of jelly in it, in a hot over, and let them bake until sufficiently jelled. This usually takes about threequarters of an hour.

TOUGH CUTS

If you get an inexpensive and more or less tough cut of beef, soak it an hour before cooking in vinegar water. This does much to make it tender.

STAINS

To remove stains from a vase or bottle, put in it two tablespoons of salt and four tablespoons of vinegar and shake well. Let stand for several hours, empty and rinse out in hot soapsuds.

BISCUITS

When making baking powder biscuits you will find them much better if you roll the dough thinner than usual, and use two cuts for one biscuit, having one on top of the other. Made this way, the biscuits will break open evenly and readily, and are daintier.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY

A glass of sour lemonade daily is an effective aid in avoiding colds.

A little household ammonia added to the water with which mosquito bites are washed will take the sting out of the bite.

An excellent rinsing water for blond hair is a level teaspoonful of borax added to a gallon of water. It brings out all the lights in blond hair.

The long, slender finger may use a pointed nail; the short, stubby finger a round nail. The finger with a ball at the top should have the nail shaped as widely as possible. Analyze your fingers and shape your nails accordingly.

VINEGAR FOR POISONS

In case of emergency it is well to remember that cider vinegar will act as an antidote and relieve pain caused by acid burns, lye, alkali poisoning or quicklime, by soaking the affected parts with vinegar.

Vinegar will also counteract poisons taken internally such as opium, nicotine, hemlock, colchicum and toadstools. Doses: drink equal portions of cider vinegar and water in large amounts.

SO SMALL

An umbrella so small that it slips through the bottom of an envelope bag, and is carried under the arm is a convinent thing to possess. This practical umbrella is very thick and stubby and has a long tassel to complete the effect.

ANOTHER CASE

Very new are the lines of an imported bag, somewhat smaller than a suitcase, and made with rounded edges. It fastens with the convenient slide fastener. The bag is meant for men and should hold a multitude of things, incidentally it is of green leather and has two handles for added convenience.

NEW NAVAJO RUNGS

Whether your hall or room is decorated in high colors or subdued ones you will be interested in new chenille rugs that take the designs of navajo blankets. The coloring and patterns of these rugs are so decorative that they appear at good advantage with almost any woodwork or room scheme.

DOG BATH

If your dog needs a bath, now is a good time to bathe him. It really isn't difficult if you collect all the necessary equipment and then go about the job quickly and quietly. Every precaution must be taken to keep the dog from catching cold. If you bathe him out of doors, select a warm, sunny day; if indoors, don't let him escape from the house until he is thoroughly dry.

DICTATES OF FASHION

Canton crepe is gaining in importance.

Evening frocks have glittering touches reflected in yokes and outlines for armholes, also in bands and in discreet allover treatments.

The beret Basque in its original form as well as in many deviations from it continues to be a general favorite.

The bolero type of frock continues to grow in favor, both in plain and figured materials, and for all occasions.

Fur belts are a smart new note and sometimes match collars and cuffs of fur. White ermine is used frequently to trim afternoon and evening frocks.

NEW SPORTS WEAVE

Every time we get to the point when we question whether there can be anything new offered for another season we hear of some startling fashion innovation. Now comes word that a new sports weave has been designed that simulates petit point. It is a wool-filled spiral crepe with small designs woven into the ground and is a clever addition to the fabrics that make the sports frock and the newly important coat frock.

LATEST IN NECKLACES

Taking its design from the spiral necklace of Patou is a new pearl coil in which small beads are strung on spirally coiled wire to create a rope effect. This clings to the neck and there are no strings to break disastrously. Such a solid pearl necklace in creamy white or in a combination of cream with jade, lapis, coral or other beads is matched to earrings and bracelets.

HAND WROUGHT TRIMMING A FAD

The cycle of color in evening prints rotates between dark light backgrounds. As you recall, the dark patterns were worn in the early spring, then pastel backgrounds took precedence. The season turns toward the dark settings for light and bright-colored motifs, just appearing in the smartest shops.

Hand-wrought details which mark the success of every frock first appeared on day prints in the nature of self-fabric cut-outs appliqued in lieu of other trimming. This has been adopted for formal gowns and adds much to their elegance.

LAUNDRY HINTS

Wire paper clips may be used very successfully to hold pleats in position when pressing a skirt.

Paint spots on clothing should be rubbed with kerosene and left to stand a few hours before washing.

One of the most useful aids on wash day is turpentine. It will loosen dirt without the slightest injury to fabrics.

Soak pink wash materials in a solution of one tablespoon vinegar to one quart of water and hang by the selvedge in a shady place to dry before cutting out the dress. Then your materials will neither fade nor shrink.

CLEANING VELVET

Shabby velvet can be improved as follows: First brush it thoroughly so as to remove all dust, then spread a damp cloth on a hot iron and over this draw the wrong side of the velvet. As soon as the steam from the velvet ceases it must be removed or it will scorch.

NOVEL CLOTHESPIN CLAMP

Here is a new use for the spring type of clothespin. If you need a good clamp for papers, bills or even handkerchiefs about to be sent to the laundry, try a spring clothespin. If painted and decorated they make lovely permanent clamps, instead of emergency ones.

OAK FURNITURE IS POPULAR

There has been a marked increase in the popularity of oak furniture during recent months. It's the darker finishes rather than the golden oak pieces of the gay nineties which are being favored. Oak is used chiefly in furniture of the Jacobean and other early English periods, but its popularity is certain to extend to further styles.

One of the most attractive and ingenious decorations for waste baskets and small make-up, letter or sewing boxes is the application of prints or pictures. Even cartoons and magazine advertisements have been cut out and cleverly arranged on such receptacles. The pictures may be neatly pasted on the surface, and then coated with wax to make them look mellow and antique.

STICK WILLOW

The sun porch will look its best if furnished with pieces of stick willow painted red with yellow trimmings. Hanging shelves of the same may also be purchased.

A PERFECT MATCH

A gay tea cloth and napkins have an all-over floral design in deep rose, green and gold and this design is exactly matched, flower for flower, in a china tea set used with it.

METAL TABLE

A useful table for out-of-doors or in, is made of metal painted a dull green. The round top is finished with pie crust edge, and another top slightly smaller and finished with a handle fits over the first like a tray.

CONCERNING WOMEN

Jeanne Harari-Bakonyi has the distinction of being the first woman lawyer of Egypt. She will specialize in criminal law.

Mary Riddle, full-blooded Quinault Indian, has the distinction of being the first woman of her race to qualify as an airplane pilot.

Mrs. Ada A. Finkelstein, law graduate, former newspaper woman, and mother of two children, was recently admitted to the bar in Brooklyn, N. Y.

Three have been no executions of women in New Jersey since the electric chair replaced the gallows. Before that, one woman was hung in 1868 and one in 1878.

The Soviet government of Russia is training young girls and women in all trades in which heretofore, as a rule, only men were engaged. The plan is to reduce unemployment among women.

EXOTIC HAT STAND

A few graceful curves, and a bit of gay paint, and behold, a modern hat stand that resembles, but does not imitate a bird.

ALL FOR VANITY

A most complete gold vanity case has a place for initials on the top, and inside rouge, powder, lip stick and a space for five cigarettes.

RECIPES

Orange layer cake: Three cups flour, one-half cup butter, two eggs, one orange, two teaspoons baking powder, one and one-half cups sugar, one-half teaspoon salt, one cup boiling water, one-quarter teaspoon bicarbonate of soda.

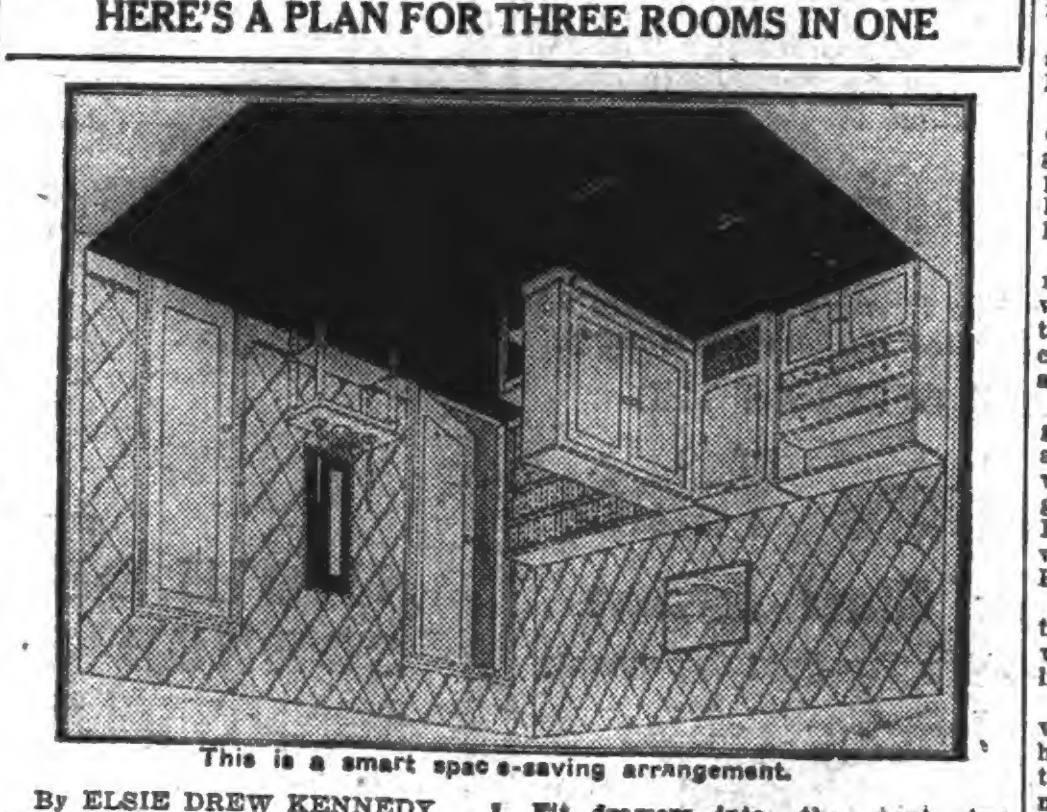
Cream the butter and sugar and add the beaten eggs. Have ready the grated rind of the orange and stir in one teaspoon of this. Sift the dry materials and measure and sift again, combining the baking powder, salt and flour. These are added to the first mixture. Have the soda dissolved in the water and add this with the orange juice alternately. Stir until very creamy. Bake in greased layer cake tins in a moderate over for about 20 minutes.

Prepare the filling as follows:

Two egg whites, grated orange peel of one orange, juice from two large oranges, two cups confectioners' sugar. Beat and add the orange juice. Then add the grated peel and spread between the layers and on top of the cake, taking care to have the filling quite thick.

Rose peach salad: This is a dessert salad that will fit into a pink luncheon. Scald and peel some white peaches and halve them crosswise, removing the stones. Boil two cups of sugar with one cup of water for three or four minutes. When slightly thickened add a few drops of red coloring or a few tiny red cinnamon candies. Drop the peaches into the sirup and simmer to a delicate rose color. Lift out carefully and cool. Place three peach halves on a slice of pineapple arranged on a bed of watercress. Fill the cavities in the peaches with whipped cream salad dressing colored a faint pink with some of the peach sirup and mixed with chopped nut meats. Serve with toasted crackers and Roquefort cheese.

HERE'S A PLAN FOR THREE ROOMS IN ONE



This is a smart spac e-saving arrangement.

By ELSIE DREW KENNEDY

In these days of efficiency the modern home-maker seeks to utilize every inch of space.

Young married couples are particularly fond of small quarters which reduce housework to a minimum. Smaller apartments are preferable, too, for older couples without children.

For this reason this plan to combine three rooms in one—library, dining room, and kitchen—is submitted.

The sketch shown is self-explanatory, and is easily worked out in any fair-sized room. A row of bookshelves, of four tiers, is built up to extend about half-way along one blank wall.

Place the refrigerator at the end of the bookcase, and build another section of shelves to fit between the refrigerator and the corner of the room.

It is wise to leave the top shelf of this case open, to provide working space for preparation of meals, and a place for the electric stove. A wall plug just above this shelf will furnish electricity for the stove.

Fit drawers into the next two shelves. These drawers may be used for silver, linen, or even dishes, as your needs dictate.

Then leave the space open beneath the drawers, and set in a pair of doors opening from the center. It is wise to cut these doors off short about four or six inches below the drawers, thus providing a sanitary and convenient storing place.

Next build a cabinet, of the same height as the shelves and refrigerator, and place this with one side against the end of the bookcase so that the cabinet forms a right angle with the bookcase on one side and the refrigerator on the other.

Thus the cabinet will extend into the room as a sort of partial wall, dividing the room into two sections, and serving to conceal the kitchen corner. By building shelves into the cabinet, and closing the front with double doors, you will have plenty of room for your dishes, cooking supplies, and so on. Besides, this closed cabinet will keep them free from dust.

PEARY'S WIDOW KNEW PERILS THAT TRAPPED ANDREE

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14—(AP)—Two Washington women read of the finding of Salomon August Andree's ice-encased body in the Arctic with more than usual interest.

Mrs. Robert T. Peary, widow of the discoverer of the north pole and her daughter, Mrs. Edward Stafford, still cherish the tattered flag which Admiral Peary took with him to the pole.

The two women have spent the summer at Peary's old home on Eagle Island, Maine.

In the library there, where Peary did much of his writing, are all the great explorer's Arctic books and trophies. Mother and daughter spent hours going over the old records and letters.

Mrs. Peary is not the type of woman Kipling had in mind when he wrote: "He travels the fastest who travels alone." She endured without complaining her husband's long hazardous absences.

With her own hands she sewed together the silken flag which he carried across the pole. Yet she never knew when the great white silence might grip and keep him as it did Andree. Braving the hardships of the frozen wastes she accompanied Admiral Peary on one of his expeditions.

Far from the comforts and protection of civilization her baby, Marie, was born. The Eskimos named the little one "Snow Baby."

She is now Mrs. Edward Stafford, wife of a Washington attorney and has the distinction of being born farther north than any other white woman.

Mrs. Stafford has done much exploring and adventuring herself. She plans for the near future a journey to Nicaragua. Here she will compare the first survey of the canal made by her father in 1886, with the new one laid out by the U. S. government.

Lustreless Satin

PARIS, Sept. 14—(AP)—Lustreless satin, is one of the wintertime innovations.

Paris calls the new stuff dull satin and uses it for wraps, tunic blouses on afternoon costumes and for coats with fur linings.

In white, dull satin makes stunning evening dresses, particularly effective as a background for fine jewels.

Second Honeymoon For Edd

CAPRI, Italy, Sept. 14—(AP)—Edda Mussolini and her husband, Count Galeazzo Ciano, began the "second honeymoon" habit early. Preparing to go to Shanghai, where the count has been named consul-general, they took time to return here to the scene of their wedding voyage.

TACT AND ACTIVITIES OF THOSE WHO INTEREST WASHINGTON

(Special to The Bulletin)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14—The senatorial social circle will welcome the coming of Mrs. Dwight Morrow into its midst, and feels there is no uncertainty about the election of Mr. Morrow when the November votes are counted. Mrs. Morrow made name and fame in her own right when she "took the stump" in her husband's behalf prior to the New Jersey primaries. She took quite a different tact from most women campaign speakers when pleading the cause of members of their family. She had learned, by listening in to cut and dried political talk, that women did not always pay strict attention, and that such a speech did not attract women nearly as much as a more personal touch would do. So instead of partisanship she talked of the London conference, where she spent much time with her husband; and told of the social events they attended, and other details which marked the lives of the women when in London with their commissioner husbands.

As the story runs, Mrs. Morrow told woman's clubs just how the king and queen look, how they received their American guests, how the rooms of the palace were furnished, what the queen said and what she wore. That gained their attention, and later she touched lightly on the politicl situation, expressed hope Mr. Morrow had the support of New Jersey in his senatorial candidacy, merely making a pleasant allusion to it, not demanding it. She mde no reference to controversial issues, smiled and thanked them for the opportunity she had been given by them and sat down. And they do say Mrs. Morrow's tact, and personal charm and discretion pulled in many votes for the senator-to-be.

Culinary Artists

We were commenting on Mrs. Brown, wife of the postmaster general, a week or two ago, so now it's only fair to say that Mr Brown is putting forth his claims as a cook. Mr. Brown, so it is said, says he can cook just as well, or better than Mrs. Brown can, only he confines his culinary skill to camp cooking. He says that he can "cook all sorts of dishes," but that when he takes a while chicken, a lot of butter and onions, and adds plenty of paprika and then cooks it to a turn, he sets before you a dish that fairly makes your mouth water. Postmaster General Brown used to go fishing often with President Coolidge. He admits the former president can fry bacon and eggs in a way peculiar to himself, and that they are what country folk call "tasty," but when it comes to chicken and coffee, neither the former president nor anybody else can beat the "Brown way" of doing it.

Works With Husband

Mrs. Henry Allen Cooper, wife of the representative from Wisconsin, and who holds the prestige of being the dean of the house, is one of the most frequent and delightful hostesses to be found in the official set. Moreover, Mrs. Cooper is devoted to her husband's political interests, and spends much time in his office at the capitol. It is the same office he has occupied between 20 and 30 years, and looks out on the rolling slopes of the capitol from the secluded corner of the buildings. It is a room selected by Mr. Cooper, on account of its delightful view and its quiet seclusion.

MODERN MOSLEM GETS BRIDE FREE, WOMEN DECREE

DAMASCUS, Syria, Sept. 14—(AP)—Neither the purchase price ordinarily paid by the Moslem bridegroom for the bride nor the dowry customary among some Christians is in future to be regarded as an obligatory adjunct to marriage, the Oriental Women's congress decreed during its four days sitting.

Moreover, the purchase price is to be reduced to the lowest possible limit, and both bride and bridegroom are to be at least 18 years of age prior to marriage.

Employment of children under 14 years of age is to be prohibited if the women have their way.

Though the delegates to the congress were distinctly modern in many ways, they demanded that divorce be made more difficult and that it be granted merely in exceptional cases and for weighty reasons.

This because in the east the woman is practically at the mercy of the man if he wants to get rid of her.

Other resolutions demand obligatory school attendance on the part of girls and boys and the provision of trade schools for both sexes.

Ohio Woman Glass Expert

ASHLAND, Ohio, Sept. 14—(AP)—The glittering glasses of colonial America hold no secrets from Mrs. Rhea Knittle, who has been chosen by Francis P. Garvan to help carry out the foundation for early Americana which he gave to Yale.

Real Lace for Travel Dress

PARIS, Sept. 14—(AP)—Hand made lace trims dresses of tweed in the winter collection of one dressmaker here.

Narrow hand made insertions outline neckline and waistline of a tweed travel dress. Many afternoon dresses of silk and some morning dresses of black wool crepe have pretentious collars and foresleeves of heavy hand made lace.

Lace collars follow the outlines of yokes with small fichu ends tying in front.

Hand-Knit Collars

PARIS, Sept. 14—(AP)—Hand-knit diagonal stripe collar and cuffs are used like fur on some of Schiaparelli's new winter coats and sport suits.

Light, gray and black, beige and brown and red and black are combinations the modernistic designer stresses.

Most of the collars are shawl form but a few are straight scarves.

Guiding Your Child

By Mrs. Agnes Lyne

Looking for Trouble

Joe got out of bed with the wrong foot. The day before he had been disobedient and difficult to manage, and he had spent the better part of the afternoon in solitary confinement in his room.

Now mother, looking at him from across the breakfast table, knew that unless she could be very skillful, today would be another day of distressing battles.

At that moment Joe, drinking his cocoa, spilled a liberal amount of it over the breakfast cloth and over his own freshly starched linen suit. He looked up defiantly.

"Well, I couldn't help it. I don't care anyway."

Mother made no comment.

A half hour later, playing with a china dog that someone had brought as a present to his little brother, he dropped it on the bathroom floor.

Mother, hearing the noise, came in to find him standing over the pieces. He met her questioning look with sullen, defiant eyes.

"That's too bad," she said evenly without allowing a hint of accusation to show in her voice. "I think you'd better sweep it up, don't you? There's a brush and dustpan in the closet."

Ten minutes later she came upstairs to find the debris swept up. Looking out of the window, she saw him playing peacefully in the back yard.

Joe certainly had started the day expecting trouble—courting it, in fact, but mother had refused to let him find it. She deliberately had missed her cues.

By the simple process of refusing to censure and of ignoring the all too obvious challenge in his manner, she had turned what might have been another day of punishments into a day of cheerful play.

WOMAN FORGOT IRON—PAYS FINE, DAMAGES

STOCKHOLM, Sept. 14—(AP)—Mrs. Lila Anna Maria Elvin forgot to turn off the electric iron and there is not much news in that, for many a table top has come to that end.

And her house burned down, a circumstance of interest only to Stockholm readers.

But the judge fined her $25 and ordered her to pay the insurance company $2,000 damages, and therein lies the moral.

The court ruled that forgetting to turn off the switch constituted "gross negligence"—the first decision of its kind in Sweden.

Brown Linen Hat

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14—(AP)—Mrs. Ralph Rex, president of the Women's Aero club of Cleveland, combines eggshell and brown into a smart street and travel costume.

The jersey dress is of eggshell, the jacket of brown while the brown linen, wide-brimmed hat is faced underneath with the lighter shade. Her shoes are of brown suede.

OBITUARY

James W. Ryan

After a long illness, the life of James W. Ryan, of No. 308 Central avenue, came to a close Sunday morning at 7:10 o'clock. Mr. Ryan was born in Norwich, the son of Nicholas and Margaret (Daly) Ryan. He was married July 15, 1914 to Catherine Barnett by Rev. J. H. Fitzmaurice in St. Mary's church. He was employed by the U. S. Finishing Co., in this city, and was an honest, conscientious and faithful worker.

Mr. Ryan is survived by his widow and two sons, James and John Ryan and one daughter, Mary Madeline Ryan, also one brother, William Ryan of this city. Mr. Ryan had many friends who extend their sympathy to the family in their great loss.

Blissville Saturday evening, after a two weeks' trip to Nassau, Bahama Islands, Havana, Cuba, and Miami, Florida, on the S. S. Munargo of the Munson line. Arriving in New York last Wednesday they spent a few days with Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Connell and family in that city before returning to their home here.

Mrs. Alfred Anderson, of North Third avenue, is spending this week at her summer home, Pine Tree cottage, at North Stonington, and has as her guest, Mrs. Rose Bentley, of Yantic.

Miss Helen C. Aberg, who has been spending the past two weeks with her father, Axel L. Aberg, of North Third avenue, has returned to Washington, D. C.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Laramie, of Plainfield, spent the week end with the former's brother-in-law and sisters, Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Smith and Miss Lillian Laramie, of North B street.

Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Clang and son, of Providence street, have returned from a motor trip to Canada.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph E. Heselton and children, Kendall and Revela, of North B street, have returned from a few days' stay at their camp at Old Killingly lake.

Charles Adams, Jr., of Danielson, spent the week end at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Adams and family of North Third avenue.

Accompanying a full page article on sword fishing at Block Island in a Hartford paper, are some pictures of Ernest Pollard, of South Second avenue; Albert J. Aberg, of North A street, and Wilfred Pollard, of Block Island, formerly of Taftville, on a fishing expedition a few weeks ago at the island.

Guests of Mr. and Mrs. Basil Horoszko and family, of South Third avenue, over the week end were Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Patrylo and Stephen Patrylo, of Voluntown.

John Szcyz, of Norwich avenue, has returned from Montreal, P. Q., where he has been visiting his nephew, Michael Szcyz.

Mr. and Mrs. William H. Whitehead, Miss Arline M. Whitehead and Mrs. Mary Whitehead, of Voluntown, were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Rennard and family, of Jewett City road.

CITIZENSHIP SCHOOL UNDER WOMEN VOTERS LEAGUE

What our schools can do in the prevention of juvenile delinquency is the subject of the two-day school of citizenship which the Connecticut League of Women Voters will hold at Connecticut College for Women in New London on October 21 and 22. Modern methods for the detection and early care of problem children will be presented by experts from Connecticut and elsewhere. The parts played by the school nurse, the visiting teacher, the special class teacher, and the child guidance clinic in assisting the maladjusted child will be considered in detail. Probation and the juvenile court will also have a part on the program.

The citizenship school will serve to launch the study of the prevention of juvenile delinquency by many of the local leagues of women voters in Connecticut and will pave the way for legislative action by the state league in behalf of a preventive program in public welfare.

Most sessions of the citizenship school will be held at Connecticut college, but there will be a dinner at the Hotel Mohican on Tuesday, October 21, and a luncheon at the state farm for women at Niantic on the following day.

Miss Emily H. Whitney, of New Haven, is general chairman of arrangements for the school. Members of her committee are Mrs. Harry B. Hunt of Niantic, Mrs. Edith Valet Cook of New Haven and Mrs. O. H. Schroeter of New London.

FLETCHER POST TO HAVE BROADCAST ON CONVENTION

Robert O. Fletcher post, No. 4, American Legion, has completed arrangements for an open house and smoker to be held at the post rooms in the Thayer building Thursday evening, Sept. 18, to which all ex-service men are invited. Through the courtesy of the Hanover-Curland Co. a Victor radio is to be installed for the evening to enable those present to listen in on one of the greatest broadcasts and hook ups in radio history. This broadcast is made possible by the co-operation of the National Broadcasting Co. and the American Legion national convention committee. They will put on the air a fine and diversified program picked up from some of the principal cities of the United States along with complete details of the proposed plans to be put into effect to make the coming national convention of the American Legion to be held in Boston, October 6 to 9 the greatest convention ever held. The broadcast will last for an hour and a half and will be the occasion of special convention meetings in practically the entire country wherever there is a Legion post. Owing to this meeting being Thursday night, the regular post meeting scheduled to be held Friday night will be cancelled. A large crowd is expected and the committee in charge promise an evening of real entertainment. Carl O. Johnson and Warren E. Wilcox are the committee in charge.

SENATOR BINGHAM RE-ELECTED SALEM LIBRARY PRESIDENT

At the recent annual meeting of the trustees of Salem library, which was held in the library, those attending were the president, Senator Hiram Bingham, Lieut.-Gov. E. E. Rogers, Prof. E. W. Brown, Prof. H. W. Foote, James Lane, Alfred M. Bingham and John A. Young. The selectman of the town of Salem and F. C. Rawolle were the only members present.

Senator Bingham was re-elected president of the association; Lieut.-Gov. E. E. Rogers, treasurer and John A. Young, secretary. The association by resolution expressed its obligation to the architects for their valuable services in building the library for which absolutely no charge was made. The trustees feel greatly in debt to the archetects not only for their gratuitous service but for their very beautiful design along the lines of which the building was erected. A vote of appreciation was expressed to the junior auxiliary for the splendid service which it rendered during the year.

Ever since the library was founded there has always been some one to look after its immediate needs, giving much time and valuable service for which no charge was ever made. For this contribution to the library since its foundation the trustees took recognition in the form of a vote of appreciation to James Lane who has always been so willing to give of his time and skill to the service of the library.

The report of the librarian showed a slight increase in the circulation of books over that of last year. There was also during the year a number of valuable donations made by Senator Bingham and several friends of the institution. Upon vote of the trustees the personnel of the library committee was continued as before with the addition of Mrs. Louise Chapman.

The meeting was then adjourned to the summer home of Senator Bingham where a delicious luncheon was served with the senator acting as a very gracious host during the luncheon. The meeting was then adjourned.

SMALL BOY AT POQUETANUCK IS FATALLY INJURED BY BASEBALL

While engaged in a game of pitch and catch with a baseball at Poquetanuck, at 4.30 Sunday afternoon, Arthur J. Hamel, 8, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Hamel, was struck in the chest with the ball and died almost instantly of cardiac syncope, or paralysis of the nerves of the heart.

The little boy was passing the ball back and forth with William Fuller, 11, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. Morgan Fuller, in the road in front of the Fuller home. When he failed to catch one of the thrown balls, he was hit in the chest and dropped to the ground unconscious. Mr. Fuller took the little boy to the Hamel home in his automobile and Dr. N. B. Lewis was called, but the child was dead when the doctor arrived and the doctor's opinion was that death had followed very shortly after the blow from the baseball, although there was no mark to show on the body.

The father of the little boy plays first base for the Thermos team of the city twilight league and also first for the Norwich state hospital team.

There are two other children in the family, a sister, Clare, who is older than Arthur, and a baby, Frances. Friends of the parents expressed their deep sympathy with the family to which such a sad and sudden bereavement had come.

BAPTISTS OF COUNTY TO MEET IN LEBANON

The 113th anniversary of the New London Baptist association will be held with the Baptist church at Lebanon, Tuesday. Rev. Herbert B. Hutchins, pastor of the Second Baptist church, Waterford, will act as moderator. Following the call to order at 10.30 o'clock, the devotional service will be led by Rev. R. W. Porter, pastor of the Huntington Street church.

The association sermon will be preached by Rev. J. J. Allen of the First Baptist church of New London. The women's hour will be presided over by Mrs. R. W. Ferguson and will include an address by Rev. E. R. Brakeman of East China. The prohibition address will be given at 3 o'clock by Gustave Bochmen.

The business session at 4 o'clock will be followed by greetings from the state officers. Rev. Raymond J. Bates, pastor at Montville, will open the evening session at 7 o'clock and Rev. J. Quinter Miller, secretary Connecticut Council of Religious Education, will bring the address. The Baptist churches of New London will be represented by full quota of delegates.

FOURTH DEGREE CLAMBAKE WITH 200 ATTENDING

The annual clambake of Rev. Daniel Mullen Assembly, Fourth degree, K. of C., was held Sunday at Thames tavern, Gales Ferry, with 200 members and friends in attendance. A delicious clam chowder was served at noon and at 5 o'clock a real Rocky Point clambake was served as only Jim Hayes can put it on. There was plenty of athletic activities during the day with most of the members participating. The sack race was won by Neil Murphy; second, Bill Shannon; third, C. Leone; potato race, won by Bill Shannon; second, Neol Murphy; third, Jack Lynch; three-legged race won by Frank O'Connell and Charles Leone; 100 yard dash won by Neil Murphy; second, C. Ludlow; third, Charles O'Connell. The married men proved to be the best athletes in the tug of war and baseball, by winning both of these events. The winning tug of war team with Neil Crowley, captain, Jerry Sweeney, John Shea, Walter Corrigan, Richard Marks and Chas. Reardon, won by two feet over the bachelors, with R. Marks, Jr., captain, Neil Murphy, Bill Shannon, Jim Kilkenny and John Fitzgerald.

In the baseball game the benedicts easily outclassed the single men and won by the score of 13-5. The battery for the benedicts was Shea and McManus and for the bachelors, Marks, Shannon, Murphy and Lynch. Marks, the starting pitcher, was forced to retire in the first inning after seven runs had been scored on a barrage of hits. Shannon took up the burden, but was relieved by Murphy, who finished the game. The hitting of John Hourigan of Jewett City, and fielding of Bill Bobsein, was phenomenal. The umpires were R. J. Marks and William J Fitzgerald. The committee in charge was Walter Corrigan, chairman, John Lyston, Charles Riordan, John C. Donovan, James Kilkenny and John W Shea, Jr.

MINOR DEATH CAUSED BY BRAIN INFLAMMATION

The death of Edward Minor, of Amston, was caused by long standing inflammation of the brain and the covering of the brain, rather than from the injuries he received when he fell from a silo at Colchester last Tuesday, it was learned Sunday. Below is the report of a post mortem at the W. W Backus hospital where Mr. Minor died Thursday morning.

Mr. Minor was doing his daily work while painting a silo and fell and injured his head. He was brought unconscious to the W. W. Backus hospital where he died. Before death a clinical diagnosis of chronic Bright's disease and acute head injury were given.

"On post mortem it is found the entire condition and death were due to long standing inflammation involving a large area of the brain and membrane covering the brain and that the fall was most likely the result of the condition present which had suddenly brought its force to bear on the functioning of the nervous system."

CALL IS ISSUED FOR CITY PROBATE CONVENTION

Next Saturday will occur the republican convention of the Norwich probate district at which time it is expected that Judge Nelson J. Ayling will be nominated for re-election to the office of probate judge which he has held for 25 years. The convention will be held at one o'clock at the local court house. Attorney Edmund W. Perkins, chairman of the Norwich probate committee, issued the call for the convention. The probate district includes the towns of Norwich, Franklin, Griswold, Lisbon, Preston, Sprague and Voluntown.

Thieves Stole Automatic Saw

The state police are looking for thieves who last Thursday night stole an automatic saw, value $300, from the tool shed owned by Contractor Albert Wagner of No. 36 Harland road. The machine was unscrewed from a wooden base. Nothing else in the shed was disturbed.

Fined In City Court.

In the city court Saturday morning Michael Stevens was fined $10 and costs on a charge of driving a motor vehicle not equipped with number plates. The court nolled a charge of driving an unregistered machine when it was learned that the machine does not belong to the accused, who was arrested last Thursday by Officer Clifford Crary.

Baptist Association Meeting.

It was announced at the Central Baptist church Sunday evening that the New London association meeting will be held at Lebanon on Tuesday of this week rather than on Wednesday as was announ[illegible] the church calendar.

RHODE ISLAND REDS LEADING AT STORRS

The hens in the Storrs contest are doing their stuff in satisfactory fashion to both the management and the contestants. They laid last week a total of 3,339 eggs or a yield of 47.7 per cent. for the 45th week. This is 223 eggs less than the previous week but 173 more than for the corresponding period last year.

In the matter of total production from last November to date, there has been a gain of one egg per bird during the past fortnight. This means that each bird has averaged to lay a little over 190 eggs as compared with 188.6 eggs per hen for the first 45 weeks in the preceding contest.

In the 45th week Homestead Farms at Newtown, Conn., set the pace when their pen of Reds came through with 58 eggs. Edward N. Larrabee of Peterboro, N. H., with a pen of the same breed was second in line with a total of 56 eggs. Barred Rocks entered by R. C. Cobb of Littleton, Mass., made third place with a lay of 54 eggs.

The leading pens to date in each of the principal varieties are as follows:

White Wyandottes — The Locusts, West Cornwall, Conn. 2169. Jack Wrennal, Barton, Nr. Preston, Eng., 2017.

Barred Rocks—R. C. Cobb, Littleton, Mass., 2362. Pratt Experiment Farm, Morton, Pa., 2265. Spring Brook P. Fm. So. Wethersfield, Ct., 2129. R. Walter Bishop, Guilford, Conn., 2129.

White Rocks—E. H. Rucker, Ottumwa, Iowa, 2042. Adam F. Poltl, Hartford, Wis., 1822. Davidson Bros., Upton, Mass., 1778.

Rhode Island Reds—Edw. N. Larrabee, Petersboro, N. H., 2498. F. S. Chapin, Longmeadow, Mass., 2333. Homestead Farms, Newtown, Conn., 2314. F. S. Chapin, Longmeadow, Mass., 2260.

LAFAYETTE MAIN SHOWS HIS CANNING SKILL

When Mrs. Lafayette F. Main and her son, George Henry Pratt Main, returned to her home in North Stonington recently after a business trip to Westerly, she had a surprise awaiting her when she found that her husband had purchased the jars and had put up two bushels of nice Bartlett pears. But Mr. Main didn't look upon that as much of a day's work for he has made as many as 300 mince pies in a day, the kind that mother used to make, but very scarce now. Main is one of the kind who does not believe in taking six days to do what can be done in one.

A FINE COMPLIMENT IS IMPLIED TO H. W. KENT

It is interesting to note that in a recent issue of the Saturday Review of Literature there was the following paragraph:

The annual almanac of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York city, "pritned at the Museum Press for the members of the corporation"—and, happily, their friends—contains reproductions of old pictures of the museum and its activities, as well as historical notes concerning museums of all sorts, such as the opening of the Muse de Cluny, the burning of Barnum's Museum, etc. The almanac shows the discriminating handiwork of the much loved and respected secretary of the museum.

So well known is his ability and so widely appreciated is his work that it was not even necessary for the reviewer to designate this secretary—who is Henry W. Kent, former curator of Slater museum, Norwich, who still maintains his summer residence at Norwich Town.

FRANKLIN

GILBERT D. LAMB'S NIECE ENTERTAINS QUOTA CLUB

Springfield, Mass., papers have had much to say about a recent visit to Franklin of the Quota club, of that city, as guests Sunday, the 7th, of a member of the club, Miss Claire Lamb Parker, of Springfield and New London. The club came to Beech Spring Farm, the beautiful country estate of Attorney Gilbert Dimock Lamb, of New York city, who, in his entertainment of the 30 or more present spoke of his travels abroad, stating that he had gained the idea of beautifying this property, originally his father's farm, while he was near Geneva and had seen the gardens of Voltaire. The address and entertainment followed a jolly corn roast at the fireplace on the shore of the lake. The company crossed the rustic bridge to an island in the lake, to listen to pleasing folk songs by Miss Ursula Toomey, of Springfield, solos by Miss Parker's sister, Mrs. Edward P. Calvert, of Groton, and duets by Mrs. Robert Wood and her sister, Mr. and Mrs. Wood having a summer place at Windham, Conn. Mr. Lamb recited a number of famous poems and with his niece, Miss Parker, gave a scene from "Romeo and Juliet." The day was ideal for such an outing and the beautiful country home developed by Mr. Lamb was enthusiastically admired by his delighted guests.

Collision On Military Highway.

Late Sunday afternoon on the Military highway opposite the home of Billings F. S. Crandall, there was a collision between a Packard car driven by Mrs. Minnie F. Diederich of 1025 Linden avenue, Ridgefield, N. J., and a Chevrolet machine owned by Joseph C. Williams, Jr., of Ledyard, and driven by his son, Harry J. Williams.

The New Jersey machine received the greatest amount of damage, but there were no personal injuries. Those interested communicated with the state police barracks and Officer Dygert was the investigating officer in the case.

SUFFERS INTERNAL INJURIES IN AUTOMOBILE CRASH

Jack Murphy of 170 Broadway, driving a coupe belonging to Daniel Diffley of Kinney avenue and accompanied also by James D. Larochelle of the marine barracks, Groton, suffered serious internal injuries in an accident shortly after 1 o'clock Sunday morning on the Military highway, but the other men sustained only minor injuries.

The machine was proceeding towards the submarine base at the time, it was reported, and when nearing Breakwater the car left the road, struck a fence at a culvert, shearing off a ten-inch post, and going on for about 76 feet over rocks until it came to a stop headed back towards this city.

Murphy was taken to the hospital at the submarine base and remains there a patient. The automobile was practically a complete wreck. State Trooper Dygert from the barracks at Groton made an investigation of the accident.

CIRCUS FANS LEARN OF DEATH OF FRED WARRELL

Walter M. Buckingham, secretary of the Circus Fans association, was informed by telegram on Saturday that Fred Warrell, assistant manager of the Sells Floto circus, had died on the show en route from Charlotte to Winston Salem, N. C., on Saturday, Sept. 13. Mr. Warrell was well known to the circus people who make their homes in Norwich, and they will be sorry to hear of his death. The funeral will be held in South Bend, Ind., on Tuesday.

NATION AND STATE SAFE IN THE HANDS OF REPUBLICANS

Senator Walcott, in Keynote Speech at the Republican State Convention, Declared That the G. O. P. Could Be Trusted to Deal With All Issues, Including the "Intolerable" Conditions Developed Under the 18th Amendment—Stated That if We Are Again to Head Toward Temperance and Regain Respect for Law Drastic Action is Necessary—Praised the Republican State Organization and Gov. Trumbull—Rogers Assured of the Gubernatorial Nomination.

HARTFORD, Sept. 15—(AP)—The keynote of the republican campaign in Connecticut this fall was given by U. S. Senator Frederic C. Walcott, tonight, to delegates in convention who, tomorrow, will nominate a state ticket and adopt a platform.

His address praised the achievements of the republican administration in nation and state, and declared that while conditions under the 18th amendment were "intolerable" the administration could be trusted "to get at the bottom of this desperately serious problem as quickly as possible" with "the unvarnished facts" from the crime commission in hand. He said: "We should know in a comparatively short time whether the control of intoxicants should be left with the federal government, or the states, whether the 18th amendment should be retained, or repealed, or modified to make it permissive; whether the Volstead act should remain as it is or be modified, whether the federal government should undertake a dispensary system, or leave the entire problem to the states to solve."

Senator Walcott said that all we know to day is "that the present situation is intolerable, and that if we are to head again toward temperance and regain the respect for the law of the land, drastic action is necessary. The republican party is already pledged to remedy the situation, and I feel that we can trust the administration at Washington to effect the desired results as promptly as possible after determining the facts."

The interest of delegates particularly was in two portions of Senator Walcott's keynote address, his reference to the prohibition matter and his discussion of what the democratic keynoter, Homer S. Cummings, the democratic nominee for governor, Prof. Wilbur L. Cross, and the party platform said about "one man power" in Connecticut last week. The senator is a close personal friend of President Hoover, and was a co-worker of his during the war.

The "one man power" reference of the democrats, as well as the pre-convention campaign of Prof. Albert Levitt, who sought an independent nomination for governor, were aimed at republican State Chairman J. Henry Roraback who is also national committeeman, and head of the largest power corporation in Connecticut. Senator Walcott praised the state committe for "its unselfish devotion in building up an organization whose chief aim has been Connecticut's good." He also said a debt of gratitude was owed Gov. John H. Trumbull for his interest and skill in administering the affairs of the state for the past six years.

ROGERS WILL HEAD TICKET AS GUBERNATORIAL NOMINEE

FOOD GUARD ARMORY, Hartford, Sept. 16—(AP)—With the republican keynot address delivered by U. S. Senator Frederic C. Walcott tonight, the republican state convention adjourned overnight with its state ticket lined up for nomination tomorrow but everyone at sea as to the prohibition plank in the platform. The matter was declared by members of the resolutions committee to be "wide open." A long session of the committee seemed impending. The main structure of the platform was expected to follow the tenor of Senator Walcott's speech praise for the national and state administrations in their achievements.

The resolutions committee was made up of extreme and moderate "wets," and the struggle appeared to be between those who wanted a repeal in the declaration and those who desired an endorsement of the attitude of teh national administration with expression of belief that remedy would be found after the crime commission had reported. The ticket to be named will be:

For governor, Ernest E. Rogers, of New London.

For lieutenant governor, Samuel R. Spencer, of Suffield.

For secretary of state, William L. Higgins, of Coventry.

For treasurer, Roy C. Wilcox, of Meriden.

For comptroller, Frederick M. Salmon, of Westport.

For attorney General, Warren B. Burrows, Groton.

SKETCHES OF SCENES AT REP. STATE CONVENTION

FOOT GUARD ARMORY, Hartford, Sept. 16—(AP)—This place was gay with flags and bunting tonight as it filled up with delegates for the republican state convention.

The grand old man of the republican party in Connecticut, "Uncle" Marcus S. Holcomb, World war governor, had a seat on the platform beside State Chairman J. Henry Roraback.

The gallery was filled with spectators, and few seats on the floor were empty when the convention opened. Lieut Gov. Rogers sat with the New London delegation in the front row directly in front of the speakers' stand. Gov. Trumbull sat with the Hartford delegation. Among those on the platform were Miss Katherine Byrne, of Putnam, national vice-committeewoman and Motor Vehicle Commissioner Stoeckel.

In seats of delegates were handbills addressed to republican voters, asking them to nominate Albert Levitt for governor and "defeat the Roraback machine." W. J. Pape, of Waterbury, who was willing to take a nomination for comptroller, on a Levitt ticket was in the gallery.

The gatherings in hotel lobbies prior to the session were like legislative reunions. The number of "old timers" who were hand shaking was larger than usual.

It had become known early that attorney generalship's nomination was to go to Federal Judge Warren B. Burrows, of Groton, as F. W. Cole, of Hartford, did not want the place. It was understood that Judge Burrows was willing to take the place if it were offered to him by the convention. He was appointed to the United States district court last year. He served on the judiciary committee of the last general assembly and is an experienced legislator. One report, unconfirmed, was that the next session may take the attorney general's office out of the list of elective state officers.

High tribute to "loyal" republicans for their services in successful party work, was paid by Chairman Roraback in opening. A spontaneous ovation greeted the state leader as he appeared on the platform. The delegates cheered his reference to his 20 years charmanship of the state committee.

With characteristic brevity, Mr. Roraback introduced Senator Walcott, the keynote speaker, as "one we all know, one who has gone into the broader fields of Washington."

Senator Walcott's first reference in his prepared address to prohibition brought a round of applause. When he said Connecticut has been in no wise responsible for the 18th amendment and its enforcement act, there was another generous burst of hand clapping, amusingly enough, the delegates applauded a third time when the senator asserted that "bootlegging is now the fourth largest industry."

Resolutions were adopted to effect temporary organization with Clarence G. Willard as secretary, the resolution being offered by Mayor Lee Robbins, of Norwich. After announcing places for committee meetings, adjournment was taken, the session having lasted 55 minutes.

SUBJECTS PLACED BEFORE RESOLUTIONS COMMITTEE

HARTFORD Sept. 16.— (AP)— The subjects of prohibition, old age pensions, improved rural roads, jury service for women and Albert Levitt's platform of reform, were placed before the resolutions committee of the republican party tonight for possible planks in its platform.

After a brief open hearing, the committee retired into executive session to whip the document into shape for presentation and adoption at the convention tomorrow. A controversy over prohibition was in prospect, and the indications were that the committee would not reach an accord on all planks until a late hour.

Mr. Levitt, an independent candidate for the republican nomination for governor, made a personal appearance before the committee to urge adoption of the platform on which he has campaigned.

This platform embraces honest enforcement of all laws; adequate regulation of public utilities; an investigation and re-organization of the legislation; equal application of the taxing laws, and better provision for care of war veterans and their dependents.

The committee had before it a resolution calling for repeal of the 18th amendment and the state enforcement act; another urging the convention to take no action toward repeal and a third declaring for a referendum at the next national election.

The proposal for repeal was offered by Charles J. Moore, president of the state federation of labor, which offered a similar resolution at the democratic convention last week.

Miss Marjorie Cheney, of Manchester, a member of the state house of representatives, asked that the committee insert a repeal plank, and expressed her willingness to write a resolution if none others were presented.

In opposition to these resolutions was one which asked the republican party to ignore the prohibition question in its platform. It was presented on behalf of eleven Connecticut temperance societies by E. Sidney Berry, of Hartford.

Asserting that repeal of the state enforcement act would leave the state and cities "powerless" to curb the liquor traffic, the resolution urged "the republican party of Connecticut to take no action toward repeal of the state enforcement act or toward repeal of the eighteenth amendment."

The resolution calling for a referendum at the next national election was presented by A. Lynn Weatherhead of Willimantic.

Mayor Walter A. Batterson, of Hartford, offered two resolutions. One was in behalf of the rural roads association, asking for a substantial appropriation for road improvement. The other was in behalf of the Hartford Tubercular and Public Health association, requesting an additional 300 beds for tuberculosis patients in the state sanatoria.

The state federation of labor's old age pension proposal was also introduced by its president, Mr. Moore.

Resolutions for jury service for women, state aid in education, shorter hours of labor for women in industry and for a study of preventive methods to "stem the tide of dependents, defectives and delinquents coming into our state institutions" were presented by representatives of the League of Women Voters.

Committed Suicide On Deck Of U. S. Cruiser

Lieut. Woodward Phelps, Eldest Son of Rear Admiral Phelps, Shot Himself

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—(AP)—Lieutenant Woodward Phelps, eldest son of Rear Admiral William Woodward Phelps, was found dead last night from a self-inflicted bullet wound on the deck of the cruiser Southampton in dry dock at the Brooklyn navy yard. Today, shortly after his death became publicly known, a naval board of inquiry reported that he committed suicide.

The lieutenant's wife and father, who came to New York after being informed of his death, were almost prostrated by grief. Mrs. Phelps said she could ascribe no motive for her husband's act.

A newspaper clipping found beside the body contained an account of the suicide in Southampton, England, three days ago of Lieutenant Commander Benjamin F. Staud, a close friend and former shipmate of Phelps. Officers at the navy yard entertained the possibility Phelps might have brooded over the suicide of his friend.

It was recalled that Lieutenant, then ensign, Phelps was in command of a landing party from the United States gunboat Noa at Nanking during the Chinese disturbances about two years ago. Phelps escorted a group of refugees from a compound to the ship, while Staud, aboard the ship, was in command of the guns that covered the retreat of Phelps' party. Both were later commended for bravery in action.

Admiral Phelps is commandant of the United States navy yard at Portsmouth, N. H. He was formerly a member of the naval board.

Lieutenant Phelps was 29. He was graduated from the Naval academy in 1924 and was immediately assigned to sea duty. He saw service with the U. S. S. Preston and Noa during the Chinese disturbance. In the spring of 1929 he married Miss Janet Bell Whitall, of Baltimore, who, with a son, Woodward, Jr., survives him. They live in Boston.

Mrs. Phelps and Admiral Phelps will leave tomorrow morning with the body for Annapolis. Funeral services will be held in the chapel of the United States Naval academy and interment will be in the academy cemetery.

KNIGHT SUCCEEDS MORAN AS HEAD OF S. N. E. TEL. CO.

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 15.—(AP)—Harry C. Knight today was elected president of the Southern New England Telephone Co., at a meeting of the company's board of directors. He replaces James T. Moran, who retired from the presidency after 46 years of service with the company, the last 13 of which he held the presidency. Upon his retirement, in accordance with the company's 65-year-old rule, Mr. Moran was elected chairman of the board.

The post of vice-president and general manager, held by Mr. Knight since 1917, was filled by the promotion of Allerton E. Brooks from chief engineer. E. L. Simmonds, general superintendent of plants, was elected vice-president in charge of public and personal relations.

Other promotions were: Elmer P. Bradley, appointed general plant manager; Robert S. Brust, superintendent of construction; G. S. Corves, plant engineer; James Mck. Foley, superintendent of buildings, supplies and motor equipment; Clayton A. Shores, aerial construction supervisor; Robert S. Judd, chief engineer; Ernest A. Johnson, traffic engineer; Edward R. DeJon, secretary of the benefit plan committee, and Charles W. Bowman, employment supervisor.

AMERICAN GIRL TWINS GIVE UP CHANNEL SWIM

DOVER, Eng., Sept. 15.— (AP) — Berenice and Phyllis Zittenfeld, the American girl swimmer twins, failed tonight in their attempt to swim the English channel, after nearly reaching the French coast.

Coldness of the channel water, which a sharp wind made increasingly rougher, obliged the girls to abandon their swim within four or five miles of Cape Gris Nez. They climbed into their accompanying motorboat at 7:22 p. m., and returned to Dover.

The twins will not try the channel swim again. Their mother, who was aboard the motorboat all during the trip, said they were going back to America without another attempt.

"We are through with the channel now and will not try again. We are going home to America. I am very proud of the twins indeed. The way the stuck at it amazed me.

"They never made a complaint or murmur the whole of the time, and when I insisted upon their coming out of the water they begged me to let them go on."

RESOLUTIONS COMMITTEE FAVORS "VERY WET" PLANK

HARTFORD, Sept. 16.— (AP)— The resolutions committee, after a hectic two-hour executive session which adjourned at 1 o'clock this morning, left to a sub-committee of which Mayor Batterson is the chairman, the task of drafting a prohibition plank which will call for the repeal of the eighteenth amendment. The resolutions committee will reconvene at 9 o'clock this morning to hear the report of the sub-committee.

Starting with a prohibition plank which was described as being "wetter" than the stand taken by Senator Walcott in his "keynote" speech, the wet forces in the committee led by Mayor Batterson, of Hartford and Mayor Quigley, of New Britain, insisted upon a repeal declaration. On the final vote, for a proposition declaring that the repeal of the amendment offers the best remedy for the evils arising from prohibition, it was reported that only John S. Thornhill, of Brookfield, voted in the negative.

Officially, nothing was announced concerning the deliberations of the resolutions committee beyond the statement of ex-Senator Daniel M. Cronin, of New London, chairman of the committee, that the entire committee had favored a "very wet" plank, and that nothing finally had been settled.

Make-Up Of German Government Dubious

[illegible] Combinations Might Necessitate Radical Change in Foreign Policy.

BERLIN, Sept. 15.—(AP)—Now that more than 34,000,000 German voters have endowed 576 fellow citizens with reichstag mandates, it is up to somebody to sift this motley array of widely divergent groups in such a manner as to construct a workable government.

That this will be no easy task, since 16 parties landed seats and in view of the extraordinary gains made by the two revolutionary parties, the German fascists and the communists, is generally conceded.

As often before, Chancellor Heinrich Bruening's centrist party is in the most pivotal position. Upon Bruening and his party, who have been returned to the principal legislative house 68 strong—or eight more than in the previous reichstag, will largely depend which of two possibilities presenting themselves shall be adopted.

One obvious line-up is to expand the present coalition to include the socialists—although this likely would mean the loss of the eighteen from the Farmers' league and the five conservatives—so that the coalition would be composed of 143 socialists, 68 centrists, 30 peoples' party, 23 economic, 20 state party and 19 Bavarians, or 303 out of the total of 576.

This calculation was somewhat disturbed today, however, by the economic party's pronouncement that since the socialists hitherto had opposed all the economic group's financial demands the latter would prefer to enter a coalition with the fascists.

If this is adhered to Bruening will have a difficult situation, for his only possibility will be block of the right parties composed of 107 fascists, 41 German nations, 18 Farmers' league, 5 conservatives, 30 peoples, 68 centrists, 19 Bavarians, 3 Landbund and 23 economic, a total of 314 out of 576.

Such a combination not only would be resented by the labor wing of the centrists but would necessitate a radical change in the foreign policy laid down by the late Dr. Gustav Stresemann -- that of conciliation. Whether the peoples' party, although preferring a bourgeois coalition to one with the socialists, would cooperate under such conditions and thereby disown its dead leader, Stresemann, is doubtful.

Hence the question of the complexion of a future government continues anybody's guess, but in any case Chancellor Bruening seems determined to continue in office.

FALL FROM HORSEBACK FATAL TO CAPT. BOY-ED

HAMBURG, Germany, Sept. 15.—(AP)—Captain Karl Boy-Ed, 58, German propagandist and diplomat whom the United States in 1915 deported as an undesirable alien, is dead at his estate near here, after a fall off a horse.

Captain Boy-Ed, whose wife was Miss Virginia Backay-Smith, daughter of a Pennsylvania bishop, was crushed under his fallen mount a short distance from his country home on Saturday morning. He was rushed to a Hamburg hospital for surgical attention but died before efforts could be made to relieve the effects of fractures and internal injuries.

Captain Boy-Ed, of whom little has been heard in recent years, was one of the outstanding German figures at Washington, with the kaiser's ambassador, Count Von Bernstorff, before entry of the United States into the World war. Long an authorized propagandist, his activities at the German embassy in behalf of his government, linking him with fraudulent passports, sabotage in American munitions factories and other banned operations, finally resulted in December, 1915, in his recall at the request of the American state department.

ACTOR MILTON SILLS DIES OF HEART DISEASE

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 15.—(AP) — Milton Sills, 48, for many years one of the best known actors in motion pictures, fell dead from a heart attack while playing tennis with his wife and son at their suburban home tonight.

HARRISON, Ark., Sept. 15.—(AP)—Mrs. Sam Farmer, 18, died today and five others, including her husband, are seriously ill after drinking spring water believed to have been poisoned from a nearby lead mine near Low Gap in Newton county.

Although physicians had not definitely traced the illness to poisoning of the spring water by lead deposits from the mine they said indications were this was the cause.

YACHT ENTERPRISE AGAIN OUTSAILS THE SHAMROCK V

Defender Outstripped the American Cup Challenger by a Margin of Almost Ten Minutes in the Second Race—The Enterprise Appears to be the Better Boat, Whatever the Weather—The Race Started in a Light Mist and Ended in a Dense Haze, But For Most of the Way the Sun Was Shining and a Ten Knot Breeze Blowing—Challenger is to Undergo Changes for Race Today.

U. S. S. KANE, On America's Cup Course, Sept. 15.—(By radio to The Associated Press)—The Enterprise, a slim white ghost in billowing robes, today proved her superiority for the second time over Sir Thomas Lipton's Shamrock V, and won the second race for the America's cup by a margin of almost ten minutes.

First away from the starting line, the American defender led at every marker, gradually increasing her margin until at the finish she was almost three miles in the lead.

Commodore Harold S. Vanderbilt, amateur skipper of the winning boat, outmaneuvered the veteran Ned Heard, at the helm of the British boat, at almost every phase of sailing and his fast stepping professional crew made the work of the British tars seem clumsy in comparison.

The Enterprise took a lead that in the first 15 minutes enabled her to cross the bow of the challenger and on the long beat to windward to the first turning marker, she stayed in the strategic position to windward, meeting every tack of the Shamrock with a swifter, more cleanly executed countering move.

The chart of the race showed Enterprise leading by six minutes, 50 seconds, at the first turn, by nine minutes, ten seconds at the 20-mile mark and by nine minutes, 49 seconds at the finish.

It was only on the last leg, a ten-mile reach, that Shamrock held her own with the Enterprise, and both boats were merely running out the race by then, the green-hulled challenger so far behind that the cause was hopeless.

Captain Heard doused his spinnaker while still over two miles away from the finish line, and just coasted in on his stay sails and ballooner.

The Enterprise also pulled in her big wing several hundred yards before the finish.

The race started in a light mist and ended in a dense haze but for the most of the way there was a bright sun shining and a ten knot breeze blowing.

The spectator fleet was much smaller than that which witnessed Saturday's race, when Enterprise slipped through the fog to lead Shamrock across the line by almost three minutes, but there still were enough out today to keep the patrol boats busy.

The naval armada made a beautiful spectacle as it stretched out on either side of the two racing craft, or sped ahead to group around the turns and at the finish line.

Whatever the weather it seems that Enterprise is a better boat, and apparently better handled. With the wind for or against it, on a reach or on a tack, she has outsailed the Shamrock in winds ranging from a faint breeze of not more than four knots to a light wind of ten or 11 and seems to have the remaining two races at her mercy.

CHALLENGER TO UNDERGO CHANGES FOR TODAY'S RACE

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 15.—(AP)—Shamrock V, which sailed today's losing race with approximately 2,000 pounds of lead ballast removed, will undergo further changes over night before starting the third race tomorrow, Sir Thomas Lipton announced.

Although Charles E. Nicholson, designer of the challenger, said this morning that no substantial changes had been made since the Shamrock's first race with the Enterprise Saturday, it developed that almost 2,000 pounds of lead had been removed from the racer's ballast. The object was to lighten the sloop forward in the hope that the Shamrock would point better in the light airs predominating here.

Sir Thomas Disappointed

Sir Thomas, deeply disappointed in the showing of his vessel, said that something more must be done to speed up the Shamrock. For a time technical minds behind the challenger debated the advisability of adding rather than removing weight, and this probably will be done tonight.

The Shamrock was measured again early this morning by Professor Webb of Columbia university, to determine officially whether the change in ballast had altered the Shamrock's water line sufficiently to bar her from the America's cup competition. The yacht was found still to conform with all requirements.

"I'm terribly disappointed." Sir Thomas said after his pride had crossed the line today nearly ten minutes behind the defending Enterprise "This won't happen again, though. I'm sure it will do better. The race isn't over yet.

"The Shamrock is not sailing as she did in England. She seems dead under the sails. Something very unusual has happened. The trip over may have caused the change. We shall try to find the trouble.

"The weather has been fair for my boat and I could not ask for better conditions. Heavier winds would be no help."

CHARGES OF EXTORTION BY THREATS OF MURDER

CHICAGO, Sept. 15—(AP)—A true bill charging extortion by threats of murder was reported voted late today by the grand jury, naming three men accused of demanding $10,000 or the life of Representative Oscar De Priest, Negro congressman of the first Illinois district.

Julius Link, minor political figure of De Priest's bailiwick, Solly Lason, a milk truck driver, and Joseph Goldstein were the three reported accused.

Link and Lason were in custody, Goldstein was sought, and Aaron Mosheik, first accused of plotting the extortion attempt, was released after a brief hearing today. He came to the state attorney's office voluntarily and satisfied them he was not connected with the alleged conspiracy.

Congressman De Priest and two other witnesses were taken before the grand jury, which has already begun an investigation into the preying of racketeers upon labor and business groups in Cook county. Shortly after they testified the report was circulated that indictments would be returned.

WARNS LABOR UNIONS AGAINST RACKETEERS

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Sept. 15—(AP)—A warning against racketeers who are seeking "to creep into the labor movement to gain control of the treasuries" was sounded at the opening session of the Illinois state federation of labor convention today.

"Organized labor has almost freed itself of the menace of the radical element," President Robert G. Fitchie told the delegates. "Now we have an element that is attempting to get into labor organizations with the insidious intention of taking over the treasuries. Organized labor is now passing through the most dangerous condition it has ever known."

"I want to warn you against these people. They want to destroy your organizations and are now trying to organize to that end. Some groups in this federation have got to stand up and be counted."

POLITICAL ACTIVITY IN FIVE STATES TODAY

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15—(AP)—Five states wound up their primary campaigns today and tomorrow will select the candidates who will be arrayed against each other in the general election seven weeks hence.

With the exception of New Mexico which will choose its party candidates later in the week, the primaries in New York, Massachusetts and Wisconsin and the nominating conventions in Connecticut and Delaware will conclude the party selections.

HEARST GLAD TO RETURN TO THE LAND OF LIBERTY

NEW YORK, Sept. 15—(AP) -Excluded from France by government order, William Randolph Hearst returned today indicating he considered America had a virtual monopoly on freedom of expression.

"If you tell the truth in France," he told 400 disabled veterans who took him from the liner Europa at quarantine in a welcoming steamer they had chartered, "you get shoed out of the country.

"If you tell the truth in Russia you're lucky if you get out of the country.

"If you tell the whole truth in England you're apt to be sued for libel.

"This is indeed the land of liberty where there is freedom of thought and speech and of the press. I am glad to be home and my advice to independent journalists planning to go abroad is to stay at home."

STOWAWAY HAD FOOD SUFFICIENT FOR A WEEK

LIVERPOOL, England, Sept. 15—(AP)—A completely outfitted stowaway appeared in police court here today when Henry Edwin Bradshaw, 32, described as a Bristol analyst, pleaded guilty to stowing away on the White Star liner Doric on its voyage from Montreal to Liverpool.

Bradshaw was sent to jail for a fortnight. He was found by members of the ship's crew in a lifeboat with food sufficient for a week, blankets and, even a stove and fuel to provide hot meals. He had a change of clothing with him.

KIDNAPED WATCHMAN AND DYNAMITED COTTON GIN

LAKEVILLE, Ark., Sept. 15—(AP)—After kidnaping the watchman, a band of men set off three charges of dynamite at the Gabe Webb Cotton gin here today, damaging it to the extent of about $8,000.

The watchman, G. B. Cockely, was found several hours later by Sheriff Calmes Merritt in a cafe at Dermott. He said he had been released by his captors a mile from Dermott.

No motive for the dynamiting could be learned by officers.

RAYNO BOUND OVER ON FORGERY CHARGE

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Sept. 15.—Henry Rayno of 166 Freeman street, Hartford, was bound over to the next criminal term of superior court under bonds of $500 in police court this morning, when Judge Frank H. Foss found probable cause on a charge of forgery. Rayno, represented by Attorney Henry Stone of Hartford, pleaded not guilty. Rayno was in the employ of John W. Barbrick & Co., of 75 Wellington street, Hartford, until August. In May he came to this city and placed a sanding machine with attachments with E. C. Johnson & Co., building contractors, the machine being left here on trial. It is alleged that Rayno then filed with his employer an order blank for an outright sale, signing the name of the local firm to the blank.

After Prosecuting Attorney Harry S. Gaucher had brought out these facts, Attorney Stone made a motion for dismissal of the case, the motion being denied.

Rayno said that his employer knew of the circumstances under which the sanding machine had been placed with the local concern and that he signed the name of the firm with no intention to defraud. John W. Barbrick, the employer and a resident of Marlborough, testified that Rayno was paid the commission when he said that it was an outright sale. The transaction, had it been fully completed, would have amounted to $134.70. Rayno's commission was $18.75. Barbrick and Ernest C. Johnson of his clay testified for the prosecution. Johnson said that a trial proved to him that the machine was not suited to his purposes and he therefore returned it to the Hartford concern.

There followed several letters from Mr. Barbrick inquiring as to the payment and finally the local man made a personal call on Mr. Barbrick to inform him that he had not purchased the machine.

A continuance until next Wednesday was ordered in the cases of Joseph Bourey of 11 Welch court, charged with theft of two automobile wheels mounted with tires from Morris Spector last week, and Harrison Barber of Jackson street, charged with being an accessory. Barber entered a plea of not guilty to the charge.

FUNERALS

Alonzo Little

The funeral of Alonzo Little was held this afternoon with services at the family home in Columbia at 2 o'clock. Rev. Asel Mellinger, pastor of the Columbia Congregational church, officiated. Burial was in the Columbia cemetery. The bearers were Lyndon Little, Harold and Louis Little and Luther Buell. Avery and Van-Zandt had charge of the arrangements.

Antonio Insalaco

Leaving from the home on Windham road, the funeral of Antonio Insalaco was held this morning with a requiem high mass in St. Joseph's church at 9 o'clock. Rev. Francis A. Duch was celebrant and Miss L. Monica McKean was heard in several solos, accompanied at the organ by Mrs. Edmund R. Portelance. Burial was in St. Joseph's cemetery, where the officiating clergyman read a committal prayer. The bearers were Joseph Giordano, Stefano Insalaco, Rosario Gallo, Antonio Lamentia, Antonio Parla and Vincenzo Parla. The Hurteau Corp. had charge.

Deputy Sheriff Lester H. Blish served the papers in two divorce suits which were instituted over the week-end and assigned to the October term of the Windham county superior court. Vilma Nemeth Kollander of Warrenville has filed divorce proceedings against her husband, Julius Theodore Kollander, now of Lansing, Kas., on the grounds of intolerable cruelty. She seeks custody of their minor child, Robert, and alimony. Attorney Harry S. Gaucher represented the plaintiff.

Lillian Molleur Keech of Norwich seeks a divorce from Philip Keech, now of Windham. They were married June 6, 1927, and the plaintiff alleges intolerable cruelty. She also seeks the custody of their minor child, Philip, Jr.

Among prominent local republicans who are attending the state convention at Hartford are: Sheriff Charles A. Gates, A. Linn Weatherhead, Charles B. Pomeroy, Aldermen Cyril A. Lamoureux and William E. Webber, William E. Lutton, Ralph B. Gates and William V Palmer. Many leading party members in surrounding towns are also in attendance.

Mr. and Mrs. Harris O. Eccleston left Sunday evening by train for Florida to make their future home in Moose Haven, Orange Park, the home for aged and infirm members of the Loyal Order of Moose. Mr. Eccleston has been a member of the Moose for the past 16 years and has resided in this city and South Windham for several years. When Mr. Eccleston, became infirm some time ago the officers of Willimantic lodge No. 1440, through Secretary Cyril A. Lamoureux, took the necessary steps to make provisions for Mr. Eccleston and his wife on the Florida reservation. They are to occupy a bungalow of three rooms with a large garden plot adjoining. This is the first case of local people going from the lodge to Moose Haven.

A machine driven by Charles F. Beck of this city overturned on the North Windham road early Sunday morning, causing slight injuries to the driver and damage to the car. Officers John Killourey and Roderick Lariviere investigated.

Eben Bass of Scotland has sold to Fritz and Max Talbot of Boston, Mass., a tract of land bordering both sides of Beaver Brook, Scotland, with a small section extending into the town of Windham. There are about five acres on the plot.

Frank, 13-year-old son of Joseph Dziadal of Liberty Hill, sustained a fracture of the right foot and ankle in a fall of 30 feet from the top of a silo Saturday evening. The boy landed on his feet. He was treated at the Willimantic General hospital by Dr. Charles A. Jenkins.

COLCHESTER

TWO LOCAL INDUSTRIES GET PROMISING ORDERS

Apparently the short period of business depression is taking a turn for the better in Colchester the past few weeks. The local manufacturing establishments all report a gradual improvement in business conditions. Cohen Bros. dress factory on Norwich avenue has been working overtime the past two weeks on a rush of orders for the fall and winter trade. Officials of the S. & S. Leather Co., Inc., also report an increase in orders for their leather novelty goods. They expect to increase their working force about 25 per cent during the next week. Their plant occupies the two upper floors in the former shoe factory building on Norwich avenue.

Joseph Ezekiel Falk, local sportsman, manager of the Colchester baseball and basketball teams, left Monday to commence an electrical engineering course at Tri-State college, Angola, Indiana.

Home from Motor Outing

Misses Addie M. Wickwire and Florence I. Dawley, of South Main street, Miss Elizabeth Kempton, of Yantic, and her sister, Mrs. Sarah Kempton Wolf, of Brooklyn, N. Y., returned Sunday evening from a motor trip through northern New England, Canada and eastern New York state. The trip was made via Worcester, Mass., Portsmouth, N. H., Portland, Me., to Grenville and Camp Caribou on Moosehead Lake, where several days' stay was made. From there they motored on through Maine, across the Canadian border to Quebec and Montreal, and back home through Three Rivers, Plattsburgh and Troy, N. Y., Pittsfield, Westfield and Hartford.

BALTIC

At the home of Mrs. Arthur Almquist of East Great Plain, Friday evening a number of friends pleasantly surprised her in celebration of her birthday. The evening was spent playing games and singing popular songs. The radio also helped furnish entertainment for the evening. Rainbow tints were used very effectively to carry out the color scheme. Garden flowers were used in table decorations with rainbow colored favors at each place. A beautifully decorated birthday cake with lighted candles formed the centerpiece. A lunch of sandwiches, cake, brownies, doughnuts, ice cream, candy, soda and coffee was served by Miss Ada Ashworth, assisted by Miss Beatrice Ashworth and Miss Lillie Almquist. Mrs. Almquist received a number beautiful gifts. Those in attendance were Misses Freida and Alma Philipp, Louise Geigenmiller, May Geigenmiller, Lillie Almquist, Ada and Beatrice Ashworth, all of Baltic and Mrs. Toomey of East Great Plain.

JEWETT CITY

GOLDEN WEDDING NOTED BY MR. AND MRS. J. T. WILBUR

Mr. and Mrs. James T. Wilbur celebrated their golden wedding Monday very quietly, receiving calls from their family and friends. A shower of congratulatory cards arrived on every mail, and numerous gold pieces were received. Friends remembered Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur with yellow gladioli and dahlias, and Mrs. H. D. Pollard, their daughter from Willimantic brought a wedding cake decorated in yellow and white and bearing a suitable inscription. Among their gifts were exquisite photographs sent from a school friend from abroad, of scenes in Egypt. Another was a dish of large golden Bartlett pears, yellow pansies and mignonette, the pears having grown on a tree planted over fifty years ago. Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur greatly appreciated the remembrances, particularly as they had planned no celebration of the event.

Mr. Wilbur was born in Thompson and Mrs. Wilbur, who was Ida Robbins, is a native of Grosvenordale. They were married September 15, 1880, in North Grosvenordale by Rev. J. Quincy Adams. For many years the family lived in Glasgo, where Mr. Wilbur was agent for the American Thread Co. For several years they have lived on Soule street, Jewett City, Mr. Wilbur being employed by B. R. Gardner. They have four children, Mrs. H. D. Pollard of Willimantic, Mrs Eli Lague, R. A. Wilbur and Ralph C Wilbur of Jewett City. There are four grandchildren.

AUTOMOBILE CASES TRIED IN TOWN COURT MONDAY

In Griswold town court Monday morning three cases were presented by Prosecuting Attorney R. J. Dudkowski, with Judge John T. Barry on the bench. On payment of $10 the case against Carl Oladeo of Canterbury was nolled. He figured in a recent automobile accident on the Plainfield road, when he crossed in front of a truck at which time his wife was badly injured.

S. M. Huskey of New London drew a fine of $100 and costs for driving wet. He was picked up on Postoffice square Saturday night by Officer Henry Vegiard.

William Goodman of Norwich paid a fine of $25 and costs for overloading a motor vehicle.

Two state troopers from Danielson barracks were present in connection with the cases against Goodman and Oladeo, the latter was defended by Attorney Thomas M. Shields of Norwich.

Miss Ariana Cook is spending a week at Watch Hill, the guest of Mr. and Mrs. William Patton.

Miss Mary Keith of Worcester is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Davis, of Mechanic street.

INSPECTION OF BANK ANNOUNCED FOR SATURDAY

Invitations were sent out Monday as follows:

The officers and directors of the Jewett City Savings Bank cordially invite you and your friends to inspect their new bank building Saturday, September twentieth, from three until eight o'clock.

Leo Gilbert, Thomas Barnett, R. J. Dudkowski and William McCluggage were in Boston Sunday to see the Boston-St. Louis double-header. Leo (Sunshine) Gilbert was the star left fielder of Jewett City Twilight league. He and Hafey the St. Louis left fielder are old cronies, so just to please his friend, Hafey copped three bad ones during the second game, but for real class Sunshine has it on the Cardinal's outfielder, for in 8 times up Hafey didn't get a hit.

Two of the new lights for Jewett City's Main street white way were bolted to the poles and lighted Monday evening. The fixtures are of different styles, with lamps of 500-candle power. The electric light commission will choose which type is to be selected.

Mrs. Andrew McNicol entertains the Ladies' society of the Congregational church at her home Thursday afternoon.

Mrs. Emma Horsfall returned to Voluntown Monday, after caring for her sister, Mrs. George Larkin who has been ill for several days.

Miss Jeanne P. Rousseau has entered the Katherine Gibbs secretarial school, Providence.

BIG EXPRESSES ROUTED THROUGH BOROUGH AT NOON

On account of a freight wreck at Slocum, R. I., about noon Monday, more than a dozen of the crack Shore Line expresses were routed from Providence to New London, over the local iron. Included in the string were the Knickerbocker, The Shoreliner, The Senator and The Puritan. The boroughites saw more New Haven rolling stock than for a couple of years, and were all ready for a view of the Yankee Clipper, but this famous train was routed over the Midland division via Putnam and Hartford. Several of these big express trains stopped at the local station for orders. Off each one piled a string of Pullman porters with their fists full of telegrams to be sent to friends all over New York city, and many other cities, which were to be reached several hours late.

FUNERAL

E. Avery Button

Funeral services for E. Avery Button, 68, were held Monday at 12:30 at the home of his daughter, Mrs. T. E. Shea on Mathewson street. The service was conducted by Rev. J. W. Carter. Mrs. Nellie Wharton sang Safe in the Arm of Jesus. The floral remembrances were very beautiful. Burial was in Preston City cemetery, the bearers being Elmer and Leland Burdick, Frank and Ray Button, Edwin Lewis and Henry Hensler

Mr. Button had been ill for months at his daughter's home, where he had received the most devoted care. Another daughter, Mrs. Stanton Brown survives him.

LOW PRICE OF CANE SUGAR STIMULATES HOME PRESERVING

Winter Food Bills Can Be Materially Reduced by Putting Up Fruit Now

One cannot go to market these days without being reminded that this is the year to make jellies, jams and preserves. Luscious fruit is in abundance and cheap everywhere, and pure cane sugar—the best to be had—is offered at an unheard-of low price.

The woman who puts up a dozen jars of fruit or a few glasses of jelly and jam will be surprised at how little they cost her. But the real saving will be noticed later when these delicious home-made preserves make it unnecessary to buy others.

As a means of making menus attractive, there are few foods more helpful than jellies, jams and preserves. For children, canned fruit is a most desirable breakfast dish or dessert.

Sweet pickles and relishes made of cucumbers, tomatoes, cabbage or melon rind are also easy and inexpensive to put up. When served with meat and fish the combination is delicious. Good food promotes good health. The Sugar Institute.

"MAKING FRIENDS AND HOLDING THEM —is the secret of success in business." Says

GEN. SAMUEL McROBERTS

Chairman of the Board, Chatham Phenix National Bank and Trust Company

Director, Armour & Co., American Sugar Refining Co., National Surety Co., Kansas City-Southern Railway; Brig. General, A. E. F.

"Making friends and holding them, by a friendly up-to-date usefulness, is the secret of success in business. This axiom has been the guiding force in the progress of the Chatham Phenix National Bank and Trust Company. And it is obviously the guiding force in your business—as evidenced by your use of the Ultra Violet Ray in the 'Toasting' of the LUCKY STRIKE tobaccos."

Samuel McRoberts

LUCKY STRIKE—the finest cigarette you ever smoked, made of the finest tobaccos—the Cream of the Crop—THEN—"IT'S TOASTED." Everyone knows that heat purifies and so TOASTING removes harmful irritants that cause throat irritation and coughing. No wonder 20,679 physicians have stated LUCKIES to be less irritating! Everyone knows that sunshine mellows—that's why TOASTING includes the use of the Ultra Violet Ray.

DANIELSON

VOCATIONAL TRAINING COURSE NOW OPEN TO WOMEN

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Sept. 15—Supt. W. E. Parker of the schools in Killingly and Brooklyn announced this afternoon that through the courtesy of the state board of education there is being offered this year to the women of this community an opportunity to study in a vocational school, under a skilled instructor. This school is to open Sept. 29, and will continue for nine weeks.

It will give attention to some of the problems of the home and of home-making. Special courses will be offered in home-decoration, home management, child care, foods, marketing, preparation, cooking, serving, clothing, design, construction, materials, etc.

These courses will be given afternoons or evenings as may best fit the needs of those who enroll. With this thought in mind Supt. Parker is inviting all interested persons to come to the high school on either Wednesday, Thursday or Friday of this week for registration or enrollment. The hours of registration are to be from 3 to 6 p. m. and from 7 to 9 p. m.

Supt. Parker strsses the point that it is imperative that interested persons register that it may be known what courses to offer, and in order that definite plans be made for the groups whom it is thought will be interested in such courses as have been mentioned.

The organization of vocational courses for the women and mothers of the community by the state board of education, which provides the instructor without cost to the town, is being carried out for the first time this year, and the towns of Killingly and Brooklyn are particularly fortunate in that the first opportunity is being offered in this town.

The instruction will be of an expert nature, and the various courses afford an unusual opportunity to women who desire to improve themselves as home-makers.

David Henry Potter, a former member of the firm of Potter and Collamore, Warren machine shop owners, died Sunday morning at 9 o'clock at the Odd Fellows Home in East Providence. He was stricken with a cerebral hemorrhage last Saturday and failed to rally.

Mr. Potter was born in Danielson, Conn., Feb. 2, 1851, a son of the late David T. and Mary (Aldrich) Potter.

JUDGE JOHNSON DIES AT HIS HOME IN FOSTER

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Aug. 15 — Judge Clarke H. Johnson, most distinguished citizen of the neighboring town of Foster, R. I., died at his home, about 10 miles east of here yesterday, after an illness of 18 months. He was a retired chief justice of the supreme court of Rhode Island, former republican floor leader in the general assembly of that state, and a descendant of Roger Williams. He was in his 79th year.

Judge Johnson retired from the highest judicial office in Rhode Island in March, 1917

Born in Foster, Nov. 18, 1851, the son of Elisha and Matilda (Howard) Johnson, he came of families noteworthy in the Colonial history of Rhode Island. Both his father and grandfather were military men and leaders in the affairs of the Foster town government. His great-grandfathers, Job Johnson and Daniel Howard served in the Revolution. Through his grandmother, Amy Cranston Howard, he was descended from John and Samuel, father and son, both of whom were governors of the colony of Rhode Island, the latter having held the office for 29 years.

After being graduated from the district schools of his native town, Judge Clarke entered Lapham institute at North Scituate for more advanced study. He entered Brown university at Providence in 1873, and was graduated with the degree of A. B., in 1877. Two years after graduation he was admitted as a member of the Rhode Island bar. In 1914 his alma mater conferred the honorary degree of LL. D. upon him. While in college he was a member of the Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity, and was elected to the honorary scholastic fraternity of Phi Beta Kappa.

He practiced law in Providence for many years up to the time he was elected to the supreme court bench, in 1903. His early training on the bench was received in the Eighth Judicial district court, to which he was appointed in 1886, after several years of service in the general assembly.

As far back as 1879, and again in 1880, he was elected a member of the house by the citizens of Foster. He was clerk of the house from 1881 to 1886. Again in 1899, he was elected to the legislature from Foster and continued to serve until 1903.

On March 6 of that year he was elected an associate justice of the supreme court and became chief justice of that tribunal on January 27, 1913. He was a life long republican.

Judge Clarke's love of his native town never waned. His only close surviving relative is his wife, who before their marriage was Miss Ida S. Harrington of Foster.

Charles Hosmer, Washington, D. C., who will address the members of Sarah Williams Danielson chapter, D. A. R., Wednesday afternoon, and their guests, the members of Elizabeth Porter Putnam chapter of Putnam, was for years in the United States foreign consular service. In his talk here Wednesday afternoon at the parish house of the Westfield Congregational church he will tell of some phases of consular life in foreign lands. The hostesses for the occasion are Miss Amelia Hutchins, Mrs. Harry E. Back, Miss Annie M. Hutchins, Mrs. Mary Tayntor, Mrs. Alice Leinbach, Mrs. Elizabeth Tayntor, Miss Mary Louise Young, Miss Eliza D. Putnam, Mrs. Mary Mason and Mrs. Mary W. Williams.

Killingly grange resumed its meetings this evening with a Harvest night program, conducted by Estella Converse, lady assistant steward of the organization. The occasion marked the last opportunity this year for filing membership applications. It is anticipated that there will be a considerable number to receive degrees when they are conferred at the meeting on October 6.

Close to 200 applicants to be made voters will have their qualifications examined when the selectmen and town clerk meet here Saturday of this week. Those who meet the tests will be admitted to the electors' oath. The number of applicants is quite large this year, and reflects not only the desire of many young people to become voters, but also the activities of political workers in soliciting people to file applications. There are about as many women as men in the list of applicants.

The first and second districts of the town produced 160 applicants. Figures for the third district were not available this afternoon, but these applications are expected to be sufficiently numerous to swell the total to around 200.

It has been the experience of the past that not all of the applicants appear for examination, and that a percentage of those who do fail to qualify.

If a sufficient number of persons register to make doing so worth while, an evening school will again be arranged for at Killingly high school this year. Those of the non-English speaking of the community who desire to learn the language and to read and write it, and those who would add to what may be limited educations will have an opportunity to register for an evening school course at the high school building on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of this week, at the office of the superintendent, from 3 to 6 and from 7 to 9. Last year an evening school was conducted with success. If one is arranged for this year there will be 75 session nights, probably three nights a week until spring. There is no charge to persons who take such a course.

Mrs. Francis E. Storer and sons Francis E., Jr., and Newman H., returned here yesterday with Mr. Storer from Wellfleet, on Cape Cod, where they have been spending the summer season. Newman is leaving at once to resume his studies at a private school at Lenox, Mass. Friday of this week Francis E., Jr., will leave for Cambridge to begin his freshman year at Harvard university He was a student at Choate school last year.

Mrs. Charles A. Tillinghast, Mrs. Howard Tillinghast and the latter's children have returned here from Misquamicut, where they have been spending the season since July 1. Selectman Charles A. Tillinghast and his son, Howard, have also been at the beach during the summer as business permitted.

Mrs. Albert James and daughter, Katherine, of Santa Monica, Cal., are guests of Mr. and Mrs. R. R. James of Oak street.

Soccer will be introduced to Danielson this fall, the New London team of the Eastern Connecticut Soccer league coming here Sunday, October 5, for the opening game. In advance of this there may be some exhibition games.

Plans for the fall and winter season are to be discussed when the standing committee of the Westfield Congregational church holds a meeting Wednesday evening.

Paul Lamarche, resident here, is a son of Dr. G. F. Lamarche, who is dead at his home in Putnam, where he had practiced medicine for a long term of years.

Horace A. Merrick of Worcester is visiting with friends in Danielson for a few days.

Dr. Robert F. Souther and Principal Ernest R. Warren of Killingly high school were among the Danielson people at Newport Saturday to watch the race between Enterprise and Shamrock V.

With the date for benefit boxing exhibition to be given here for the Nurses' Home fund of the Day Kimball hospital still nearly two weeks in advance, it is already assured that the affair will be a very great success.

In political circles here today some talk was heard about supporters of Selectman Alcott D Sayles voting to re-elect him, though he was not renominated in the democratic town caucus for the office he now holds. This could be done by writing in his name in the blank column.

Invitations have been received here for the wedding of Miss Mary Margaret Head, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas F. Head of Winsted, and Harold Patrick Wilson of Hartford at St. Joseph's church, Winsted, Tuesday, Sept. 23. Miss Head is a niece of the Misses Head of Academy street, Danielson.

PLAINFIELD

In Plainfield over 200 Air Cadets are listed as charter members. The organization is fast nearing completion. The local organization will be sponsored by the following: LeRoy Dissinger, Louis Lamothe, Benjamin F. Dawson, Lester Salisbury, Cecil Butler, Rev. John H. Landry. The district commander will be Mr. Dissinger. Membership cards will be signed at Salisbury's store, local headquarters. The initial membership totals 233, as given by the organizer, Mr. Cullen. The Bulletin published the list several weeks ago.

This (Tuesday) evening the Sunday school teachers of the First Congregational church will meet at the home of Cecil Butler.

Friends in town were sorry to hear of the sudden death of James Towne, of Canterbury Saturday evening, from a heart attack.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Laramie spent the week-end in Taftville with Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Smith.

Vernon Royle returned home last week, after spending the summer at Fishers Island.

Some kinds of love may grow cold but the kind a man has for himself never does.

PUTNAM

LOCAL A. L. POST PLANS TO RECEIVE LEGIONNAIRES

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Sept. 15—Elaborate preparations for the receiving of legionnaires and their ladies, who will be en route to the national convention of the American Legion to be held next month in Boston, are now being formulated by a specially appointed convention committee of the Anslem Mayotte post of this city. As Putnam is a junction of the principal highway routes to Boston, it is expected that there will be scores of out of Boston-bound legion members stopping here during the days immediately preceding the opening of the convention on October 6.

According to plans the local post will establish headquarters at the Putnam Inn in order to furnish convention information for the touring ex-service men. Through the courtesy of Landlord E. C. Rogers of the hotel, the facilities of the modern tavern will be at the disposal of the legionnaires for the duration of the convention. Carl E. Weeks of Franklin street, is chairman of this committee.

Following a meeting of the post which was held Friday evening, it was announced that a large delegation will leave Putnam on October 7 by special train for Boston where they will participate in the exercises, the feature of which will be the spectacular American Legion parade, expected to be several miles in length and the largest ever to be held in New England. G. Stanley Shaw, past port commander is in charge of arrangements for Boston trip of the local post members.

In connection with the reception of traveling legion members, the special committee plans to have a number of attractive welcoming signs, prominently placed in central spots of the city. Mayor Charles A. Richard is cooperating with the committee on this matter.

A train derailment at some point along the New Haven's shore line today which made the route impassable for several hours, was responsible for the re-routing of the Senator, the railroad's luxurious Washington flyer over the Midland division this afternoon. The crack express train passed through this city and its division of parlor and dining coaches and brilliantly polished engine attracted a number of people to the depot who inspected it during the brief stop-over made for the purpose of receiving train orders and the taking of a supply of water.

Henry Hurdman, signalman for the firm of Lang and Son, contractors performing the reconstruction work of the city water system, who was painfully injured Sunday evening when run down by an automobile while performing traffic duty on the northerly side of School street, near Putnam high school, was discharged late last evening from the Day Kimball hospital. Hurdman, who resides at 136 School street, was struck from the rear, Sergeant A. J. Sponcey learned following an investigation of the accident. Walter Krzemien of 39 Powhatton street, driver of the car involved in the accident, was questioned by Sergeant Sponcey but was not held. He stated that Hurdman's presence in the street, was not discernable at the time. He said the signal man held no lantern to inform motorists of the impending danger and that when he struck him he stopped immediately. Police were to interview Hurdman today for his version of how the accident happened, in an effort to fix responsibility and close the investigation.

Krzemien and Noga, driver and passenger, respectively, gained considerable notoriety a few weeks ago when their filling station in Grosvenordale was raided by state police of Danielson barracks, in search of liquor. Krzemien was suspected of destroying the evidence procured by the police and was later placed under arrest on this charge. The case was settled in justice court in North Grosvenordale when both pleaded guilty to liquor law violations and paid small fines.

The Putnam republican delegation to the party state convention, being held in Hartford today and Tuesday, consists of Judge M. H. Geissler, A. A. Brodeur, Sam Rich and David O. Breault. Three of the delegates left for the capitol this morning and were joined late this afternoon by Judge Geissler, who did not leave until afternoon.

There was no session of city court this morning. Cases scheduled for hearing today, were postponed until Wednesday morning because of the absence from the city of Prosecuting Attorney Eric H. Johnson.

Mayor Charles A. Richard will be in Boston Wednesday evening, where he will be the guest of Hon. James M. Curley, mayor of Boston, who will be host at a reception to be tendered His Worship Mayor Reuben Salter, of Boston, England. The gathering will be held in the Boston garden. The English official will be received by many other New England mayors who are planning to attend.

Continued improvement is the report of Fire Chief Ralph E. Thurston, who is a patient at the Truesdell hospital in Fall River, Mass. Chief Thurston is making a slow recovery from the serious illness resulting from an ulcerated tooth.

This timely bit of advice from the police today is for poultry raisers: "Beware of chicken thieves now active in this vicinity." During the past week two wholesale raids on henneries in the vicinity of Putnam have been staged by nocturnal marauders, whose identity, police yet have been unsuccessful in establishing. In West Thompson chicken thieves invaded a henyard and mysteriously made away with more than 100 hens. A few nights later they returned to a poultry farm in the East Putnam section where they stole about three hundred birds. State police of Danielson barracks have been notified of the activities of the raiders and are investigating the reported thefts.

The steep and dangerous incline on western Pomfret street, known as Hospital hill, is now being guarded with the improved and highly protective cable fence, a new innovation of the state highway department. The old rail fences on both sides of the road have been removed and new sturdy posts have been set for the cable. Since the introduction of the new type of fence in this section the number of fence posts mowed down yearly by automobiles has been considerably lessened, due to the greater resistance powers of the steel calbes.

Fluffy cakes . . .
perfect biscuits . . .
all over town

All due to Calumet's DOUBLE-ACTION

ALL over town women are making handsome hot biscuits —light, perfect cakes. They have heard that Calumet, the Double-Acting Baking Powder brings dependable baking results. Now they are proving that it does Calumet's first action—in the mixing bowl—starts the rising. Its second action—in the oven—carries that rising through to a triumphant finish even though you may not be able to regulate your oven temperature accurately. Make a Calumet cake today—see why Calumet has become the most popular baking powder in the world.

Only One Level Teaspoon of Calumet to a Cup of Sifted Flour!

That's the usual Calumet proportion. Be sure to follow it even though you may have been using nearly twice as much with other baking powders. You'll be delighted with this economy! And more than delighted with the results Calumet gives you. Perfect texture! Perfect flavor!

All baking powders are required by law to be made of pure, wholesome ingredients. But not all are alike in their action. Not all will give you equally fine results in your baking. Calumet is scientifically made of exactly the right ingredients, in exactly the right proportions to produce perfect leavening action — Double-Action. Get a can of Calumet from your grocer today. Notice Calumet comes in full-sized one pound cans.

MAKE THIS TEST—See for yourself how Calumet Baking Powder acts twice to make your baking better. Put two level teaspoons of Calumet into a glass, add two teaspoons of water, stir rapidly five times and remove the spoon. The tiny, fine bubbles will rise slowly, half filling the glass. This is Calumet's first action—the action that takes place in your mixing bowl.

After the mixture has entirely stopped rising, stand the glass in a pan of hot water on the stove. In a moment, a second rising will start and continue until the mixture rises to the top of the glass. This is Calumet's second action—the action that takes place in your oven. Make this test today. See Calumet's Double-Action which protects your baking from failure.

THE KEYNOTE ADDRESS

It was a meaty and inspiring keynote address that was given to the republican delegates in state convention by Senator Walcott. He paid deserved compliments to the accomplishments by the federal administration in carrying out its programme in spite of the serious opposition encountered, and he was equally outspoken in his praise of the work done by the state administration.

On the question of prohibition, which has experienced much discussion in this state, as elsewhere, Senator Walcott lost no time in declaring the situation to be intolerable and that drastic action is necessary if we are again to head toward temperance. Inasmuch as the republican party is pledged to remedy this situation, one for which Connecticut is in no way responsible since it never ratified the amendment, he expressed confidence in the administration at Washington to deal properly with the problem after the facts are presented by the commission some time next winter.

Praising the work of the "state government of Connecticut for the last several years, under the able administration of sound business executives," Senator Walcott, who rendered valuable service in the state before going to Washington, pointed to the excellent financial condition of the state under the present system, and contrasted it with the heavy debt the state was under when the republicans took control back in 1914. Under the present policy the state is virtually out of debt and before the bonds come due will be able to pay them off and show a balance. From year to year the state is being so administered that a balance is being shown and, in addition, extensive additions are being made to its institutions and its highways.

In answer to the attacks that have been made upon the party organization and its leader, Senator Walcott pertinently said the accomplishments in Connecticut "have required persistent effort along the lines of sound policy, but no record such as this can be made without leaders, men of vision, character, courage and ability. The people of Connecticut are to be congratulated for having chosen such men during this reconstruction period of the last 15 years. Much credit must be given to the state central committee for its unflagging interest in, and its unselfish devotion to the building up of an organization whose chief aim has been to do whatever is best for Connecticut. To the presiding genius and executive head of this organization we owe much. To the governor who has guided the ship of state along her course for six years with unflagging interest and great skill, as the record demonstrates, we owe a deep debt of gratitude."

That the republicans will today nominate a ticket that will give assurance to the people of Connecticut that there will be a continuance of the same commendable government with consideration for the best interests of the state is to be expected. There promises to be no contests for the nominations but it is probable that there will be a careful and thorough consideration of several vital questions in the formation of the platform, one of which is prohibition, even though Connecticut has always been wet in sentiment and has refused to ratify the 18th amendment, and another may be the matter of giving more attention to country roads.

INSPECTING THE AUTOS

Just because there has been an inspection of automobiles which has covered the New England states doesn't mean that motor vehicle accidents are impossible. Sufficient evidence to the contrary is available and convincing.

Nevertheless, there will probably be no exception taken to the claim that the inspections, and subsequent placing of equipment of the inspected cars in proper condition when necessary, has served to prevent many accidents which might otherwise have occurred. Many of the accidents which feature the news almost every day are due to other causes than those which would be involved in inspections of equipment. Inspection of the mechanical parts of the auto does not include an inspection of the judgment of the driver, and it is the latter which is too often the cause of serious accidents. Nevertheless, a car in perfect mechanical condition will do much to offset the reckless driver, or it will provide him with a very necessary means of getting out of a tight place if anything will.

While it will never be known just how many accidents the Save-A-Life campaign has prevented in this state, there are reasons for believing that it produced such results that it should be continued. It is required by law in the state of Pennsylvania, and for the car that does not carry the "approved" sticker during the month of November a penalty will be applied and the car will be denied the use of the highway.

Drivers cannot fail to appreciate the importance of finding out, at least once a year, that the machine they are driving is fit to meet emergency conditions. Proper brakes and lights are decidedly important. They are necessary for the careful driver, while the driver who is disposed to take chances depends upon them to get him out of bad situations. Thus obligating owners and drivers to see that their machines are what they should be is in the interest of greater safety, and with due recognition of the good results accruing from that effort, it is not probable that safety requirements will demand that the equipment of the drivers themselves to meet and abide by highway conditions undergo equally thorough inspection and correction.

MASSACHUSETTS DECIDES TODAY

This is the day when they settle important questions in Massachusetts. An interesting primary campaign has been underway in both parties, the contest among the republicans being between candidates for the United States senatorship, while with the democrats it concerns the governorship.

Ex-Senator Butler is desirous of the republican nomination. He has been defeated once, but he is confident that he can be of more service to his state in Washington than any other because of his experience. He has a strong following, but he is being opposed by Eben S. Draper, prominent manufacturer and a former contender for the nomination.

Massachusetts wants able representation in the United States senate. It is believed that it will be certain of it should either of the republican candidates be nominated and elected, but the real contest between them this year hinges on the question of prohibition. Mr. Butler is running as a dry, Mr. Draper is a wet, and the outcome will show whether the republicans of the neighboring state seek repeal of the 18th amendment or enforcement. Opinions differ as to what the state wants but if there is any doubt it should be cleared away by today's vote.

It is quite evident that should the dry republican candidate be nominated he will be opposed by a wet democrat, and in the event of such a development a serious loss of wet republicans is threatened. On the other hand, should the wet republican candidate win, such an outcome is threatened with a dry independent candidate to offset the two wets. A third candidate, and a dry, would naturally draw from both parties but with the probability that it would have the greater effect upon the republican vote.

There have been expressions on the part of the voters of Massachusetts which indicate that there is a strong wet sentiment in that state. That being so, it would seem to augur well for Mr. Draper's nomination. Whether Mr. Butler, formerly chairman of the national committee, can turn the trick because of his experience is a question. As to the ability of both there seems to be no doubt.

IS IT THE YACHT OR THE SKIPPER?

Thus far in the international yacht races there has been nothing but a procession. Over different courses Enterprise has shown its heels to the visitor from across the water and in both light wind during the first race and a stronger breeze during the second it has proved itself superior. If it wasn't in the craft it was in the handling. Finishing the second race with a margin of two miles and nearly ten minutes advantage left no question as to superiority under the prevailing conditions and over that course.

Winning two races doesn't necessarily settle the contest. From the demonstrations made by the contending sloops there is ground for the feeling that the outcome is indicated in advance. If that proves to be the case the cup will remain on this side of the Atlantic, as it has been felt it would.

But there is a situation in connection with this yacht race that it would be interesting to have cleared up. If Enterprise is the winner, credit will go to the builder of the craft and the designer. It will be attributed to the lines on which it has been constructed, with due consideration given to the man at the wheel and his crew. But just where will the race be won? Will it be the craft itself or the sailing master that was responsible for the victory, or will it be the combination?

There has been no disposition to give credit to both in other contests, but it would be an enlightening sequel to the big race if, after the contest is over and the possession of the cup is determined, there could be a shifting of crews so that those on the winning yacht might have a chance to demonstrate whether they could take the losing craft and still win. Such would show whether it is the craft or the handling of the craft that determines where the cup stays.

There is no likelihood of such a development any more than their is for jockeys to change their mounts after a race is determined but a test of that character with yachts would prove interesting.

WASHINGTON AFFAIRS

(Special to The Bulletin)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15 — When Senator Walcott of Connecticut was named as chairman of the commission to "investigate wild life," he had to endure a good deal of chaffing from his colleagues as to whether it included the great white way. Since that date several months ago, the preservation of wild animal and bird life has forged to the front, and a nation-wide interest has developed in conservation of native animals, birds, and so the joke is now a thing of the past. Senator Walcott has spent much of the summer in the work of the commission, appointed by President Hoover, and moreover he is not the only senator to feel the call of the wild.

For while the Connecticut senator is acting under appointment of the president, Senator Hawes, of Missouri, has given notice that later he will resign from the senate to head a private organization whose purpose is the same as that of the commission. The general plan is to see what can best be done to prevent depletion and conserve and induce propagation of native wild animal and wild bird life, now being depleted by lack of law, care and protection.

The commission of which Senator Walcott is chairman will report its findings to congress soon after the opening of the session in December. The enterprise with which Senator Hawes will be affiliated, at a salary said to be $50,000 a year, is one being formed by Joseph P. Knapp, multi-millionaire publisher, and is expected to start with an endowment of $10,000,000.

Mr. Hawes states he will not resign at present, and during his term in the senate he will serve the Wild Life association without pay. Senators Walcott and Hawes are known in congress as the sportsmen senators, each being devoted to hunting, fishing and also in the conservation of animal and game resources.

The congressional commission which was appointed by Mr. Hoover, was instructed to make an extended visit to the far west, see what is depleting the natural resources of wild life now fast dying out; advise what method is best calculated to restore such life; what precautionary measures against further depletion had best be taken, and in fact, look fully into existing conditions and advise what remedy shall be resorted to.

The citizens organization of which Senator Hawes is president, is for the same general purpose, and although it is highly probable the two will act in sympathy, the commission was temporary and to advise, while the Hawes organization is to be permanent and will supply its own funds.

For political reasons Senator Hawes does not want to resign, leave his seat vacant, and open to the appointment of a political foe, so it is said. There are too many political issues at stake, just now, to leave a democratic senate vacant even for a moment, with the possible appointment of another faction being represented in filling the vacancy. Hawes is a staunch democrat, and is taking no chances. His term expires in 1933 but he takes on the presidency at once, serving without pay.

Hawes is known as the man who never lets a rod or gun out of his sight. His senate office is filled with them; the walls hung with trophies of hunting and fishing trips, stuffed heads, sets of antlers, big fish as natural as life. Hawes likes to talk fish and game even better than politics, and that's saying a great deal, for he is an active democratic leader and a charter member of the Jefferson Rod & Gun club just organized as an offset to the Rapidan camp of the president.

The preservation of wild life movement is spreading. It is not confined to the commission and the Knapp Foundation. Down in West Virginia it has taken deep root, and the Wild Life league has begun work by stocking the streams and ponds with fish. Coupled with the stocking of streams the league will urge the legislature to make and enforce strict conservation, and stringent protective laws, for forest fish and game.

Senator Tydings, in selecting the democratic outing camp near Washington followed the example set by several members of the cabinet, who were tied to the capital much of the summer. Several provided themselves with summer playgrounds, for their family and friends. Washington summers are not only excessively hot, but the humidity makes the heat almost unbearable, night and day. Secretaries Wilbur and Hyde, and Attorney General Mitchell, have each built picturesque camps along the shore. They form a notable group, and spend their week ends as camp neighbors.

Assistant Secretary of War Davison, in charge of aviation, also has a camp, or at least the purchase is practically completed. It is a big estate where he can have an ideal landing field, as he makes most of his official inspection trips by airplane, and wants his own field within easy reach of the war department.

Senator Hiram Bingham of Connecticut, sailed September 11th for the Samoan islands, as chairman of the commission appointed by President Hoover, to make a complete investigation of the needs of the islanders, and report to congress early in December.

Sailing with Senator Bingham were Senator Robinson of Arkansas, the democratic vice presidential candidate in 1928, and Representative Beedy of Maine, both members of the commission. They will make the two months' trip from San Francisco on the cruiser Omaha, and will live on the ship. They expect to remain on the island two months, or as near that length of time as they can be absent from the states. They plan to make a very complete survey of the most pressing needs, and advise as to what had best be done.

New Englanders out here are amused over the result of the primary in New Hampshire, where "Hi Noone" as he is widely known, ran for and won in the dual offices of candidate for the United States senate and governor of the state, running as a democrat.

Noone is 85 years old, a perpetual candidate for some high office, but never a winner, a millionaire manufacturer, and a real Yankee "character". His candidacy was looked upon as a joke. A small vote was polled. Noone had made a wide canvass, though a quiet one, and caught the other candidates napping, so walked off with the blue ribbons in the governorship and the senatorial race.

Now New Hampshire democrats are scratching up their ideas, to find some sort of a loop hole in the law that will forbid a man being candidate for senate and governor on the same ticket. But they can't find one. When the election ballots are printed they seem sure to bear the name of Mr. Noone at the top of the democratic column, for the two highest offices on the ticket.

If Mr. Noone wins, and sits in the senate, he would be the star performer at the opening of the 72nd congress. He is stout, sturdy, iron grey hair, and carries his almost 90 years lightly. He is "outspoken" to the last degree; is just waiting to tell the senate what's what, and isn't a bit afraid but what he can do it if he is given the chance. Unfortunately for Mr. Noone, who is respected in his home state, though regarded as a joke as a candidate, Senator Keyes had no opposition in the primary, and is always a record breaker when election votes are cast. It is not likely Mr. Noone will sit in the seats of the mighty, notwithstanding his pluck, persistence and picturesque personal appearance and flow of language.

MANAGING CLARABEL

Nobody could do a single thing with Clarabel. When she was 2 years old her parents swelled with pride because she was so cutely naughty and stubborn. When she was 18 that sentiment had undergone a considerable change. In fact, it never in the world would have been recognized as the same sentiment at all. Her father turned purple and her mother turned faint when they considered her, and they did that continuously, so to speak.

So there was nothing new whatever in the situation now confronting this young person. Orville McTavish sat leaning forward with his clasped hands between his knees and his face darkly desperate. "I can't imagine life without you," he was informing her as a surprising fact. "Some way or other, you've got to marry me. Why won't you marry me?"

Well, why wouldn't she? Clarabel suddenly wondered. McTavish was a good-looking young giant, with sufficient money to keep the wolf strangled and certainly had a way with him. Her heart leaped now. But perversity had its clutches on her. She ran glittering fingertips through her wind-blown bob. "I can't stand your first name," she told him suddenly and plaintively. "Whenever I work up a fondness for you somebody speaks your name—and plop—just like a punctured balloon! Why weren't you Goliath or Henry?"

"I might have been a Claude," he reminded her. "But, all right, if you feel that way this is where I do a fadeout. I've got my way to carve in the world and I decided long ago that I hadn't time to waste overmuch on girls. I love you madly, but I suppose I'll survive. Don't call me up because I shall be very busy forgetting you and must not be interrupted."

Clarabel blinked and surveyed the large vacancy where Orville had been sitting two minutes before his abrupt departure. She had expected a pleasant, long-drawn-out evening of argument and pleadings. Nobody ever had treated her this way. The more she thought about it the madder she got—here it was only 9 o'clock and nothing to do for the rest of the evening and everybody else out for a good time, so there was no use telephoning any one else to repair Orville's desertion.

The box of flowers she expected the next morning failed to arrive. The telephone did not ring nor did the mailman stagger in with hectic postal communications. One week elapsed and Orville might just as well never have been, so complete was his effacement.

Clarabel developed nerves and a temper. Her father regretted that she was too grownup to spank when he was the victim of one of her tantrums, and her mother, after a battle or so with her offspring, wondered gloomily why persons wrote poems on the glory of motherhood. There was nothing Clarabel hated quite so much as Orville McTavish. Hatred boiled and seethed within her and she occupied many hours soothing herself with her violent distaste for the young man.

Being left out of the picture was to he a deadly insult. Never in her life had she been so completely and blithely ignored. Sometime in the dim years of the future fate would place Orville McTavish in her path, and when that time came what she would do to him would be a-plenty.

Even at this distance she could hear him curl up and frizzle. He might have a wife and a family of six children, but that would not deter her from wreaking her deadly vengeance on him.

She met him a full month later as she was rounding a street corner on her way home. It was dusk and nobody was near.

"Why, hello, Clarabel," he sang out casually, just as though she were the ashman or just an ordinary girl. He was so near that she had an overwhelming sense of his bigness, his good looks and cheerful eye. He had an unmistakable air of being about to pass on, and something suddenly happened inside Clarabel's head. She unconsciously reached out and grabbed his arm.

"Why, Clarabel!" Orville protested after a minute. "Don't cry so, angel! If a policeman comes along he'll run me in on general principles!"

"Th—then I'd go along, too," Clarabel hiccoughed happily, his arm around her. "I—I'll not take ch-chances on losing you again, Orville! That's really an awfully dis-distinguished name, Orville. I l-love it!"

A Washington Bystander

Associated Press Staff Writer

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

WASHINGTON, Sept 15—Senatorial ambitions for advancement to the presidency or vice-presidency have become so common a thing with popular election of senators that it must be a relief not even to be suspected of such notions.

And there are senators, hard working efficient senators, in that happy position.

In national politics they have achieved their ultimate. They happen to have been British, German and Irish born and are therefore constitutionally ineligible for the presidency and necessarily the vice-presidency.

Happenstance

That limitation upon their political futures makes the careers of Senators Jim Couzens of Michigan and Bob Wagner, New York, all the more interesting.

It applies also to genial Pat Sullivan of Wyoming, nee County Cork, but his senatorial career is already over, short of another special session before the November election.

He's a political happenstance, so to speak. He did not aspire to election to cap off his appointment on the death of Senator Warren.

But Couzens and Wagner are mighty interesting men, both personally and politically.

Couzens has always done a wholehearted job at senatoring. A job tinged so frequently with independence of thought and action, independence not only of party political considerations but even of the influence which possession of vast wealth usually exerts on men's views, that his is a distinctive figure in American political history.

From his Canadian birth of English born parents he seems always to have been a fighter.

Unwilling, At First

Bob Wagner is an utterly different type. He came to the senate rather unwillingly. His candidacy was forced upon him by his friendship with Al. Smith and Smith's need in one of his battles for the governorship of New York to prove to everybody that he was doing no political trading with that other long-time friend, then Senator Wadsworth, republican.

Wagner was a recognized authority on laws bearing particularly on labor matters long before he was drafted off the New York bench to make the senatorial race against Wadsworth. And he was very happy on the bench. He had no other political ambitions.

When he first came to the senate, he rather sat around, looking on.

It is the nature of this German born immigrant American, however, to work hard. Like Couzens, once a train butcher on a Canadian local, Wagner started by selling papers, only his field was the sidewalks of New York.

What both are, their own courage and will-power made of them. And Wagner today is as deep a student of national affairs as there is in the senate. Both are senatorial heavyweights, increasing their influence and effectiveness day by day.

And in all probability the fact that no distracting presidential bees can ever buzz in their bonnets makes them all the better senators.

YOUR HEALTH

The Sick Child At Home

By Janet Burgoon Hull House, Chicago.

(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

Since much of the successful care of children in illness depends on their cooperation, should not more emphasis be put on ways of gaining it?

A prominent Chicago pediatrician says, very wisely, "The habit of bed rest should be established with a child's first illness—let a youngster learn to associate rest with physical discomfort. It is also necessary that children, through the growing-up process, which goes on in spite of illness, be reckoned with as socially and mentally normal beings who are awake to life about them and eager to live it.

Home care, like hospital care, must bring physical comfort to the patient through satisfactory equipment, and must be worked out in a routine. The routine can depend on mother's and other responsibilities provided she bears in mind that rest precedes feeding time, sleep reasonably following feeding time, and play through which children learn, must be planned for within the child's capacity for emotional and physical exertion.

Home-made bed rests of heavy canvas, and oil cloth covered orange crates for bed tables can be supplied in any home. Playthings that can be depended upon to furnish the "something worthwhile to do" will help to eliminate the restlessness and discontent that we unknowing adults call "naughtiness." Naughtiness is just the result of nothing more interesting to do. Let these toys include make-believe possibilities, like families of dolls, and colorful building blocks for castles. Making useful articles of rafia, yarns, or cardboard are wise provided mother again reckons with the mental age of her child, remembering that little fingers need large tools and that joy comes to little people more from the results accomplished than from the process of work. Something to show from the process that is not too difficult, and that cannot go wrong, makes the best "busy work" for children whose energies must not be taxed too greatly.

Children makes companions of picture book people. They need some substitution for the real playfellow until he can be permitted. Often a short visit from a pal can do much more good than harm in keeping a sick child in a reasonably happy frame of mind.

Early convalescent days should mean providing a chair and table adequate to the child's size, something we can get into and out of without help. Let him play with large crayons and long-handled paint brushes, making anything he wants to whether it ever can have a name or not. Sand boxes, sieves, cash registers, turn these busy little people into store-keepers. Games of mystery and magic give their egos a tremendous boost, especially those children who through long illnesses have begun to feel inadequate.

Happy responses from children depends on the attitudes of their parents in illness or in health. A playful attitude that makes a game of anything that has to comradeship and understanding, that can not help but bring about cooperation when illnesse, have to be coped with.

Of course it is unnecessary to remind parents of the great value of having the children looked over at regular intervals by the family doctor in an effort to cut down sickness.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

A Dry Failure To Workers

Mr. Editor: I wish to take exception to the one who signs "Friend Of Labor." After being a worker for over 40 years and a member in good standing of one of the greatest unions in the United States for over 32 years, I think I know something about what the workers want.

I cannot speak in an official capacity, but I can quote leaders in the labor movement and outside of labor to prove that the 18th amendment is a curse, one of the greatest curses that this country has ever seen and should be eliminated from the Constitution of the United States immediately and the right to drink or not to drink given to each individual by a referendum vote that would be carried in favor of elimination at least ten to one in some states.

I do not know how any intelligent person, male or female, can say the 18th amendment is the best friend of laboring men or women. Some of the greatest men and women of today are unalterably opposed to this travesty of a law.

I refer first to Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of a great university, Columbia, with its 19,000 students, who says among other things: "Prohibition has demoralized the youth of the land and is responsible for 99 per cent of crime and corruption that is prevalent in this and other cities throughout this fair country of ours, and if the New York republicans do not put a wet plank in the state platform they will go down to defeat overwhelmingly in this state and also nationally."

Edward Rybycki, manager of the City Free Employment agency, says: "If the breweries and wineries were opened there would practically be no unemployment, as they would absorb over 3,000,000 workers."

And last, John Sullivan, president of the Allied Printing Trades council, says the same thing.

Everyone has the right to his own opinion that's admitted, but when they try to force their opinion on others, that is something else again. It cannot be done legally.

Some more evidence: The United States government has lost over $4,000,000,000 in revenue alone in ten years, enough to pay practically all the soldiers' bonuses and have some left over. The cities have lost a great deal of money also in taxes which were paid for the privilege of selling liquor, or beer or wine, which is recommended in the Bible, where it says: "Thou shalt take a little wine for thy stomach's sake."

My grandfather lived to be 82 and my father 83, and they were God-fearing men, honest, sober and industrious, never owed anything when they passed on, and that's good enough for me. They drank beer from the time they were 18 to the time of their death.

I am willing that you should inquire at the office of this paper as to who I am, as I am not ashamed of what I say. I give them the privilege to tell who I am.

Instead of 27 labor banks, there would be at least 300 banks and $300,000,000 if the 18th amendment was eliminated and had been eliminated a year after the World war, or in other words Nov. 11, 1919.

This is no brief for the return of the saloon which should have gone long before it did. Neither do I advocate the speakeasies, which are the direct outcome of the 18th amendment, of which there are ten wide open to my knowledge in this vicinities where I live, but I have never been in one. I have had good beer, though, at the exorbitant rate of 25 cents per, but not any more schooners at five cents per.

I served my apprenticeship in The Bulletin Co.'s job-room and I was born in Norwich and lived there for 45 years. I am at the present time a member in good standing on the Bronx Home News chapel, which consists of 87 card men, members of Big Six Typographical union, as great a group of men—11,500—as you will find anywhere. The said paper has a circulation of 150,000 guaranteed, paid, and the population of this borough is approximately 1,200,000 some people!

I do not want to take up any more space so will close by saying to Friend of Labor, "don't vote dry in the coming election but vote "dripping wet," and you will not be sorry." I can only sign myself —A WORKER AND ALSO A WET FRIEND OF LABOR.

Bronx, New York, Sept 12, 1930.

A HISTORY OF CONNECTICUT INDUSTRY

Released by Manufacturers Association of Connecticut

Hall Brothers, Norwich.

In 1842, Joseph Hall of Leicester, England, a weaver by trade moved to this country to accept a position in a woolen mill located in Washington Hollow, Dutchess county, New York. He moved to Montville, Conn., in 1853 to accept a position in charge of a woolen mill, part of the material for which was manufactured in Poquetanuck, several miles on the opposite side of the Thames river. In May of the same year he moved to Poquetanuck. In 1857 he entered into the woolen business as an owner in partnership with Isaac Cook of Cooktown. During this time the Kimball mill was being operated on the present site now known as Hallville, which, at that time was known as Kimball's Mills. A year later, Joseph Hall bought out the Cook interest and became the sole owner. Unfortunately, he died the following year leaving six children, among them Joseph, Benjamin and George who later became the original Hall Brothers.

Joseph and Benjamin continued in business until 1872. On the second day of June of that year the original wooden mill was burned to the ground, the fire having been of incendiary origin probably caused by some dissatisfied employe.

Being practically cleaned out of all financial resources, they were at a loss as to how to continue when one of the local business men of the city of Norwich, L. W. Carroll, loaned them the money to rebuild a small brick mill and start over again. This loan was made without any form of security whatever and was made through friendship and a belief in the ability of the two Hall boys. In 1873 a small, two story, 40 x 75 brick mill was erected and the two Hall boys started in as woolen scourers. The business proved very successful and in 1876 the Hall Brothers put on the market one of the first practical, power driven scouring and rinsing machines. This machine was made and marketed successfully for a number of years and was considered an innovation in its day.

Later on the firm installed one carpet loom and some sort of coarse carpet was made, one of the Hall boys running the loom by day and the other by night, alternating as often as necessary.

In 1884 they were advised to enlarge the mill so as to take on the weaving of ladies' woolen dress material. The main mill was built at that time. Shortly after this the two older brothers took into equal partnership with them, their younger brother, George, and during the many years of their operating together, the three brothers were all actively engaged in the business.

The drawings and specifications for the main mill were drawn and figured by Benjamin Hall on a piece of ordinary brown wrapping paper, the mill being built from pencil drawings. Other additions were made until as late as 1912 and a new power house, boilers and water wheels were installed in 1919.

The firm later purchased and made additions to the Trading Cove mill located on the westerly side of the river which they continued to operate for a number of years until a division was made in 1916. At that time Joseph Hall purchased the other portion of the Trading Cove mill and took this as his own. The two remaining partners took over the Hallville mill.

The present site, Hallville, has been occupied by a woolen manufacturing business in one family for four generations.

Connecticut Boy Amazes Mother

"Billie's stomach was often upset and he suffered a lot from colds," says Mrs. M. F. Carroll, 143 Adelaide St., Hartford. "He was feverish and his breath was bad. I found he was constipated.

"My mother used California Fig Syrup with us, so I decided to give Billie some. It surely surprised me to see how quickly it stopped his feverishness, cleared his breath and tongue, regulated his bowels; made him a strong and energetic boy again."

The quick, safe way to cleanse and regulate the bowels of bilious, headachy, constipated children is with California Fig Syrup. Give it at the first sign of bad breath, coated tongue, listlessness or feverishness. Every child loves its rich, fruity flavor and it acts without griping or discomfort. Appetite is increased by its use; digestion is assisted; weak stomach and bowels are given tone and strength.

For fifty years, doctors have endorsed this pure vegetable product. The genuine is always marked by the word California. Look for that when buying or you may get an imitation.

FOR COLDS— ALKALINIZE YOUR SYSTEM

Doctors everywhere are prescribing this new treatment for colds; and it is delighting thousands by the quick relief it brings when used consistently.

Begin when you feel a cold coming. Take a tablespoonful of Phillips Milk of Magnesia in a glass of water, morning noon and night, the first day. Do the same thing the second day. Then take only at night.

Colds reduce the alkalinity of your system. That's what makes you feel achy, feverish, weak, half-sick from them. Phillips Milk of Magnesia is alkali in harmless, palatable form. It relieves the symptoms of colds by restoring the alkalinity of your system.

For fifty years, this pleasant alkaline has been famous as an anti-acid. Doctors prescribe Phillips Milk of Magnesia; hospitals use it; millions know how it relieves sour stomach, gas, indigestion and other symptoms of over-acidity. All drug stores recommend it. 25c and 50c bottles, with full directions for its many uses.

"Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of the Chas. H. Phillips Chemical Co., and its predecessor, Chas. H. Phillips, since 1875.

WEDDINGS

Chabotte—Corbeille

At St. Patrick's church at 9 o'clock Monday morning, Miss Flora Corbeille of No. 90 Boswell avenue, daughter of Charles and Caroline Corbeille, was united in marriage with Roderick Chabotte, son of Existe and Cordelia Chabotte of East Great Plain. Rt. Rev. Msgr. Michael H. May conducted the marriage ceremony.

After the wedding ceremony there was a reception at the home of the groom's parents and later in the day the bride and groom left for a wedding trip. Both are well known and popular with their many friends, who extend them best wishes for a happy married life.

Guertin—Dugas

Arthur O. Guertin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Guertin of No. 188 North Main street, and Miss Lucy M. Dugas, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Dugas of Occum, were united in marriage Monday morning at 9 o'clock in St. Joseph's church, Occum. Rev. Ludovic Paradis, pastor of the church, performed the marriage ceremony.

Later there was a reception at the home of the bride's parents, after which Mr. and Mrs. Guertin left for a wedding trip. Mr. Guertin is employed by the Connecticut Co. Both bride and groom are popular with their many friends and acquaintances, who extend them hearty good wishes. The bride received numerous and beautiful wedding gifts.

Zukowski—Warakomski

At 8 o'clock Monday morning at St. Joseph's church, Miss Helen V. Warakomski, daughter of Constanti and Anna Warakomski of No. 91 Summit street, was united in marriage with Anthony W. Zukowski of No. 12 Hickory street, son of Mrs. Andrew Zukowski, Rev. S. A. Iciek, pastor of the church, performed the ceremony. Miss Hedwig C. Warakomski, sister of the bride, was the bridesmaid, and Joseph Wisniewski, cousin of the groom, was the best man.

The bride was charmingly gowned in white satin, wore a flowing veil of tulle caught with orange blossoms and carried Easter lilies. The bridesmaid wore a gown of capucine chiffon with brown transparent velvet jacket and hat to match. She carried cut garden flowers. There was a reception at the home of the bride's parents after the ceremony and later in the day Mr. and Mrs. Zukowski left for a wedding trip.

Higgins—Murphy

Monday morning at 8 o'clock, Miss Mary Elizabeth Murphy, daughter of Mrs. Anthony Murphy of No. 10 Robbins court, and John Kelly Higgins of New Haven, son of Michael Higgins of this city, were united in marriage at St. Mary's Memorial church by Rev. Anthony Murphy of Hartford, brother of the bride. Rev. Father Murphy was assisted by Rev. Raymond LaFontaine of Hartford, deacon, Rev. Arthur Sullivan, sub-deacon, Rev. Joseph Griffin of Hartford, master of ceremonies, and Rev. George Donahue was seated in the sanctuary. The altar was beautifully decorated with asters, palms and ferns.

Miss Nora Murphy, sister of the bride, was the bridesmaid, and Raymond Higgins, brother of the groom, was the best man. The bride was beautifully gowned in white satin, wore a veil of duchess lace caught with orange blossoms and carried white roses and lilies of the valley. Her bridesmaid was most attractively gowned in yellow silk net over silk crepe. She wore a powder blue chiffon hat and carried a bouquet of tea roses.

After the wedding ceremony there was a breakfast and reception at the bride's home and later the bride and groom left for a wedding trip. On their return they will reside at No. 155 Lombard street, New Haven, after Oct. 1. The bride's traveling costume was a brown canton crepe suit with hat to match. She received numerous and beautiful wedding gifts.

The bride is a graduate of the Norwich Free Academy and of St. Francis hospital training school, Hartford, class of 1926. Mr. Higgins graduated from the local schools and is employed in New Haven.

Esterbrook—Korenkiewicz

In the presence of many guests, Miss Stella Korenkiewicz, daughter of John and Frances Korenkiewicz of Yantic, and Harold Esterbrook, son of Byron and Ella Esterbrook of Woodstock, were united in marriage by Rev. William Toper, Monday morning at 9 o'clock, in St. Joseph's church. Cut flowers and ferns were the decorations in the church.

The maid of honor was Miss Laura Korenkiewicz, sister of the bride, and the bridesmaids were the Misses Irene Esterbrook and Wanda Slowikoski. Mr. Esterbrook had for his best man Walter Korenkiewicz, brother of the bride, and the ushers were Joseph Janowicz and Chester Capiga.

The bride was given in marriage by Peter Korenkiewicz of Albany, her brother. She was charmingly gowned in ivory satin, wore a lace veil caught with orange blossoms and pearls and carried a bouquet of roses and lilies of the valley. The maid of honor wore pale green maline with hat to match and carried pink roses. Miss Esterbrook's gown was of yellow satin and Miss Slowikoski's gown of green satin. The bridesmaids carried yellow roses.

After the ceremony there was a breakfast and reception at the home of the bride's parents. On their return from a ten-day wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Esterbrook will reside with the parents of the bride. The bride received many wedding gifts. Her traveling costume was a brown ensemble with hat to match. Present at the wedding were guests from New York, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Putnam and other places.

In addition to the list of surviving relatives published Monday morning, Nicholas Jackson, formerly of Broad street, who died early Sunday evening in Preston, leaves two nieces, Miss Lottie Jackson and Mrs. Rosa Ross, both of Norwich.

DANIELSON MAN KILLED IN CRASH AT TAFTVILLE: TWO HAVE BACKS BROKEN

A yellow Buick touring car, with registration 118-352, driven by its owner, Lucien Comtois, 19, of 38 1-2 Water street, Danielson, went hurtling off a curve at Taftville Monday afternoon about 4 o'clock, bringing death to one of its occupants, serious injury to two others, but only minor injuries to the driver and one other of the five who were in the machine.

Lucien E. Comtois, 21, of 122 Main street, Danielson, a cousin of the driver, was instantly killed, suffering a fractured skull, fractured jaw, broken leg and arm. He had been sitting in the back seat.

Leo Comtois of 45 Morin avenue, Danielson, also a cousin, has a broken back and is a patient at the Backus hospital, where Mrs. Yvonne Sylvester, wife of Philibert Sylvester of 24 Merchants avenue, is also a patient with a broken back and is paralyzed.

A fifth member of the party, said by the authorities to be Miss Priscilla Girard of Hunters avenue, Taftville, was reported to have left the scene before the arrival of the officers, and was to be sought by them for questioning.

Lucien Comtois, the driver, was placed under arrest by Deputy Sheriff J. M. McGuire of Baltic, who brought him to Norwich police headquarters where a manslaughter charge was made against him and bail was set at $2,500, which was furnished by his uncle, Philip Lerou, of Lisbon.

An explanation made by the driver of the machine was that the steering gear failed to respond when he tried to keep the car in the road as they rounded the turn.

The place where the accident happened is on a sweeping curve on the road between Taftville and Occum, a short distance to the west of the Riverside house and on the other side of the road from that building. The machine was headed towards Occum and the evidence indicates the speed at which it must have been traveling. As it left the highway it struck a telephone pole, cutting this off at the base and carrying the broken pole on for ten feet or more where it hung suspended by one wire from the next pole. The automobile then ran on for 25 feet or more and plunged off a bank, down among some trees and stumps and coming to a rest on its right side.

Constable Filligar was the first officer to arrive after the accident, closely followed by Deputy Sheriff J. J. McGuire, and the Backus hospital ambulance was summoned to take the Sylvester woman and Leo Comtois to the hospital.

Dr. C. C. Gildersleeve, medical examiner, gave Undertaker Grant permission to take charge of the body of Lucien Comtois.

Deputy Coroner E. W. Perkins visited the driver at police headquarters and secured a statement from him soon after he had been brought there.

The touring car was a bad wreck, with front axle and steering gear bent and twisted, top crushed and radiator and engine damaged.

Employes of the telephone company were on hand shortly after the accident to take care of the damaged pole and wires.

Makes Up Poultry Schedule

The poultry committee of the Norwich grange fair has drawn up its schedule for the award of special prizes offered by the H. F. and A. J. Dawley Co., Charles P. Bushnell, Eaton-Chase Co., Norwich Grain Co., Yantic Grain Co. and A. E. Shedd, which promise to make this part of the fair one of the most attractive features. For the encouragement of early entries the committee has announced that there will be 100 free exhibition pens for the first 100 entries and has also arranged for the care of the birds, for which A. E. Shedd has contributed an extra bag of scratch feed for feeding them and a bale of shavings for littering the pens.

B'nai Brith Auxiliary Meeting

The first fall business meeting of the Rose of New England auxiliary No. 40, B'nai Brith, held last week, was opened in due form by the president, Mrs. Bettie Pasnik.

Plans for a rummage sale were discussed and plans were made for a dance to be held some time in November.

After the business meeting, the brother lodge, No. 898, joined the sisters to hold a joint meeting for the discussion of the good and welfare of both organizations.

Passenger Trains Through Norwich.

Because of a railroad wreck near the Apponaug, R. I., station Monday afternoon, the passenger trains of the New Haven railroad, between New London and Providence, were routed through this city on the Norwich and Worcester division during the afternoon and evening.

The wreck was occasioned when the crack New Haven express, "The New Yorker," plowed into a derailed freight train which had 14 cars off the track and blocked the through line.

SCOUT EXECUTIVE BOARD APPROVES YEAR'S PROGRAM

The Boy Scout executive board held its first session of the school year Monday night at 7:30 in the chamber of commerce rooms. Three major items of business were taken up and discussed: Financing, the acquisition of a week-end camp site, and the year's programme. After a thorough discussion of the advantages and disadvantages of the several week-end camp sites, the board placed the matter in the hands of a committee composed of Edward W. Jewett, Edward V. Ross and Arthur Collins. Special committees for visitation to the territory were appointed and consisted of A. L. Peale, Henry S. Lyon, Edward W. Jewett and Rev. John J. Reilly.

The year's programme was presented by the scout executive and approved. Those present at the meeting were: H. D. Larrabee, president; James Pedace, A. L. Peale, Rev. John J. Reilly, Arthur Collins, Walter Casey, Arthur E. Story, Edward W. Jewett, Rev. T. M. Shipherd, Mr. Leffingwell, C. V. James, Charles Coit, Ed Ross, C. B. Gilbert, Dr. R. R. Agnew and John L. Sellman.

Two Cases In Montville Court

(Special to The Bulletin.)

MONTVILLE, Sept. 15.—The case of Stanley Isibicki of Uncasville who was arrested Sunday evening by Officer Howard Lamphere of Montville on a charge of breach of the peace on complaint of Mrs. Waterman F. Brown of the same place was tried before Justice of the Peace Oscar E. Church tonight and was nolled on payment of costs. The accused was defended by Attorney G. C. Morgan of New London.

Nolle on payment of costs was made in the case of Stanley Anastazi, 17, of Gay Hill, Uncasville, arrested by Officer Lamphere on a charge of breach of the peace. Trouble started between the youth and the owner of a walnut tree over who should own the walnuts that drop on the highway. The accused was defended by Attorney Thomas Shields of Norwich.

Trapdoor Cuts Boy's Foot

Alfred Mathews of No. 16 Ninth street was quite badly hurt Monday when an iron trapdoor in the sidewalk in front of the New England Fruit Co.'s store, on Franklin square, fell on his left foot, cutting a deep gash.

The boy was taken to his home in a taxicab and Dr. Edward J. Brophy found the injured foot to be bleeding quite severely. Several stitches were required to close the cut, and the boy will be confined to his home for some time.

Will Visit Her Son

Mrs. Frelove A. Miller of 20 Penobscot street is to visit her son, Gurdon E. Miller, at the hospital in New Haven today (Tuesday), where he has been a patient since he suffered severe electrical burns in the New Haven railroad yards at Cedar Hill a year ago this month. Last week Mr. Miller had his tenth operation, which is for skin grafting upon his hand, from which very advantageous results are expected.

Return From Motor Trip

Mr. and Mrs. William A. Wells, Mr. Redden and Miss Jacobs of this city have returned home after a ten-day motor tour through the New England states and into Canada. The White Mountains, Montreal and Quebec were among the points of interest visited.

Miss Betty Goldblatt of 78 Woodmansee avenue, a graduate nurse from the Backus hospital school, is convalescing rapidly there after a throat operation. She was taking the extension course at Yale school of nursing when she was obliged to return here for medical attention for the throat trouble.

DANIELSON WALL CRASHED BY SPRINGFIELD TRUCK

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Sept. 15. — With a crash that was so terrific that it awakened people for blocks around, a heavily loaded six-ton Mack truck owned by the Byrolly Transportation company of Springfield piled into a heavy retaining wall at the edge of the lawn fronting Dr. F. P. Todd's residence on North Main street just before midnight tonight and then rolled over on its side. John Barrett, the operator, riding alone in the truck, was thrown out through an open window of the cab, landing on the sidewalk and miraculously escaped with no more serious injury than a slightly wrenched shoulder. He is a resident of 1732 Tomlinson street, Waterville, and was making his first trip on a new job. State Officer Henry Mayo, after checking up the accident and discovering the shift gear was in neutral, ordered Barrett to appear in the town court here to answer to a charge of reckless driving.

Barrett was en route from Providence to Waterbury with a load of merchandise that included electrical equipment, paints, bags of grains and other material, most of which was spilled out onto the sidewalk or onto the street. The truck came down the grade through Westcott road on the Providence route and failed to make the sharp turn in North Main street. The machine mounted the sidewalk in front of the residence of Fred Kenworthy, clipped a telephone pole on the inside, shot across Winter street and piled up on Dr. Todd's lawn. It tore out stones weighing up to 400 pounds from the retaining wall as though they had been pebbles before rolling over on its side. A wrecking crew went to work to clear up the place a few minutes after the accident.

POLISH CITIZENS ARE N. L. COUNTY CHAMPIONS; INTER-CITY SERIES CLOSED

The Polish Citizens of Norwich, winners of the Norwich City league, are champions of New London county, and the inter-city series between the New London Kaceys and the local team is closed. This was the outcome of a meeting of the Polish Citizens and the Kaceys held at New London on Monday evening, at which the New London team insisted on claiming Sunday's game by forfeit after which the Norwich representatives walked out of the meeting.

The management of the Norwich team was accompanied to New London by William J. Fitzgerald, chairman of the recreation committee and Dr. Clarence G. Thompson, a member of the governing board of the Norwich City league. The Norwich management was willing to meet the New London club more than halfway by being willing to call the game no-contest and not pressing their claim that the game should be forfeited to them if to anyone. The Kaceys insisted that the ruling of Umpire Joe Cranker was all that they wanted regardless of any rules of baseball which were shown them.

The Kacey management was even barefaced enough to claim that the Polish Citizens refused to play and had left the field, when every Norwich player was in his position on the field when Cranker called the game off and declared it no-contest, only to later forfeit the game to the New London club. When it was seen that the Kaceys were intent on getting the game on the slimest pretext the Norwich delegation picked up their hats and walked out.

Norwich's claim to the county title is soundly based. They won two games out three while the fourth game was stopped by irate New London fans and unsportsmanlike ballplayers. In no conceivable way was Umpire Cranker justified in forfeiting the game to New London and there is only one supposition to be drawn from his action. Which is that he might have been afraid of what the consequences would be if he settled the matter according to rule. New London fans who bet money on their sports are very loathe to lose their hard earned money and if there is any possible way, whether it is beating up umpires or rushing players of an opposing team, they take it. Cranker probably knew his New London fans and took this way to prevent what might have been a serious riot. But his diplomacy cost Norwich fans plenty.

But if that is the reason Cranker made his decision, and many people doubt it, the Kacey team is not showing good sportsmanship in claiming the game because Cranker erred. The Kaceys started the fracas, although New London people and press try to make it appear otherwise, and the outcome was entirely of their own making. They have no one to blame but themselves and their hotheaded ball players.

By insisting on claiming the game by forfeit, which they had no right to do they have tossed away a golden opportunity to cash in on the interest that has been aroused in the series.

NOTRE MUST HAVE STRONG TEAM FOR AMBITIOUS SLATE

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Sept. 15—(AP)—It isn't even a small question of another heavy winning football team at Notre Dame this fall. It's simply a question whether Knut Rockne's man-sized army of all nations can wade undefeated through the most ambitious schedule ever attempted by a college eleven.

Fired to a fresh enthusiasm by a beautiful new stadium and the return to good health of their coach, the rambler squad 120 strong is determined and confident and from its general football quality the outlook for a second successive undefeated team is exceedingly bright.

Even Coach Rockne, at the helm of Notre Dame's football fortunes for the fourteenth straight year, admits the prospects are rosy although he reasonably points out that a certain amount of "breaks" are necessary to plow through Southern Methodist, the Navy, Carnegie Tech, Pittsburgh, Indiana, Pennsylvania, Drake, Northwestern, the Army and Southern California on successive Saturdays without a setback or upset.

The Notre Dame team, 1930 model, promises to be faster and more spectacular offensively than last year's model. The same backfield with the exception of the fleet Jack Elder will be back and will be strengthened by a great group of sophomores. Every pet offense play in "Rock's" repertoire should be timed and played as beautifully or more so than last year with quarterback Carideo, fullbacks Mullins and Savoldi and halfbacks Schwartz, Brill, O'Connor and Kaplan back at their old stands.

If there is an "Achilles heel" in the lineup it will be in the line. Rockne lost most of his first string line by graduation last spring, including such performers of merit as Cannon and Capt. Law at guard, Colrick at end, Twomey at tackle, centers Moynihan and Nash. But to replace them, the great second line of 1929 will move up and from last year's record that line was good enough to stop any rush.

The "suicide" schedule:

Oct. 4—Southern Methodist at Notre Dame.
Oct. 11—Navy at Notre Dame.
Oct. 18—Carnegie Tech at Notre Dame.
Oct. 25—Pittsburgh at Pittsburgh.
Nov. 1—Indiana at Notre Dame.
Nov. 8—Pennsylvania at Philadelphia.
Nov. 15—Drake at Notre Dame.
Nov. 22—Northwestern at Evanston.
Nov. 29—Army at Chicago.
Dec. 6—Southern California at Los Angeles.

YALE SQUAD OF 107 HAS FIRST FOOTBALL DRILL

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 15.—(AP)—Yale's 1930 football candidates—107 strong and including 16 "Y" men headed by Captain Fay Vincent and diminutive Albie Booth, ground gaining backfield ace of last year's team—today went through their first drill of the season under Head Coach Mal Stevens.

The chunky and elusive Booth weighed in for the start of the season at 145 pounds, one pound more than at the end of the 1929 campaign and eight over his weight at the season's start a year ago.

Booth and Captain Vincent were placed at quarterback and tackle, respectively on a tentative varsity line-up chosen today. Others on the preliminary first team are: Halfbacks, Austen and Muhlfeld; fullback, Dunn; ends, Lindenberg and Barres; tackle, Wilbur, captain of last year's freshman team and the only sophomore picked; guards, Hare and Linehan; center, Loeser.

Loeser, the 1928 varsity center, was shifted to guard last year but apparently will be drafted for the snapper back post this year.

BROWNS DIVIDE DOUBLE BILL WITH RED SOX

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 15.—(AP)—The St. Louis Browns and the Boston Red Sox divided a double header this afternoon, the Browns winning the first game, 3 to 1 and the Red Sox taking the second in 11 innings, 2 to 1.

In the first game the Browns went scoreless, six innings, tied the count at 1-all in the seventh and won in the eighth when Goslin got his 32nd home run of the season. In the second game the Red Sox went scoreless until the ninth when they tied the count 1-1. They scored the winning run in the 11th when Oliver singled, advanced on Scarritt's bunt and went home on Blue's wild throw.

SENATORS TAKE EASY GAME FROM WHITE SOX

CHICAGO, Sept 15—(AP)—Washington took the final of the series here, winning by the score of 14 to 9. Ted Lyons, who started for the Hose was given atrocious support and was the losing pitcher, though his three successors were hit harder. Jones was knocked around and Burke pitched the last two frames for the Senators. Cronin hit a home run for the visitors while Benny Tate got four blows for the White Sox. Score:

YANKS PICK ON SORRELL IN ONE INNING FOR A WIN

DETROIT, Sept. 15—(AP)—Vic Sorrell had just one bad inning today but the four runs scored by New York in that inning were enough to give the Yankees a 5 to 3 decision over the Detroit Tigers. The fifth Yankee run came in the ninth off Cantrell.

MISS HICKS SHARES MEDAL HONORS WITH MRS FRASER

LAVAL SUR-LE-LAC, Quebec, Sept. 15—(AP)—Helen Hicks, Hewlett, N. Y., youngster, shot a fine 74 in the qualifying round of the Canadian women's open golf championship today but was forced to share the lead with the famous Ottawa star, Alexa Stirling Fraser.

Although sharing the honor of turning in the lowest score of the day, Miss Hicks, the defending champion, was forced to see the medal go to Mrs. Fraser. Under a special rule, in the event of a tie for 18 holes and also for the last nine, the medal went to the player with the lowest total for the first five holes.

The strong United States contingent made an excellent showing in the qualifying round, placing 17 in the low 32 who qualified for the first round of match play. Only one of America's hopes, Mary K. Browne of Cleveland failed to make the charmed group. The Cleveland star turned in an 86, the highest qualifying score, but was eliminated on a playoff.

Back of the two leaders trailed Ada MacKenzie of Toronto, with a 76, the only other player to break 80 during the day.

Scores of even eighty were turned in by Mrs. H. A. Martelle, of Hartford, Conn., Mrs. H. C. Higbie of Detroit, Bernice Wall of Oshkosh, Wis., and Marjorie Kirkham, of Montreal.

The draw for the first match play round with the player's qualifying round score included:

Mrs. Richard Clemson, Middletown, N. Y., 87, vs. Mrs. H. H. Martelle, Hartford, Conn., 80.

Marion Bennett, New Britain, Conn., 85, vs. Louise Fordyce, Youngstown, O., 81.

SUAREZ TO MEET MILLER ON OCT. 3RD

NEW YORK, Sept. 15—(AP)—Justo Suarez, lightweight champion of South America, will meet Ray Miller of Chicago in the main ten round bout of a boxing card which will mark the reopening of Madison Square Garden, Oct. 3, Tom McArdle, matchmaker, announced today.

In the semi-final 10-rounder, Pete Sanstol, Norwegian bantamweight, will meet Joe Scalfaro, New York. A third ten will bring together Kid Francis, Italy, and Jimmy Slavin, New York, featherweights.

The way of the umpire is hard.

It's not only hard, but at times it is decidedly dangerous. If anyone doubts this please get in communication with Big Bill Tellier, Joe Cranker or Hank Morin.

Many's the good umpire who's been temporarily wrecked because he gave a decision that was not to te liking of the roughnecks. But if it wasn't for these occasional outbreaks all the baseball fans would become minature golf addicts.

A good scrap now and then is highly entertaining. And those you get for nothing are worth more than some of those you pay big money to see under the name of boxing. In a good free-for-all you can bet your last thin one that the fight is not in the bag.

The heroism of the umpire goes unsung and he's in tighter places than the well known sardine. The umpire who gives his decisions as he sees them, regardless of pop bottles and flying fists, is a better man than the ump that shows partiality to save his skin.

But what's worse than the umpire that shows partiality is the sportsman who takes advantage of this same partiality.

The public has seen it in boxing, football and many other sports and they soon become disgusted both with the official, whether he be umpire or referee, and the athlete who takes advantage of the wrong decision.

The tennis court is where one sees as nice an example of sportsmanship as anywhere. Many times has the public seen a tennis player deliberately sacrifice a point because he knew his opponent had been unjustly ruled against, even though unintentionally.

Yes, the much abused sports official has my sympathy if he's on the up and up.

Like the trangresser, the way of the umpire is hard.

CUBS DROP HALF GAME BY SPLITTING WITH PHILLIES

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 15—(AP)—With a chance to gain valuable ground in the feverish pennant race the Cubs could only split a double bill with the Phillies today, losing the first 12-11 and winning the second 6-4.

Lefty O'Doul's home run with one out in the ninth and the score deadlocked at 11-11 decided a hectic, exciting first game in which both clubs overcame apparently insurmountable leads.

Guy Bush was the whole show for the Cubs in the second tilt and held the Phils in the palm of his hand until they rallied in the ninth to score three runs. On the other hand the Cubs spanked Collins for a commanding lead.

In the sixth inning of the second fray Hack Wilson hit his 50th home run of the season. During the double bill Heathcote had a pair of circuit clouts and English, Klein and O'Doul one each.

PLAYER THEY TURNED DOWN MAY COST CUBS THE PENNANT

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 15.—(AP)—Had it been possible to read the minds of three men simultaneously when Lefty O'Doul of the Phillies knocked the Cubs of first place Saturday with a pinch-hitting home run in the ninth, and again today when he slammed another to defeat them, an interesting story might have been revealed. As he passed the Cubs' dugout on his way around the bases, Lefty looked over to Manager Joe McCarthy and shouted:

"What a thrill, Joe. Just like sending a bag of gold on wings over the old fence."

There was a subtle dig in that remark. It has to do with another bag of gold—$50,000—and the story goes back to 1926 when O'Doul was in the Pacific Coast league.

O'Doul was hitting like wildfire, and William Wrigley, Jr., owner of the Cubs, took a fancy to him. So the Cubs got an option to buy him for $50,000. It was the only time, it is said that Wrigley ever recommended a player.

McCarthy thought the price too high and the option was not exercised. Wrigley never forgot O'Doul, however, and has watched his baseball career ever since.

"I socked that one for old time's sake," laughed Lefty when he returned to the bench. "Wouldn't it be funny if that homer lost them the pennant?" Others of the Phils thought the unexpressed opinions of Wrigley and McCarthy would be funnier.

O'Doul, out of the line-up temporarily with a sprained knee, was used as a pinch-hitter against the Cubs Saturday and in the first game today. He won both with home runs.

Hunt Outpoints Risko

BROOKLYN INCREASES LEAD TO FULL GAME BEATING REDS AS CARDS STAY IDLE

BROOKLYN, Sept. 15—(AP)—The Brooklyn Robins increased their hold on first place in the hot National league pennant race to a full game over the idle Cardinals and a game and a half over the Cubs today, when they won their eleventh straight victory at the expense of the Cincinnati Reds. Many of the Cardinals, who open an all-important three game series at Ebbets' field tomorrow, sat in the stands while the Brooklyn sluggers hit four Cincinnati pitchers hard to win a 13 to 5 decision.

For the second day in succession, the Reds scored three runs in the first inning, knocking the Robins' starting pitcher out of the box. Moss was the victim today, but, as in Sunday's game, a Brooklyn southpaw stepped to the rescue and won, Watson Clark allowing the Reds only two runs for the remainder of the game.

The Robins were quick to overcome Cincinnati's advantage, however, scoring six runs in their half of the first inning, despite some weird base running. The rally found Glenn Wright credited with only a single on a drive deep into the left center bleachers. He was declared out for passing Babe Herman on the base paths. Red Lucas was driven from the mound but the Robins continued their attack on Benton. The latter went the way of Lucas in the fourth while Frey, his successor, left the mound in the fifth. May finished the game.

The Robins collected 17 hits off the assorted Red flingers, Herman and Bissonnette leading the attack with four each, Hellmann and Meusel hit home runs for Cincinnati.

The game ended the season's operations between the two clubs. As the result of its clean sweep of the last four-games the Robins took thirteen of the 22 games played.

FITZSIMMONS HOLDS PIRATES TO 3 HITS AS GIANTS WIN

NEW YORK, Sept. 15—(AP)—Fred FitzSimmons' three hit pitching turned back the Pirates and broke New York's five game losing streak, the Giants winning 6 to 1 in the final game of the year between the two clubs today. The result left the season's series standing at Giants 14, Pirates 8.

Bill Terry packed the Giants' big bat, pounding out four hits in five times at the plate. Included in his assortment of blows was a triple, a double and two singles. Terry drove in two runs while Hogan accounted for three and Leach one.

Lloyd Waner's infield out sent in the only Pirate run in the third and saved Pittsburgh from a shutout.

N. B. A. FORMALLY DECLARES SCHMELING TO BE CHAMP

OMAHA, Nebs., Sept. 15.—(AP)—Formal recognition as heavyweight champion tonight was accorded Max Schmeling of Germany by the National Boxing association, in convention here.

The association, which has jurisdiction over boxing in about 30 states, listed Young Stribling of Macon, Ga., as its choice for leading contender of the heavyweight division, Primo Carnera was accorded number three ranking.

Al Singer of New York, who recently stopped Sammy Mandell, was recognized as lightweight titleholder. All the other generally recognized champions were approved. The association voted to give Primo Carnera a clean bill of health and overthrew all and any suspensions against the giant Italian.

This action was taken in the form of a resolution in which the association voted not to accept or recognize any suspension placed on a fighter by a state not a member of the N. B. A.

In accepting the suspension placed on Carnera by the prize fight commission of California, the N. B. A. acted wrongly, the resolution read. California is not a member of the association.

Another new rule passed this afternoon with wide reaching effect was one governing suspensions and the date of enforcements. The association ruled that in the future a suspension placed against a boxer by a member state of the N. B. A. shall not take effect for 30 days in other member states in which the boxer was under contract to fight, providing the contract was signed previous to the suspension.

The matter of establishing a permanent headquarters for the association also was discussed. Action was deferred until tomorrow. Chicago was most prominently mentioned as the headquarters site.

Twenty-nine states were represented at today's session, presided over by President Stanley Isaacs of Cincinnati. Thirty voting delegates were present.

FORMER MANAGER OF DEMPSEY IS DEAD

NEW YORK, Sept. 15—(AP)—John J. Reisler, known in sporting circles as "John the Barber," manager of Jack Dempsey before he became heavyweight boxing champion, died in a hospital today of an infection caused by an ingrown hair on a finger.

At his deathbed were his wife, four sons and two daughters. He had been in the hospital three weeks. Funeral services will be held in Brooklyn Wednesday.

Reisler came into the public eye through his long litigation over the management of Dempsey after Dempsey won the championship. He contested the right of Jack Kearns to manage Dempsey, claiming a prior contract.

Reisler was a barber by trade. He conducted an elaborate shop in the West Forties, a remodelled theatre where the manicurists, billed as "former Follies beauties," would break into a tap dance for the customers if the tip was sufficient.

LETO GETS VERDICT OVER JIMMY WATTS

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 15.—(AP)—Tony Leto, Tampa, Fla., won a 10-round decision over Jimmy Watts, New Haven, formerly of Atlanta, Ga., at the feature bout in the arena here today. Leto was given the first three rounds, and the sixth and eighth, while Watts took the fourth, fifth and ninth, the other two being even. Leto weighed 128 and Watts 129. A small crowd attended the bouts. The other bouts were:

Eddie Certa, Mexico, 129, won on a technical knockout in the third round of a scheduled eight round bout from Jules Sombathy, Bridgeport, 130, when the referee stopped the contest because of Sombathy's injured right hand.

Gerry Emard, Holyoke, 137, knocked out Bobby Heller, Brooklyn, N. Y., 140 1-2, in the fourth round of a scheduled eight round affair.

The bout between Phil Johnson, Bridgeport, 173, and Mickey Fedor New York, 168, was stopped in the third round and declared no contest. The referee announced that neither boxer was trying.

Romeo Dubois, New Haven, 137 1-2, won a four round decision over Frankie Smith, Norwalk, 130.

SARAZEN AND MANERO LEAD GLENS FALLS FIELD

GLENS FALS, N. Y., Sept. 15—(AP)—Gene Sarazen of the Fresh Meadow club, runner-up in the national P. G. A. golf tournament this year, and Tony Manero of the Elmsford Country club, were tied at 67 today at the end of the first 18-hole round in the Glens Falls open tournament. The leaders burned up the course in three under par, and they led Craig Wood, of the Forest Hills club, who shot a 70, by the same number of strokes.

Trailing Wood with 72's came Horton Smith, Bill Mehlhorn, Joe Turnesa and Jack Forrester or Ordell, N. J. Hard on their heels came a pack of veterans, Al Espinosa, Bobby Cruickshank, Johnny Golden, Billy Burke and Eddie Shultz of Troy, N. Y., with 73 each. Johnny Farrell had to be content with a 74 and Willie MacFarlane marked up a 79.

DEMPSEY NOW HAS A COLORED VALET

THOMASVILLE, Ga., Sept. 15—(AP)—Jack Dempsey today realized another ambition—he hired a grinning, amiable Georgia Negro as his personal man servant.

Ever since his bank account would allow it, he has wanted one, he said. And henceforth, wherever Mr. Dempsey goes he will have with him "John Ross, suh, of Thomasville, Gawgia."

The former heavyweight champion came here today with W. L. Stribling, Jr., who has been his host for a short visit to the Stribling farm near here.

ARSENAL MANAGES TO KEEP RECORD UNSOILED

LONDON, Sept. 15—(AP)—Arsenal just managed to maintain their unbeaten record today in English first division soccer when they draw with Blackburn Rovers. This was the first time, however, that they failed to win and get the full points.

CARNERA ISSUES DEFY TO "ANY MAN IN WORLD"

CHICAGO, Sept. 15—(AP)—Primo Carnera, the giant Venetian, today challenged "any man in the world to contest for the heavyweight boxing championship of the world" and backed his challenge by posting $2,500 forfeit money with the Illinois state athletic commission.

TERRY INCREASES HIS AVERAGE IN BIG SIX

(By The Associated Press)

His position at the top of the National league and Big Six batting averages threatened by Babe Herman, Bill Terry got into action yesterday, pounding out four hits in five trips to the plate to send his average again soaring above the .400 mark—.404, to be exact. Herman also moved up, cracking four Red hurlers for four hits, to boost his batting average three points to .398. Gehrig failed to get a hit at Detroit with the result that he moved down into a tie for third place with Chuck Klein, who remained stationary at .383, getting three hits in a double header with the Cubs. Simmons was idle but Babe Ruth found Detroit pitching to his liking and collected three hits in four times at bat.

CHIEF ROLLING CLOUD AT WAUREGAN HOTEL OCT. 4th

The Bulletin staff was treated to a most unusual episode this morning upon being visited by none other than the nation's youngest Indian chief, who is known by his tribesmen as Chief Rolling Cloud. Chief Rolling Cloud hails from Stockbridge, Wis., and represents namely the Stockbridge Mohegan Indians, and it is his purpose to hold a gala dance and buffet lunch at the Wauregan hotel ballroom on the night of October 4th, Saturday, and everyone in attendance is guaranteed a real happy convivial evening's pleasure.

Chief Rolling Cloud will also give a brief lecture in reference to Indian life which should prove most interesting inasmuch as the modern trend of the American public has practically isolated from the average person all thought of a race fast passing into the realm of oblivion.

We are sure the city of Norwich will welcome this stalwart chieftain most enthusiastically, thereby conforming to each and every principle of that which has been ensconced on the pages of local tradition.

HELD FOR ATTEMPT AT MATRIMONIAL FRAUD

NEW YORK, Sept. 15—(AP)—Sally Le Blanc, 21 and blonde, who came from the Mississippi cotton fields 18 months ago because she had heard "there was lots of easy money up north," was held for the grand jury in $2,500 bail today on a charge of attempted fraud.

Sally admitted at her hearing today that she obtained about $400 by offering herself as a bride to anybody who could pay $1,000 to care for her "aged and helpless mother."

The trouble was Sally was already married. And besides, she told the judge, her mother was only 43 and not helpless.

Held also for the grand jury were Sally's relatives by marriage, Jack Madeson and his wife, Rose, who are charged with trying to operate a "marriage racket," with Sally as bait. Magistrate Marvin fixed her bail twice as high as Sally's.

TO AGAIN ATTEMPT TRANS-PACIFIC FLIGHT

TANABE, Japan, Sept. 15—(AP)—Harold Bromley, who returned to northern Japan yesterday after a flight of 1,200 miles over the Pacific ocean toward Tacoma, Wash., said tonight he would make another attempt to fly to America as soon as his plane could be refueled and made ready. Experts said this would require several days.

The plane must be dug out of the sandy beach at Shitsukari, near here, some minor repairs made and a short hop taken to Samishiro beach, from which Bromley and his navigator, Harold Gatty, soared away at 5:03 a. m., Sunday.

Bromley ascribed his failure to a broken gasoline feed pipe, from which he and co-pilot Gatty were sprayed. Their faces chafed and eyes inflamed, they held the plane on its course as long as possible, and then turned back.

LIGHTNING KILLS TWO PERSONS IN ARKANSAS

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Sept. 15—(AP)—Two deaths and heavy property damage were caused by severe wind, electrical and rain storms which swept virtually every part of Arkansas last night and early today.

The dead are Ewell Hawkins, 26, of Huntsville, a former University of Arkansas student, and Mrs. Maye Hinton, of Huttig. Both were killed by lightning.

Election of A. H. Brittain, of Montreal, as president of the Canadian body and of George E. Willey, of Boston, as president of the United States association, marked the final session of the joint convention of the Canadian and United States Fisheries associations in Montreal.

BUSTER KEATON and CLIFF EDWARDS in "DOUGH BOYS" AT PALACE THEATRE THURSDAY

The total net debt of Canada on Aug. 31 was $2,144,860,448, a reduction of about $4,000,000 from the figure of $2,148,762,448 a year ago.

WESTERLY

FOUR DIVORCES GRANTED AT SUPERIOR COURT SESSION

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, Sept. 15—But four of the fourteen cases to come before the grand jury at West Kingston courthouse on Monday in the September term of Washington county superior court were reached when court adjourned after 4:30 p. m. The grand jurymen were excused to report again this (Tuesday) morning when it is expected sufficient evidence will be presented by the attorney general's department of Rhode Island to warrant the returning of true bills, consequently no report was made on Monday.

While court was waiting advantage was taken and four uncontested divorce cases were heard, mostly upon depositions. These cases were among some twenty listed in the assignment docket.

John Charles was granted a divorce from his wife, Leah J. Charles, as testimony showed for actions which occurred on the Boston Post road during the recent forest fires. Petition was granted on grounds of gross misbehaviour.

Robert H. Moore was granted a divorce from his wife whom testimony showed was a liquor and drug addict. They resided at Hope Valley until the wife was sent to the Reception hospital at Providence as the result of a hearing given a year ago by Judge Oliver H. Williams at a third district court hearing at Hope Valley.

Gross misbehaviour was the grounds for the granting of the Handel petition for divorce and the custody of two minor children was given to the petitioning father.

Neglect to provide was the ground for the granting of the Woodmansee petition for divorce among witnesses being Agnes E. Woods, Charles S. Geer and John A. Gardiner for the petitioner.

Associate Justice J. F. O'Connell made his first Washington county court appearance on the bench at the opening of the court session and Assistant Attorney General J. Clifden Riley, representing the attorney general's department, opened at the court house in Kingston this morning. The attendance at the morning session was unusually large due to the fact that there were 18 cases to be taken before the grand jury and many civil actions which had piled up at the last session of the court in April, five months ago.

The grand jurors were examined and accepted for service as follows: Charles Cummings, Joseph H. Eddy, John A. Hay, Mervin C. Webster, South Kingstown; Albert J. Martin, Asa L. Miner, Warren D. Nichols, William Pfeiffer, North Kingstown; Joseph W. Delaney, Arthur E. Fraser, James P. Reale and Thomas Wills, Westerly; Frank M. Hill, Walter L. Perrin, Hopkinton; Carl L. Barber, Exeter; James A. LaMay, Richmond; George R. Holburton, Charlestown, and Harry E. McDuff, Narragansett. Frank A. Sullivan of Westerly did not report for duty.

Charles Cummings was appointed foreman of the jury. The grand jurors retired at 11:30 this morning for deliberation on the 18 cases. It will probably be late this afternoon before they return to the court room and announce their findings. There were four cases before the grand jury in which the defendant is charged with reckless operation of an automobile resulting in death. These charges are made under the new law which went into effect about a year ago. There have been but few such actions before the superior court of this county up to this time.

It was announced by Assistant Attorney General Riley that in all criminal cases, including criminal appeals, the defendants will come into court on Wednesday morning, unless they were here today to make their plea, the trial of the criminal cases to commence next Monday morning.

There were twenty cases on the divorce calendar which comes up tomorrow and a large number of criminal appeal cases which are assigned for Wednesday. The petit jurors will report on Wednesday morning. After the retirement of the grand jury this morning the civil docket was called by Judge O'Connell and ten cases were assigned for trial at this session of the court when it goes to Westerly.

On the motion calendar Judge O'Connell overruled the demurrer filed by the Westerly hospital in the $10,000 damage suit brought by Mrs. Mary Detolo against the hospital authorities. She sought to recover damages for the death of her son, Louis, who it is claimed, while delirious walked out of the hospital and contracted pneumonia and died. The claim was made that the hospital negligently failed to provide sufficient employes to prevent such an occurrence.

The argument was made by the hospital attorney that it was free from liability and that recent legislation passed at the 1930 session in defining such liability specifically set the liability of some hospital corporations. The judge ruled that the Westerly hospital, not being incorporated under a special act of the general assembly, was subject to the old law. The petitioner's exceptance was noted and 10 days granted to file papers.

OBITUARY

Dennis Gildea

Dennis Gildea, resident of Westerly for over 40 years, died on Sunday at his home on Margin street. He had been in ill health for some time. During practically all of the time he has made Westerly his home, he has been employed at the American Thread company mill. He was a member of the Church of the Immaculate Conception.

He was born in Ireland eighty some years ago. His first wife was Sarah Connors, whom he married while in Ireland. Two children, Francis Gildea and Mrs. Thomas Farrel, both of whom live in Westerly survive. Mr. Gildea's second wife, Mary O'Brien of Newark, N. J., died about 19 years ago. The eight children of this marriage also survive. They are: Mrs. Arthur A. Marcil of Holyoke, Mrs. Harry L. Burkhardt of Davenport, Iowa, Mrs. Ralph H. Kenney, Mrs. Charles H. Kelly and the Misses Irene, Catherine, and Ruth Gildea of Westerly and Donald Gildea of Wilmar, Minn.

At an early hour on Monday morning the office of the Union Ice Co., located on Industrial drive, was broken into and robbed, according to a report made by the Westerly police deparemtn. Two dollars and 50 cents in silver and a large number of pennies were reported stolen.

The police investigated the theft which was reported by Frank Cherenzia, proprietor of the company, and found that entry was made to the little building by way of a window.

Noank Police Patrolman John F. Scroggins, on night duty in the town of Groton, was among the witnesses summoned before the September term of Washington county superior court on Monday, in the first day's session to appear before the grand jury. As the grand jurymen did not finish their duties, the case in which he was to appear was put over until today (Tuesday). It involved the arrest by the Noank officer of a young man charged with the breaking and entering of the grocery store of William Segar on Hight street. The accused was turned over to Westerly police officer Robert Kessel at the time the young man was brought back here and has been awaiting the action of the grand jury ever since.

MYSTIC

The attendance at the session of the Sunday school of the Old Mystic Baptist church Sunday was 61 and the collection was $4.76. Notices for the week consist of the September meeting and social of the B. Y. P. U. to be held this (Tuesday) evening with Mrs. Mildred A. Williams. A young people's prayer meeting will precede the regular prayer meeting Friday evening at 7:45 in the conference room. Due to so many wishing to attend the various fairs this week, the meeting of the Ladies' Aid society will be postponed.

Mrs. Lillie G. M. Tinker called on Mr and Mrs. Otis Gardner, of Groton, Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Porter, of Worcester, were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. L. F. Park.

Rev. Francis M. Mitchell, who, with his wife, is staying with his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Newbury, was calling on friends in Old Mystic Saturday. He was a former pastor of the Baptist church there. Monday, Mr. Mitchell left for Boston, where he will visit for several weeks. Sunday evening, Rev. Mitchell preached in Old Mystic Methodist church.

George W. Brooks, James W. Pollard, Mr. and Mrs. Lucian O. Allen and Mr. and Mrs. John F. Meyer and daughter, Violet, attended a picnic at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edmond Lamb, of Ledyard, Saturday afternoon.

There was an attendance of 152 at the Sunday school of the Union Baptist church and a collection of $10.66. One year ago the attendance was 231. No doubt the decrease is due to the change put into practice last June, of having the Sunday school session before the morning service. Mrs. Fannie Travena sang the offertory solo and Rev. F. M. Mitchell offered prayer at the morning service. Notice of the meeting of the Missionary society of the Stonington Union association to be held in Stonington Baptist church Tuesday was given. The morning session will begin at 10:30 and the afternoon session at 1:30.

The Junior and Senior C. E. societies resumed their Sunday evening meetings last Sunday.

Mrs. Eugene Jones sang "A Voice Crying in the Wilderness" at the morning service at the Mystic Bridge Congregational church Sunday. An anthem, "Savior, Gentle Savior," was sung by the chorus. Next Friday evening the young people will go to Atlantic Beach for roller skating. There will be a board meeting of the church held in the parish house Friday evening.

Benjamin Sebastian, of Mystic, who was seriously injured in a four-car accident on the Westerly road some time ago and has been a patient in Westerly hospital since, is reported as resting as comfortably as can be expected. Up to the accident he was employed by Ralph Wheeler of Stonington road near Old Mystic, and Harry Jones of the latter place, is now employed there. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sebastian and Misses Maud and Genevieve Smart were calling on Mr. Sebastian recently.

Edward S. Huntley, new manager of the local bank, has moved with his family from New London to the Paul Zimmerman house on Clift street.

Mrs. Felix Hulser entertained at bridge at her home on Prospect street Friday evening. Four tables were in play and prizes were won by Mrs. Mary Benjamin, Mrs. Noyes and Mrs. Frank Kahl.

Williams Relief corps will meet Tuesday evening in G. A. R. hall.

Goes to Oklahoma

Miss Beulah E. Noyes, after a visit with her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Ira F. Noyes, has left by automobile for Oklahoma City, where she is to be head of the health educational department of the Y. W. C. A. During the summer Miss Noyes had been at Camp Yowochas, Troy, N. Y.

Mr. and Mrs. Lyman Lamphere, of Naugatuck, are guests of relatives in the village.

Miss Carolyn Baker attended a surprise shower given Miss Winifred Ackley in Poquonoc Bridge Thursday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Merton Searles and infant son, Fred J., have returned to Bristol, Conn., after a visit with Mrs. Stephen J. Austin.

Mrs. Jesse Crary has been a guest of her niece, Mrs. Albert Wilson.

Cheerio announced, Saturday morning, that Mystic had a lady 97 years old.

Mrs. Alice J Sherburne has been in North Stonington for the past week.

STONINGTON

Mr. and Mrs. Richard F. Loper, of South Orange, N. J., are spending a vacation at the Loper home here.

Mrs. Robert L. Johnstone and sons have closed their summer home, "Salt Acres" and returned to Glen Ridge, N. J., on Sunday.

The annual meeting of the Visiting Nurse association is to be held in the library this (Tuesday) evening.

The three railroad crossings in Stonington were blocked for 45 minutes Saturday by the stopping of a long freight train. The train was delayed by a defective brake. Traffic was held up and a general congestion was caused in the borough.

Mrs. Mary L. Sliney, Mrs. W. Fred Wilcox and Miss Anna E. Sliney were visitors in Providence Monday.

Special services were held in St. Mary's church Monday evening in honor of "Our Lady of Sorrows." Rev. E. A. Cotter conducted the services. Sunday school was resumed Sunday, following the summer vacation.

Mrs. Henry B. Noyes and Miss Pauline Chesebro were week end visitors in Chatham.

John P. Loper has returned from New Bedford.

Mr. and Mrs. John Bryer are on an automobile trip to Canada.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Graham have returned to Washington, D. C., following a visit here with relatives.

Mrs. D. C. Stone, of Hanover, is spending the week at Lord's Point.

Mr. and Mrs. Gardiner Bryer and son, William, were week end visitors in Newport, R. I.

Warden and Mrs. Cornelius B. Crandall are visiting Springfield relatives.

Imports of American goods to Brazil increased 8 per cent in 1929, in contrast to declines of 15 per cent in German imports and 3 per cent in British in that period.

SENATOR WALCOTT'S KEYNOTE SPEECH AT REPUBLICAN STATE CONVENTION

HARTFORD, Conn., Sept. 15—(AP)—The following is the complete text of Senator Frederic C. Walcott's keynote speech delivered at the republican state convention here tonight:

Mr. Chairman and members of the state republican convention of 1930, we have convened for the purpose of selecting candidates for the highest governmental offices within the state.

Ours is the oldest experiment in a representative form of government, and by far the most successful. We have been blessed with vast natural resources, and most of our institutions have been built upon such solid foundations that we are today the envy of the world. But as pride goeth before a fall, we must give ourselves, modestly but courageously, and with faith in the future, to the protection and the strengthening of both the executive and the legislative branches of our government. Thus these biennial conventions set up important milestones in our development as a republic, and upon your shoulders rests a great responsibility for choosing the best candidates for the wise administration of our state for the next two years.

Our government, both state and federal, has been built up, from its inception, on the basis of two rival political parties, which, today, differ less in the principles of government than in their ability to function. We believe that the record of accomplishment of the republican party for constructive legislation and wise administration clearly entitles that party to continue in office. It is my purpose to direct your attention to some of the recent accomplishments of the republican administration at Washington and the republican administration in this state.

Beginning with the federal administration, the victory of the republican party two years ago was so decisive that it is fair to assume that not only the extraordinary record and unusual character and efficiency of the candidate for president, but the planks, or pledges, in the party platform commanded the approval of the vast majority of the American voters. Some of the more important of these party pledges seemed, two years ago, almost impossible of accomplishment, yet today they are accomplished facts. The enumeration of a few of these will prove illuminating and gratifying.

Tariff

The 1922 tariff law was revised to furnish greater protection both to American labor and agriculture, with a strengthened flexible provision under which the president may change rates within a limited scope, with a view to making unnecessary general legislative tariff revision for many years to come.

The great desire of this administration is to avoid, as far as possible, a general revision of the tariff in the future by removing the uncertainties which arise from political changes. To this end the flexible provision has been materially improved in the present Smoot-Hawley tariff bill by giving the president full power to reorganize the commission on a bi-partisan basis, having three republicans and three democrats with adequate salaries and broader powers to ensure men of expert knowledge and broad vision. The president is still given power, by this new provision, to modify rates either up or down to the extent of fifty per cent of the present duty when the findings of the new tariff commission justify such changes. It is a much more liberal provision than we have had heretofore, and the president can, with confidence, assure our foreign customers that they need not be alarmed over the possibilities of future trade with the United States. Our balance of trade, that is, the balance of exports over imports, gained steadily during the entire life of the Fordney-McCumber tariff bill of 1922. There is no reason why, with this new flexible provision, this present bill cannot be adjusted so that this trade balance may continue in our favor. The department of commerce report shows that the trade balance, the value of export over imports, in 1922, was $130,000,000 and in 1927 it amounted to $671,000,000, an increase of over four hundred per cent.

The records show that the same protests, both in number and intensity, were made against the Fordney-McCumber rates in 1922 that are being made today against the present rates of the Smoot-Hawley bill. These fears of our foreign friends can be allayed because a study of the facts shows clearly that in most cases they have no more grounds for apprehension today than they had eight years ago. With the passage of this new bill, the prices adjusted to the new rates can be established promptly, and business should become normal within a comparatively few months.

The purpose of this legislation is for the benefit of all our people by making possible the investment of American capital in American industries, in the employment of American labor upon a wage scale to maintain an American standard of living. The fullest employment of our labor is the supreme purpose of this legislation. Hence it looks primarily to increasing the employment of American labor rather than foreign labor, thereby insuring the purchasing power of our people, in the building up of the American market, which is the real test of prosperity, in which the entire nation, especially the farmer and the laborer will share.

The tariff will increase our foreign trade, without loss of revenue, notwithstanding the fact that under its provisions two thirds of all our imports will come in duty free. Through increased efficiency the cost of production will be reduced without reducing wages. Items on which the duty was increased, such as clothing, shoes and sugar, are selling lower than before the increase was made.

No rate changes were made in 66 per cent of the total items in the present law. Increases were made in 884 items and decreases in 235 items. The present tariff bill contains 3,293 items. Of these items, the rates on 2,171, or 66 per cent, are unchanged. Seventy-five items were transferred from the dutiable list to the free list and 48 items were transferred from the free list to the dutiable list.

Based on the imports during 1928, the computed ad valorem equivalent of the duties under the present law was 38.22 per cent. Under the pending bill the equivalent ad valorem is 40.08, showing an average increase for all items, agricultural and industrial, of 6.86 points.

The oposition of international bankers and American investors in foreign securities and in the establishment of plants in foreign countries, with American capital, is purely selfish, and cannot be considered by the legislator. I do not condemn these investments. While I prefer that they should employ American rather than foreign labor I am willing to concede the liberty of American citizens in such ventures. But the country will not permit the product of such industries to displace in the American market, the American labor employed in competition with underpaid foreign labor. Such imports must bear a duty which fairly covers the difference in cost of production between the two countries.

From this source arises most of the talk of retaliation. The facts are, that before the recent legislation, 31 countries had already adopted in some form or other the protective system on a sound economic policy, with no thought of retaliation, the prating of the importers journals notwithstanding. There has been no retaliatory legislation and it is not likely there will be any. Such talk may be good partisan policy but is never good economic sense. Countries legislate in their own interests, not to make an outlet for party spleen.

When all is said and done it must be remembered that our tariff legislation is for American interests, not foreign. In its adoption the interests of foreign countries were not considered to the detriment of American interests, nor was production in foreign countries from American capital allowed to influence against domestic production employing both American capital and American labor.

At this point it might be pertinent to ask, in whose favor are all of these efforts directed?

Obviously, for the benefit of the American workman; the American farmer; the American business man.

For the American workman that he may have employment and that his wages may be maintained even in times of depression.

For the American farmer that his domestic market may be preserved to him against the products of countries where lower wages and lower living standards prevail.

For the American business man that he may sell his goods without ruinous competition from countries where production costs are much lower due to lower living standards.

London Naval Treaty

Far-reaching steps for the promotion of peace and good will in the world have been taken during the present administration.

Foremost among these, and the greatest step toward peace in a decade, was the negotiation of the London Naval Limitation treaty, putting an end to competitive warship construction between the United States, Great Britain and Japan. Under this agreement, which was ratified by the senate by an overwhelming majority, the gross tonnage of all navies will be reduced; replacement of capital ships will be postponed at least until 1936; certain battleships now in commission will be de-commissioned with large savings in maintenance costs; the American cruiser fleet can be built up to parity with that of Great Britain, and obsolete destroyers and submarines replaced.

The so-called London Naval treaty between the United States, Great Britain, and Japan, declares for England and Japan a holiday in their naval building programs until 1936, and allows the United States to build up to the naval strength of Great Britain. Japan's strength at the end of this period is expected to be six-tenths the strength of England and six-tenths the strength of the United States. This means for the United States that we have the option for five years of building up our navy until we equal in tonnage and fighting strength Great Britain's navy, which is today the largest navy in the world. This would mean parity with Great Britain. Japan would maintain her navy approximately as it is until 1936, when, by terms of the treaty, the relative strength of the United States navy, compared with Japan, will be 10 to 6. There will be another conference in 1936 when the question of naval strength between these three countries will be again reviewed. Whether or not we have a navy equal to Great Britain's is going to depend entirely upon whether congress will be willing to appropriate the necessary money for the new construction, which amounts in round figures to slightly over one billion dollars or a little more than two hundred million dollars a year.

If we build fully up to the strength allowed by the terms of this new treaty, it is safe to say that we shall have by the end of 1935 a much larger navy than we would have if no such treaty had been considered, and without this treaty it is probable that both Great Britain and Japan would have kept on building to a point which would have left the United States conspicuously inferior in naval strength. This assumes that congress would not have appropriated for the full program of the Washington treaty of 1922.

The ratification of this new treaty of 1930 is the most substantial undertaking toward actual world peace and against war that has yet been concluded. It definitely removes the growing belief that we were becoming imperialistic in our ambitions. Our willingness to lead in a program of limitation not only makes possible limitation but in the end we hope reduction of armament. The treaty not only provides the element of safety through a parity of defensive equipment below the stage of aggression, but it puts an end to the dangerous and inevitable rivalry on the sea, which policy may in time open the way for a substantial reduction of armament on land.

There is nothing more certain than the determination of the United States to be equal upon the sea to any other sea power. Whether wise or otherwise, that is a policy upon which country will not yield. We have the interests to be protected. We have the ability to insure such protection; we have the will to make it effective. Unless we can by agreement such as the London Naval treaty contains, fix a limit, this rivalry will carry us to the stage of tax burdens unbearable with the threat of world conflict constantly impending. Before the World war our defensive equipment, although thought adequate, cost us less than half what it costs today in spite of our efforts at reduction of our military establishment. This does not include nearly one billion dollars annually expended to care for the specific results of the World war.

Finance

President Hoover in his first budget to congress held down federal expenditures to the same sum appropriated the year before under President Coolidge, and yet by shifting the expenditures he provided for the expansion of the merchant marine and internal waterways, and for increased services of the departments of labor, commerce and agriculture.

The wise financial policies of previous republican administrations have been carried forward under the direction of Andrew W. Mellon with the result that at the end of the first fiscal year of the Hoover administration there was a treasury surplus of $184,000,000.

From the beginning of the Hoover administration on March 4, 1929, to the end of the first fiscal year on June 30, 1930 the public debt had been reduced by an additional $1,160,000,000, making the total reduction under republican administration since March 1921, $7,864,218,000. The decrease during the Hoover administration has resulted in an additional saving in interest payments alone of over $40,000,000 per year. This means also that the government has adhered strictly to the sound and well-established republican policy of paying off the public debt as rapidly as the revenues will permit. Today the debt has been reduced to manageable proportions; and eventually as it is further scaled down the drain of debt interest on federal revenues will continue to be decreased and the country should be able to look forward to a corresponding reduction in federal taxes.

Debt Settlement

The pledge to carry out the established foreign debt policy was met by ratifying the settlement of the French debt of $4,000,000,000. This brings the total amount of such debts funded to $11,577,000,000 and completes the settlement of all foreign debts except those with Armenia, where there is no established government, and with Russia, the government of which is not recognized by the United States. During the periods specified in the agreements with the debtor nations, the United States should receive a total of $22,000,000,000 on account of principal and interest.

Public Buildings

Thus far, congress has appropriated $300,000,000 toward completion of the program for new public buildings, including $165,000,000 for the extensive construction program now in progress in Washington.

In this latter project a triangle extending the length of the south side of Pennsylvania avenue from the treasury to the botanical gardens, and four blocks deep at its greatest depth, is being cleared of its present structures to make way for monumental modern buildings which are to house the activities of the government.

President Hoover's principal aim in attempting to accelerate the entire program is to stimulate business.

United States As a World Power

The richness of the American home market, compared with the rest of the world combined, is difficult to comprehend. With only seven per cent of the world's population, the United States now consumes forty-two per cent of the world's iron production, forty-seven per cent of the copper, sixty-nine per cent of the crude petroleum, fifty-six per cent of the crude rubber, thirty-six per cent of the coal, fifty-three per cent of the tin, forty-eight per cent of the coffee, twenty-one per cent of the sugar, seventy-two per cent of the silk, and upward of eighty per cent of the automobiles.

The United States census estimates in 1922 placed our total national wealth at 320 billion dollars. Our total national wealth in 1928 was estimated at more than 360 billion dollars, an increase in six years of 40 billion dollars. At the beginning of the year 1921, our national debt was $24,049,000,000. The national debt today is $16,187,000,000, a decrease from February 1921 to August 1930 of $7,862,000,000 in ten years of republican administration.

The Allied war debts to the United States, prior to funding, amounted to nearly twelve billion dollars. This huge sum is to be paid back with interest over a period of sixty years. The annual interest this country received in 1925 on war debts accounts was 210 million dollars, while our net tourist expenditures abroad that same year were 525 million dollars and our immigrant remittances abroad, 189 million dollars. These two items, tourist expenditures and immigrant remittances, thus supplied to Europe almost three and one-half times as much as was paid back to us in war debts. This is a fair illustration of our close economic relationship with Europe and our dominating position as a world power in finance. It calls for great wisdom, generosity, and friendliness in our relations with Europe, but not for a voice in her political affairs.

Conclusion To National Administration

The American people will be glad to have a succinct statement as to accomplishments during the first year and a half of the republican administration under President Hoover. The program completed will include party pledges fulfilled, improvement in government service and law enforcement, a great constructive program entailing additional outlay with economy in administration permitting a reduction of taxes to the amount of one hundred and sixty million dollars; development of inland waterways, highways, merchant marine, conservation of our natural resources, maintenance of the republican principle of protective tariff, definite and long visioned relief to agriculture, a constructive program of social improvement, and a foreign policy looking to the consummation of world peace.

Prohibition

Connecticut is in no way responsible for the conditions resulting from the passage of the eighteenth amendment and the adoption of the Volstead act. The Connecticut legislature did not ratify this amendment. The Connecticut senators and representatives in congress voted against the amendment and against the Volstead Act.

The eighteenth amendment to the Constitution and the enabling act, known as the Volstead law, were adopted at a time of the greatest stress this country has known since the Civil war. More than ten years and many hundreds of millions of dollars have been spent in an attempt to enforce this law. The results in many ways have been disastrous. The bootlegging of intoxicating liquor is estimated today to be the fourth largest business in the United States. The high price of intoxicants has placed a tremendous premium upon law-breaking, and the technique of bootlegging has led from this into other lucrative fields, the illegal bringing in of immigrants, estimated at nearly a million immigrants last year, more than five times the total quotas, the diamond trade, the illegal killing and sale of game, the importation of narcotics, and white slaves. The net result is that there is an organized defiance of law and a concentration of wealth in the hands of a criminal class such as this country has never before seen.

It is claimed by many that the enforcement of the law has not yet been given a fair trial. But no one who knows anything of the facts can question the determination of President Hoover's administration in Washington to enforce the law to the utmost limit of the appropriations which can be made available. The enforcement division has been recently transferred from the treasury department to the department of justice. There has been a drastic reorganization in personnel of the enforcement division, and coincident with this determined attempt at the strictest enforcement, is the work which is being done by an exceedingly able commission appointed to study the whole problem of crime and law enforcement, particularly related to the eighteenth amendment. The report of this commission may be expected sometime next winter. It has gone into every phase of the question, the legislative, economic, and moral.

The administration at Washington can be trusted to get at the bottom of this desperately serious problem as quickly as possible, so that with the unvarnished facts before us and after a determined and drastic attempt at law enforcement we should know quite clearly which road leads most directly to temperance, which is the goal that every self-respecting and law-abiding citizen of the United States desires. In a word, we should know in a comparatively short time whether the control of intoxicants should be left with the federal government or the states, whether the eighteenth amendmnet should be retained or repealed or modified to make it merely permissive; whether the Volstead act should remain as it is or be modified, whether the federal government should undertake a dispensary system or leave the entire problem for the states to solve.

All that we know today is that the present situation is intolerable and that if we are to head again toward temperance and regain the respect for the law of the land, drastic action is necessary. The republican party is already pledged to remedy this situation, and I feel that we can trust the administration at Washington to effect the desired results as promptly as possible after determining the facts.

State Government

The United States department of commerce, for seven years under the direction of Herbert Hoover, has demonstrated clearly the importance of helpful cooperation between government and business. The department of commerce has helped immeasurably by cooperating with industrial groups and associations in the promotion of foreign trade, the elimination of waste by simplification and standardization, in the furtherance of economic and scientific research, and the improvement of the home. Commissions for the regulation of public utilities were created to prevent discrimination in service and extortion in rates. The Sherman law was enacted to hold open the door of equal opportunity in business.

So it has been with the state government of Connecticut for the last several years under the able administration of sound business executives. More complete cooperation than ever before has existed between the government and the people for the benefit of the people, which is the sole purpose of our form of government.

The exact reverse of our theory of government is being tested in Russia, where a vast experiment is being carried on, making the government supreme over the individual. The individuals are mere cogs in the wheel, subservient to the government.

Our ideals of government, both federal and state, is based upon equal opportunity to every citizen, and this is the negation of socialism. "It tolerates no privileged classes, castes, or groups, who would hold opportunity as their prerogative." "Only from confidence that this right will be upheld can flow that unbounded courage and hope which stimulate each individual man and woman to endeavor and to achievement. The sum of their achievement is the gigantic harvest of national progress." Equal opportunity is a fundamental principle of our nation. Equality of opportunity is the acid test for all of our policies.

The strength of the whole is equal to the sum of its parts. The federal government can never be better or wiser than the average administration of its component parts or states. We in Connecticut are jealous of our state rights which we intend to maintain and exercise to the fullest.

Let us analyze briefly in what respects this state has benefitted its citizens through government and how wisely the resources of the state, both financial and economic, have been conserved.

Finance

The financial condition of the state continues to be entirely satisfactory, new economies have been introduced, a budget system covering all departments has been effected and the state accounts are now so kept that they can be consolidated on short notice to reveal the exact condition of the state at any time. Estimates are now made by each department, covering a period of two years in advance, giving ample time to study carefully the needs of the various departments, determine where economies can be introduced, more efficient methods installed, and a more accurate budget system reached.

When the republican party came into control of the state affairs in 1914, the state of Connecticut owed approximately $14,000,000. The legislature of 1915 established a sinking fund for the reduction, and ultimate payment of this debt; this sinking fund has been accumulating ever since. On August 1, 1930, the state treasury had in its sinking fund, for the retirement of the debt, the sum of $15,199,000. These bonds come due as follows: On April 1, 1934, $2,955,000; on July 1, 1936, $13,366,000. During the year ending June 30, 1930, the income from investments from this sinking fund amounted to $647,940.63. By July 1, 1932, there will be sufficient money in the sinking fund to pay the entire bonded indebtedness and leave a balance in addition of approximately $200,000. During the year from April 1, 1933 to April 1, 1934, there will be an additional million dollars of income from the investments from this sinking fund. This is entirely apart from the current balance of the state.

The balance carried over at the end of the last fiscal year, June 30, 1930, amounted to $6,080,345.50, which is sufficient to cover all contracts for the new buildings and leave a balance of unallocated money mounting to $500,000. At the end of the previous fiscal year, June 30, 1929, the current balance of the state treasury was $3,316,805.42, notwithstanding the loss of income caused by a reduction in the state tax, amounting to $250,000 for each of the fiscal years, 1929 and 1930.

It is interesting to note the extraordinary improvements in the state's physical plant now in process of construction. During the last biennium period, the state spent $1,500,000 on additions to buildings and the state has let contracts during the last fiscal year of approximately $3,500,000 in new buildings, all of which will be completed by October 1, 1931. This means that in four years the state will have built the following: Five new buildings at the state farm for women; five at the Long Lane farm; one at the Shelton tubercular hospital; one at the Meriden tubercular hospital; one at the boy's school at Meriden; one at the Noroton Soldiers Home; two at the Norwich insane asylum.

Two weeks ago contracts were let in the sum of approximately $1,000,000 for the first nine buildings of the Newtown state hospital for the insane. By the next biennium period this plant should be complete enough for use, thus relieving the congestion which now exists at Norwich and Middletown.

The new state office building is now being erected at a cost of $2,500,000. This will relieve the congestion in the capitol due to the growing demands of the state and the extraordinary growth of the motor vehicles department which we believe the most advanced, forward-looking department of its kind in the United States.

We believe that with the present building program already inaugurated, and well under way, for our humane institutions, that Connecticut's humane institutions will compare favorably with those of any state in the United States.

Connecticut has an enviable reputation for the character and beauty of her highways. It is generally conceded that there are no better roads in the country than we find here in our own state. This department, as well as the motor vehicle department, is entirely supported by revenues received from the owners of motor vehicles and the users of gasoline. The state's gasoline tax is fair and not as high as many other states. Our registration fees are moderate and with the receipts from these sources, including fines and license fees, fully pay the cost of our highway construction and maintenance and the operation of our motor vehicle department.

During the fiscal year of 1929 and 1930 the receipts from the above-named sources were $14,464,480.33 and the disbursements $14,317,625.86, divided as follows: For highway department, $13,601,341.93; for motor vehicle department, $716,283.93; leaving a balance of receipts over disbursements of $146,000.

The state highway department has been able to afford a landscape department for the care of roadside flowers, shrubs, and trees, and the beautification of our roadways. Connecticut's example in this respect has been followed by several other states. Several thousand of the more objectionable advertising signs along the highways have been removed and the beauties of most of the more picturesque turns in the road revealed.

The fact that each year shows a marked gain in the automobile mileage over our roads is the best indication of their increasing usefulness and the public's approval and appreciation of the work which the motor vehicle and highway departments have done in regulating traffic and placing Connecticut's roads in the best possible condition. State aid roads are now opening up the isolated farming sections and Connecticut's efforts at keeping the roads passable in winter have given her highway department a nation-wide reputation.

The State Department Of Health

The state department of health attempts to cooperate with local health officers through its personnel of physicians trained in public health, sanitary engineers, skilled laboratory workers, experienced public health nurses and through the bureaus and divisions of the department keeps the health officers, physicians and others interested in public health, informed about public health matters in Connecticut.

Much of the department of health activity is necessarily carried on behind the scenes, such as the work by the laboratory in which a corps of thirty people carry out over 120,000 examinations annually in assisting physicians and public health workers so that Connecticut's health may be good. Major activities in the department are divided into seprate bureaus or divisions, these being at the present time administration, preventable diseases, vital statistics, laboratory, sanitary, engineering, child hygiene, public health nursing, public health instruction, venereal diseases, occupational diseases and mental hygiene. The major effort of the department is always along the lines designated by its motto, "For a Clean State and a Healthy People." And the department appropriation is expended on this line, none of it going for institutional or hospital control activities. In recent years Connecticut has recognized the desirability of work along the lines of occupational diseases and mental hygiene, with the result that increased appropriations were given to the department for mental hygiene work, and occupational disease work activities were started in 1927.

Treatment Of Tuberculosis

The state administration recognizes the necessity of additional accommodations for the care and treatment of tuberculosis. On this account the last general assembly appropriated money for two new buildings, an infirmary for one hundred adult patients at Shelton and an infirmary at Meriden for one hundred children, at a cost of $180,000, including the site. Both of these buildings are nearly completed and when completed, Connecticut will be one of five states which has developed its care of tubercular patients to the point of supporting as many beds as deaths from tuberculosis, under state care, the preceding year.

Conservation

The conservation of the state's natural resources has been progressing rapidly. The state, during the last ten years, has accumulated several forests, which aggregate more than fifty-four thousand acres. These forests are being maintained and the waste lands reforested along scientific principles. They will eventually prove an important asset to the state. They are important today to the people of the state from a recreational point of view and the protection of our fresh water supply.

The state now owns and leases the fishing rights on more than one hundred and twenty miles of our best trout streams, and annually stocks these streams with mature fish up to the capacity of the streams food supply for the enjoyment of the anglers of whom there are approximately fifty thousand within the state.

The fish and game department is now self-supporting from the sale of licenses, with the exception of an occasional capital expenditure for a new building, and a small administrative appropriation which has to be taken from the general fund.

The state water commission has made phenomenal headway in educating the public conscience to the importance of keeping our fresh water supply clean and avoiding waste. Many industrial plants and most of the larger cities of the state have cooperated to the limit of their available resources in the scientific treatment and disposal of both domestic and industrial waste and sewage. A sectional movement for the removal of sewage from our fresh water streams, lakes and rivers is now being considered and Connecticut will undoubtedly be an important factor in this regional movement because of the example she has already set and her determination to clean up and conserve her fresh and salt water areas.

Conclusion

These accomplishments have required persistent effort along the lines of sound policy but no record such as this can be made without leaders, men of vision, character, courage and ability. The people of Connecticut are to be congratulated for having chosen such men during this reconstruction period of the last fifteen years. Much credit must be given to the state central committee for its unflagging interest in, and its unselfish devotion to the building up of an organization whose chief aim has been to do whatever is best for Connecticut. To the presiding genius and executive head of this organization we owe much. To the governor who has guided the ships of state along her course for six years with unflagging interest and great skill, as the record demonstrates, we owe a deep debt of gratitude. Upon the other officials we bestow our sincerest thanks.

Now delegates to this convention, upon your shoulders rests the grave responsibility of nominating men who, by character, ability, courage, and vision, measure up to the great privilege of taking part in the further administration and development of this beautiful, healthful, prosperous state of ours, Connecticut; we love her!

SOME HIGHLIGHTS OF KEYNOTE ADDRESS BY SENATOR WALCOTT

HARTFORD, Sept. 15—(AP)—In the keynote address of Senator Walcott at the republican state convention, here tonight, were these points:

Connecticut not responsible for conditions under 18th amendment. Its senators and representatives opposed both amendment and Volstead act.

Conditions under prohibition intolerable, drastic action necessary, and administration can be trusted to act promptly when facts are determined by crime commission.

In discussion of state affairs points were:

Financial condition of Connecticut continues satisfactory, new economics introduced, budget system effected.

State sinking fund of $15,199,000 to pay debt of $14,000,000 which republicans received in 1914 as legacy from democrats.

Balance on June 30 was $6,080,345, sufficient to cover all contracts for new buildings and leave half million dollars over.

Building program calls for $3,500,000, and $1,500,000 also spent for new buildings.

With its building program for humane institutions Connecticut will compare favorably with any other state.

No better roads anywhere than here. Gasoline tax and registration fees fair to owners, and revenues pay for highway construction and operation of motor vehicle department.

State aid roads, and snow clearing of roads give state nation-wide reputation.

Care of the tubercular, and conservation of natural resources places state in fore front.

People to be congratulated on ability of men who have carried through reconstruction of last 15 years.

Credit due republican state committee for its unselfish devotion in building up an organization whose chief aim had been Connecticut's good.

Debt of gratitude owed to Gov. Trumbull for his interest and skill.

WAS SLAVE TO LAXATIVES

If you have constipation, read this letter from Mr. John J. Mulligan, 800 So. Cicero Avenue, Chicago, Ill.:

"I tried numerous remedies in vain. Finally in desperation, I turned to Kellogg's ALL-BRAN. The results were remarkable—in fact the next day long-hoped-for relief became a happy reality."

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is now improved in texture and taste. As good to eat as it is healthful.

Two tablespoons daily are guaranteed to prevent and relieve both temporary and recurring constipation. In stubborn cases, use ALL-BRAN with each meal. ALL-BRAN also supplies needed iron to the system.

Delicious with milk or cream, fruits or honey added. At all grocers in the red-and-green package. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

POETRY

If

If you are sighing for a lofty work,
  If great ambitions dominate your mind,
Just watch yourself and see you do not shirk
  The common little ways of being kind.

If you are dreaming of a future goal,
  When crowned with glory men shall own your power,
Be careful that you let no struggling soul
  Go by unaided in the present hour.

If you are moved to pity for the earth,
  And long to aid it, do not look so high
You pass some poor dumb creature faint with thirst.
  All life is equal in the eternal eye.

If you would help to make the wrong things right,
  Begin at home; there lies a lifetime's toil.
Weed your own garden fair for all men's sight,
  Before you plan to till another's soil.

God chooses his own leaders in the world,
  And from the rest he asks but willing hands.
As mighty mountains into place are hurled,
  While patient tides may only shape the sands.

—Ella Wheeler Wilcox (1855-1919)

The Letters

At evening, when the lamps are lit,
  And fires are burning clear and bright,
Our mother says: "Come now, and help
  To get the letters off tonight."

We are her letters, Jean and I,
  And Coralie and little Paul,
She always fixes him the first,
  Cos he's the smallest of us all.

First she puts on our envelopes,
  Those are our nighties, long and white;
And then she stamps each with a kiss,
  And buttons us, and seals us tight.

And next we slip between the sheets,
  They are the mailbags, big and wide!
And all the letters shut their eyes,
  As soon as they are safe inside.
And soon they're traveling through the night,
  To Fairy-land so dim, and then,
When morning comes with golden light,
  They all come traveling back again.

—Madeleine Reid, in Detroit Free Press.

HUMOR OF THE DAY

"An awful lot of girls are struck on me."

"Yes, they must be an awful lot."—Boston Transcript.

"My uncle has committed suicide and left me six million."

"Heavens! Think what you'll have to pay in income tax!"—Gutierrez.

Myrtle Dove—Why, your heart sounds like a drum beating.

Fonda Love—Yes, that is the call to arms.—The Pathfinder.

Dramatist—Why are you going away already? There are three more acts to come!

Guest—Sorry, that's why I'm going away.—Pages Gaies.

London Curio Dealer: "Yes, this is the very handkerchief used by the father of William Penn."

"Hmm, the original penwiper."—Illinois Central Magazine.

"Did you ever hear the story of Ben Hur?"

"No."

"There was once a woman who found ten thousand dollars. How would you like to have Ben Hur?"—The Ink Spot.

"Was that you singing, Paddy?" demanded the foreman of the road gang.

"Yes," said Paddy. "Why?"

"Well, don't hang on to the top notes so long," said the foreman. "Two of the men have gone home thinking it was the mid-day hooter."—Cumberland Evening News.

Tramp—I've asked for money, I've begged for money and I've cried for money, lady.

Lady—Have you ever thought of working for it, my man?

Tramp—No, not yet, mum. You see, I'm going through the alphabet and I ain't got to W yet.—Warrington Examiner.

Because Lester Morrow was careless in the way he hung pictures on the walls of his home on Okemah, Okla., he served a thirty-day jail sentence and paid a $450 fine. When Sheriff Wes Kennedy visited Morrow he stopped to straighten the likeness of Morrow's baby. When he moved the picture he discovered fifteen half-pint bottles of whiskey in a hole in the wall. County Judge Stephenson fined Morrow and gave him the jail sentence.

SENSATIONAL DISCOVERY

GIVES YOUR COMMUNITY A NEW DELIGHT TOMORROW!

New Discovery by Pilgrim Bakers Brings You New Bread With Finer Flavor

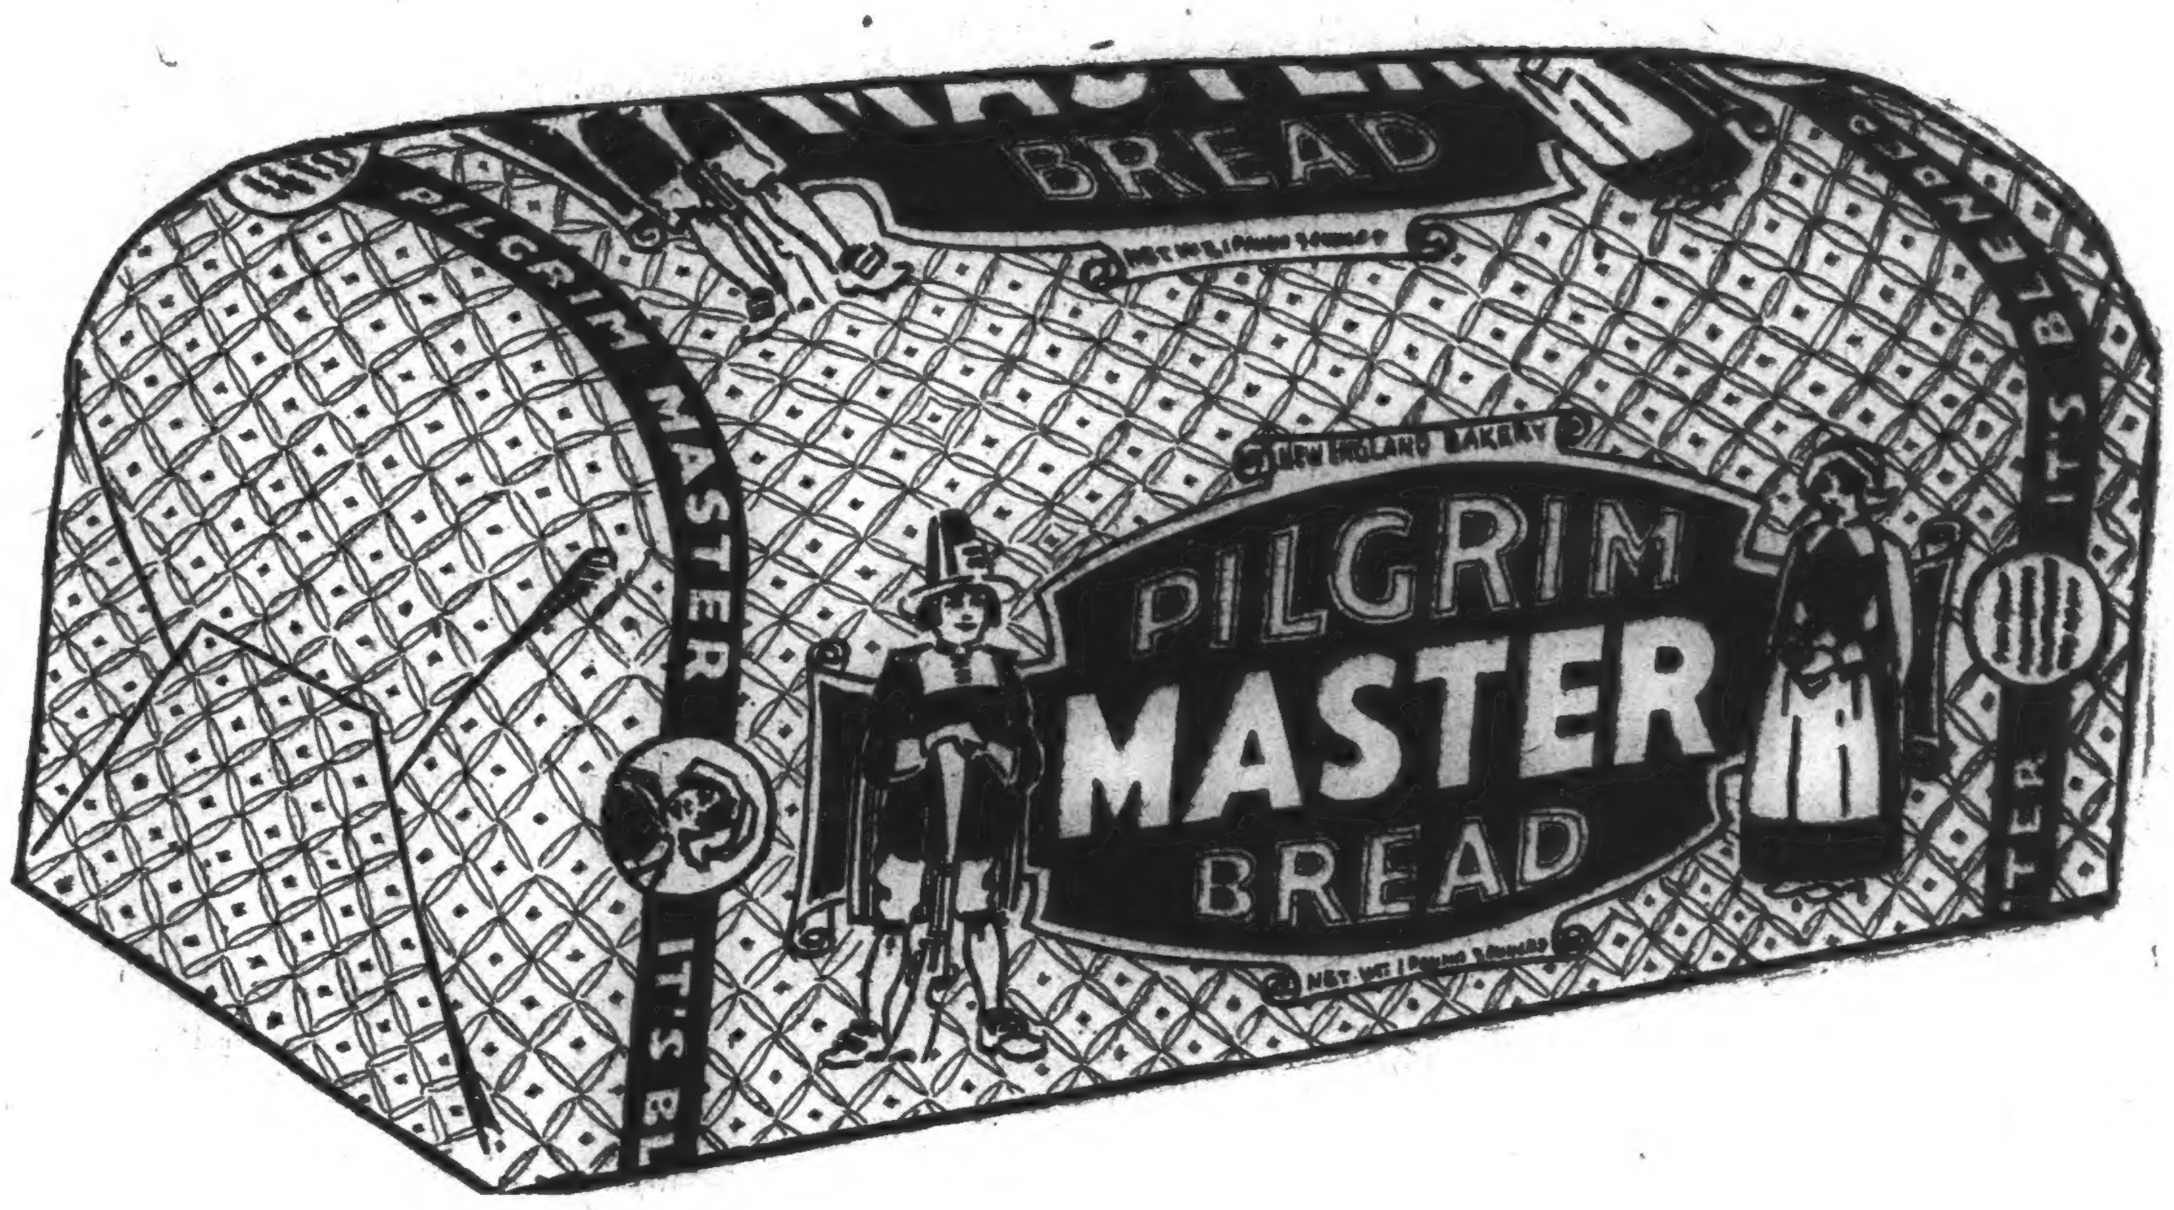
After years of research, testing and tasting famous home recipes, the Pilgrim bakers announce a great achievement — MASTER bread — the finest bread in years of baking. This new bread is BLENDED — a magic method of baking that means much to you

WHAT BLENDING IS

BLENDING is the harmonious mixing of choice ingredients — to obtain the full natural food value, and full-flavored goodness of each tiny food cell.

RICHER FLAVOR — MORE NOURISHMENT

BLENDING gives new MASTER bread the good, old-fashioned flavor of nature's finest foods in their most appetizing form.



BLENDING combines the richest and purest ingredients, releasing for you the fullest nourishment and most appetizing flavor in each tiny morsel.

GREATER VALUE

Your whole family will soon notice the difference between MASTER bread and ordinary breads. They will like the nut-sweet, golden-crusted loaves, the true, richer flavor of this new bread.

You will find BLENDED MASTER bread worth more for the money than any other bread, because they will prefer MASTER bread to other more expensive foods.

AT YOUR GROCERS

Tomorrow your grocer will have this new Pilgrim Master bread for you, oven-fresh — a loaf of genuine old time goodness! It's BLENDED.

Don't forget the name — Pilgrim Master bread — our master achievement in all our years of baking. Call your grocer early — there may not be enough to go around.

HEAVINESS OF GRAINS SENT PRICES DOWN IN DULL SESSION OF THE MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—(AP)—Persistent heaviness of the grains, combined with a few other news items subject to unfavorable interpretation in speculative quarters, played into the hands of the bears on the stock market today and prices declined in quiet trading.

The selling, in evidence from the opening, came from professional sources and although net losses ranged from 1 to 3 points in the important shares, Wall street was probably as much interested in the yacht race as in the course of quotations. Most of the losses had developed by mid-day, at which time the shorts began to encounter increasing difficulty at keeping the market moving. There was some short covering in the late afternoon, but final prices were mostly around the lowest. Sales in the last 50 minutes amounted to less than 250,000 shares and the total volume to 1,562,000.

One of the outstanding developments in the day's markets was the break in September wheat to 79 1-8c, the lowest since 1914.

Although the grain showed some recovery from the bottom, closing prices on the various futures were quarter to half cent net lower. Corn sagged 5-8 to 1-8, reflecting a poor cash demand. Cotton finished 3 points lower to 2 points higher, an extremely moderate range.

Some of the early selling on the stock market may have been due to apprehensions over the political situation in Germany. Some of the European boards were weak, especially the Berlin bourse, and holders of the short position here, casting about for clouds on the horizon, doubtless capitalized the German election results.

The fact that stocks, in making their recovery Saturday, had been unable to regain last Friday's losses, was also brought forward as a bearish argument. Of more importance was the uneasiness of copper, for one custom smelter cut to 10 1-2c, a quarter cent below recent levels. Prominent producers were also said to be willing to take 10 3-4 cents, likewise a concession of 1-4 cent. Sales were small at the lower price.

One prominent banker-economist, whose views attract the financial community's attention, said he saw evidence that a turn in business was in the making, pointing to the strength of bonds and the apparent arrest of the decline in commodity prices as among the significant indices. Other commentators were of the opinion that while conditions were doubtless improving, it would be well to see whether the gains were more than seasonal.

The usual quarterly combination of the treasury financing and the income tax payments found banking circles prepared for the turnover of considerably more than a billion dollars. The treasury's overdraft at the federal reserve was estimated at around $225,000,000, but the central bank was understood to have sold participations in this accommodation to large banks having surpluses at the federal. Call money eased to 2 per cent and funds were available in the outside market at 1 1-2.

Utility, merchandising shares and steel shares, as well as the coppers and specialties, led the decline on the stock exchange. U. S. Steel sold 6 points under the high for the recovery, made a week ago, closing off 2 3-8. American Can lost 3 points net. General Electric, Kennecott, American Smelting, Standard Oil of New Jersey, American Telephone, Radio, International Harvester, Vanadium, Auburn Auto, Woolworth and Johns Manville yielded 1 to 2. Autostrop Safety Razor rallied 5 points on revival of the Gillette merger rumor and closed 3 5-8 points higher. Warner Brothers Pictures closed strong, more than a point higher.

Foreign exchanges were irregular, featured by further heaviness of sterling and by easiness of the German mark.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—(AP)—Uncertainty over the political situation in Germany following the general election brought a wave of selling of dollar bonds of the republic and industrials on the New York Stock exchange today.

The new German international 5 1-2s were the most heavily traded issue, reacting 1 7-8 to reach the lowest quoted price since it appeared, and German 7s sagged to a new year's low. Agricultural Bank bonds and several industrial bonds moved to a point or more lower.

Despite the reduction of call money rates to 2 per cent, the volume of business was the smallest in several weeks, and changes were narrow, with the preponderance on the upside. The brightest spot in the domestic section was United States governments. Buying interest centered in treasury issues and treasury 4 1-4s, 4s and 3 3-4s made the best gains.

Some observers were inclined to attribute the slackening in business—the total volume of sales was $6,936,000—to the large volume of new offerings last week. Today's new issues approximated $5,000,000 with two offerings for tomorrow totalling $22,500,000. Consumers Power Co. is offering $20,000,000 4 1-2 per cent mortgage bonds, and Twin States Natural Gas Co. will issue $2,500,000 6 per cent convertible debentures.

A few railroad and utility bonds profited from a good demand. Brooklyn Manhattan 6s, St. Paul 4 3-4s, and United Drug of Delaware 5s, were the most active domestic bonds. St. Paul issue reached a new high for the year on a gain of 1 1-8 and a similar advance was registered by Erie 5s of 1967.

Small changes occurred in the stock privilege group, buying being centered in several railroad convertibles.

In addition to the sharp reaction that developed in German bonds, some of the south American issues worked lower. Several Chilean, Brazil and Colombian municipal and industrial issues sagged. Further recovery was made by Argentine, Peruvian and Uruguayan issues. In the European section, French 7s and British 5 1-2s duplicated their recent year's highs and closed firm.

THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—(AP)—Active curb stocks lost ground today as sentiment appeared to be overwhelmingly on the selling side. Practically the whole list was affected. About two dozen of the most active stocks yielded a point or more. Among the different groups, utilities were most uniformly weak, although their losses were overshadowed by some of the industrials. Trading was in small blocks of stock principally, and the day's transactions totaled 335,600 shares.

The weight of offerings carried stocks down to their lowest point around noon. A feeble attempt was made during the afternoon to force a change of trend. A few stocks made an about face to regain some ground and closed above the day's low but the general list failed to respond.

Technicolor, off 3 1-8, U. S. Foil B, and Diamond Match were among the industrials which closed at the year's lowest figures. Missouri Kansas Pipe Line was under pressure until late afternoon, touching new low ground for 1930, but turned upward near the close, finishing 7-8 lower. Driver Harris yielded 3 3-4 on a small turnover, and Aluminum of America, American Laundry Machine, Safeway Stores about 3 points each.

Electric Bond & Share, which was well supported around 82 throughout most of last week, led the decline of utilities, breaking to 80 3-4 during the forenoon, and finishing at 81 1-4, off 1 5-8. American & Foreign Power, American Gas & Electric, United Light & Power A, and Central Public Service closed about 1 point lower. Short covering operations carried Duke Power up 5 points on a small turnover. American Super Power and Niagara Hudson were steady.

Petroleum issues were little affected by the bearish activity. Standard Oil of Ohio reappeared in trading to rise 1 point, while other Standard issues held firm. Vacuum was fairly active and finished 1-4 lower. Humble reacted 1 1-8. Cities Service fluctuated narrowly and closed steady.

Goldman Sachs was the weak spot in the investment and holding companies group, selling off 1 point. Ungerleider Financial Corp. moved against the trend, to gain 5-8. Others in the group were little changed.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, Sept. 15.—(AP)—In a deluge of selling, wheat prices today plunged below 80c a bushel, touching the bottom-most level since 1907, barring only 1914. Word that a big increase of the United States visible wheat supply had brought the total up to a new high record did much to pull the market down. Selling was also induced by an official statement that $30,000,000 bank credit which the grain stabilization corporation had obtained would be used to refinance the corporation's present holdings of wheat and not for new purchasing.

Despite early upturns in quotations, wheat closed unsettled at nearly the day's lowest point, 1-4a3-4c under Saturday's finish. Corn closed 3-8a 1 1-8c off, oats varying from 7-8c decline to 1-8c advance, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 10c.

Provisions rose on account of scattered demand from previous sellers.

SEVEN PERMITS FOR CONSTRUCTION WORK GRANTED DURING PAST WEEK

During the past week there were seven building permits granted at the office of Fire Marshal Henry R. Taft but all were for small jobs of alteration with the exception of two which were for garages. Few of the contractors have many large contracts on hand most of the work at the present time being small alterations and garages. The latest contract in Norwich or vicinity is the new county home on the Norwich-Groton road near the State hospital. This contract is well along and the Providence concern is now engaged in finishing the interior. It is expected that the home will be ready some time within the next month or six weeks.

The permits issued by Fire Marshal Taft are as follows:

To Louis A. DeGrenier to erect a frame two-car garage in the rear of 541 Main street for himself. The garage will be 20x20 feet with concrete foundation and frame superstructure. The estimated cost is $375.

To Mrs. C. A. Hatgidek to erect a frame one-car garage on Hammond avenue. The garage will be 8x14 feet and will have a cement foundation and frame superstructure. The estimated cost is $100.

To the Peck McWilliams company to put in a new store front in the building at 189 Main street owned by the Shannon estate. The front of the building will be slightly altered and the doorway and plate glass windows will be re-arranged. The estimated cost is $800.

To Lucius Briggs to alter the present frame porch at 253 Broadway and to cut through a door from the porch. The estimated cost is $300.

To Walter Machiniak to erect a frame henhouse in the rear of his home on Mohegan Park road. The henhouse will be 8x10 feet and will be built on stone piers. It will be of frame construction throughout. The estimated cost is $50.

To Germania Lodge to make alterations to their building on Market street. The alterations will include the finishing of the boiler room in plaster board, the re-planking of a platform in the rear of the building and the cutting of a door from the dance hall to the fire escape. The estimated cost is $300.

To Andrew Kowolenko to build an addition 9x9 feet onto the present frame barn at 79 Roosevelt avenue. The addition will be entirely of frame construction. The estimated cost is $10.

REAL ESTATE SALES AND MORTGAGE LOANS

During the past week there were only four sales of real estate which was a decrease of nine sales from the corresponding week in 1929. The mortgage loans for the respective weeks were $189,350 and $26,500.

In New London during the past week there were four sales of real estate as compared to twelve sales for the same week a year ago. The mortgage loans for the respective weeks were $11,900 and $58,578.

NEW LONDON

The new administration building of the Connecticut College for Women has been completed and equipment for the various offices and class rooms was moved in this week. No date has been set yet for a dedication of the building but it is expected this will be done before the college resumes its classes later this month.

The new building represents a substantial addition to the several buildings now located on the campus. It is located 125 feet south of New London hall. It is of granite and steel construction with limestone trim and cement base roof covered with slate.

The building is 155 feet by 50 feet in dimension and four stories high. The design is similar to that of the other college buildings. The cost is placed at $275,000.

The first floor contains class rooms, storage rooms, day student rooms, locker rooms and sitting rooms. The second floor contains the administration offices, including a suite of offices for the president and the offices of the graduating secretary, personnel director and bursar.

The third floor contains eight class rooms, the faculty room, cloak room and kitchenette. The fourth floor contains lecture rooms.

Ground for the new building was broken Oct. 18, 1929. The contract was awarded to the H. Wales Lines company. The old administration building is now being remodeled and will be used as a science hall.

The plastering has been completed in the edifice being built for the Zion Evangelical Lutheran church at Cedar Grove avenue and Ledyard street. The exterior of the church building has been finished and painted white.

The church is an attractive structure of colonial design and frame construction with the front entrance in Cedar Grove avenue. It is one and one half stories high and 39 by 79 feet in dimension.

Broad concrete steps will lead to the beautiful colonial entrance. The sides are of colonial clapboard and the roof is finished with wooden shingles. On top of the roof is located a lantern structure with copper sheathing. A cross is located over the front of the church

Total number of permits issued for the week, 7; estimated cost of buildings, $10,000.

CONN. BUILDING UNDERGOES BOOM DURING AUGUST

One of the most remarkable building booms ever to occur in Connecticut took place in the month of August, according to the monthly building survey conducted through the office of E. L. Taylor, industrial commissioner of the New Haven railroad. Coming after months of subnormal activity, the August figures indicate a refreshing, optimistic improvement, showing a gain of more than six million dollars over July in the building permits granted by the twenty-two cities and towns reported upon in the survey

Increases over July were shown in the building permits issued by fifteen of the twenty-two communities. They were as follows: Bridgeport, Derby, Greenwich, Hamden, Hartford, Meriden, New Britain, New Haven, Norwich, Stamford, Stratford, Torrington, Wallingford, Waterbury and West Haven. New Haven headed the list for the month with building permits valued at $5,314,958, a figure made possible by the $4,350,000 permit granted to Yale university for the erection of the new Payne Whitney gymnasium. Hartford held second place with Stamford third.

August permits also revealed a marked gain over those issued in August, 1929. This was the first time this year that any month has shown an increase over the corresponding month of last year. The gain amounted to nearly four and one-half millions. Nine of the twenty-two communities participated in this increase. They were Derby, Hartford, New Haven, Norwich, Stamford, Stratford, Torrington, Wallingford and West Haven. Comparative figures for August, 1930, and August, 1929, are given as follows:

City	Aug. 1930	Aug. 1929
Bristol	$28,927	$ 56,530
Bridgeport	191,755	238,713
Danbury	52,555	238,090
Derby	175,450	39,250
Greenwich	487,600	854,875

NEW WINDOW SHADES CAN BE LAUNDERED

Window shades, like other home-making elements, are feeling the effects of the modern urge. In other words they are being made far more durable than the old-time shades and now they are being manufactured in washable materials. That should be good news to the woman who looks with dismay on those soiled streaks which come in time to most window shades, especially when it is a family custom to keep them pulled about half way down. When it is necessary to draw them lower a grimy streak shows and it is anything but pleasing.

Be reassured to learn, however, that the new types can be cleaned with a damp cloth wrung out in soapy water. Once the soiled streak is washed away another wiping with a cloth dipped in clean water and then wrung out will complete the task. The entire shade can be cleaned, of course, by the same means and quite frequently it is found necessary to clean shades, even in the most orderly and well-kept homes. Winter months with the smoke from scores of chimneys fouling the atmosphere are responsible for a considerable amount of grime collecting on curtains, while the ordinary dust scuffed up in the ordinary house deposits a considerable amount of dust on the surfaces of window shades, even when the housewife is positive that frequent operations with a vacuum cleaner keep the rugs absolutely dust-proof. There is no such thing as a dust-proof rug, no more than there is such a place as "Spotless Town." For that reason window shades which can be home-laundered should exert more than ordinary appeal with women who take pride in the neatness of their home.

DOMESTIC ORIENTALS GAIN IN POPULARITY

Domestic oriental rugs, both in large and small sizes, are gaining in popularity because of their rich colors and unusual designs.

They are made by the same process as the real orientals and will wear just as well.

For the bedroom which has taken on its summer attire a hooked or braided rug is appropriate.

Gay colors to give the room a light and cool appearance are seen in these rugs, and any color scheme may be carried out.

These rugs are especially well suited in rooms where furniture after the early American designs is used.

Used Over Marble.

In Greece the plastering art was perfected more than five centuries before Christ. Plaster of fine white, strong quality was used on both exterior and interior surfaces. Plaster was even used over marble as a ground for decorative painting.

Through the ages plaster and ornamental textures have been intimately a part of building construction. During the Italian renaissance, beginning about 1450 A. D., the artistic character of decorated plaster surface materials was showing great improvements. In Italy, Spain, France and England there developed many of the textures which are most interesting. Methods of early people improved with time and some fine textures and ornamental work were done in plaster and plastic compositions.

STRENGTH, INSULATION IN NEW STUCCO BASES

Whether it be on buildings which rise above the Gulf shores or on those buildings whose walls are constantly subjected to northern weather—stucco proves to be an artistic and practical material for exterior walls when applied over a strong and enduring base.

Stucco is economical, does away with painting, saves fuel bills, is fire resistive, eliminates costly repairs and makes the home attractive. But time has found that these qualities cannot be secured to any satisfactory degree unless a strong steel reinforcing base is used.

Both this strength and insulation are supplied in metal lath. The material nails directly to studding. A lighter grade is made for interior plaster.

NEW SCHOOL HOUSE AT COUNTY HOME

The above is the new school building at the New County Home near the Norwich State hospital. This school building has been completed for some time before the main home building is ready for occupation. The school is large and of brick and fireproof construction. The exterior is in red brick with concrete under pinning. The windows which are large afford plenty of sunlight for the class rooms. The building is connected with the main building of the home by a brick and concrete passageway so that on stormy days the children will not have to go out of doors. The building is heated from the main heating plant in the main building.

HEIGHT OF LIGHT GOVERNS GLEAM

If an abundance of light is desired on the table a dome will produce the desired effect, but care should be taken that it is hung quite low so that the bright light is directed on the table top and not in the eyes; an inch or two in the hanging height makes a vast difference between poor and good lighting. Even an antiquated dome may be rehung for satisfaction if this principle is kept in mind.

If your table is large and a round one, the base of the dome may be a little higher above the table than is ordinarily recommended which is about 26 inches from the table top.

If, on the other hand, such an abundance of light centered upon the table is not necessary some type of fixture such as an inverted bowl will give an evenness of light throughout the room. This however does not draw the interest to the table which is the focal point in the room.

The candelabra has become not only an accepted means of dining room lighting but a very pleasing one, especially when candles are used on the table, this having a logical unity with candles above. The candelabra fixture would be more satisfactory if it always carried shades, yet it is not uncommon to find bare lamps in it. This also gives a rather even intensity of light throughout the room. Candle light is, of course, too great a luxury for use in the average home. Remember that it costs about four times as much to burn candles as to burn four 25-watt lamps and only about one-twentieth of the light will be had from them.

Outlets Important

In planning the dining room, convenient outlets will be most desirable. One beneath the table for the attachment of the electric percolator, toaster, or waffle iron will be convenient, and it is possible to get a connector which may be fastened to the dining room table allowing the "plugging in" of three devices.

Outlets for the attachment of portable lamps are also advisable because here, too, do we find the indispensable lamp adding its touch of warmth and cheer to the dining room. Used in balanced pairs they will be found particularly attractive on serving tables or buffets.

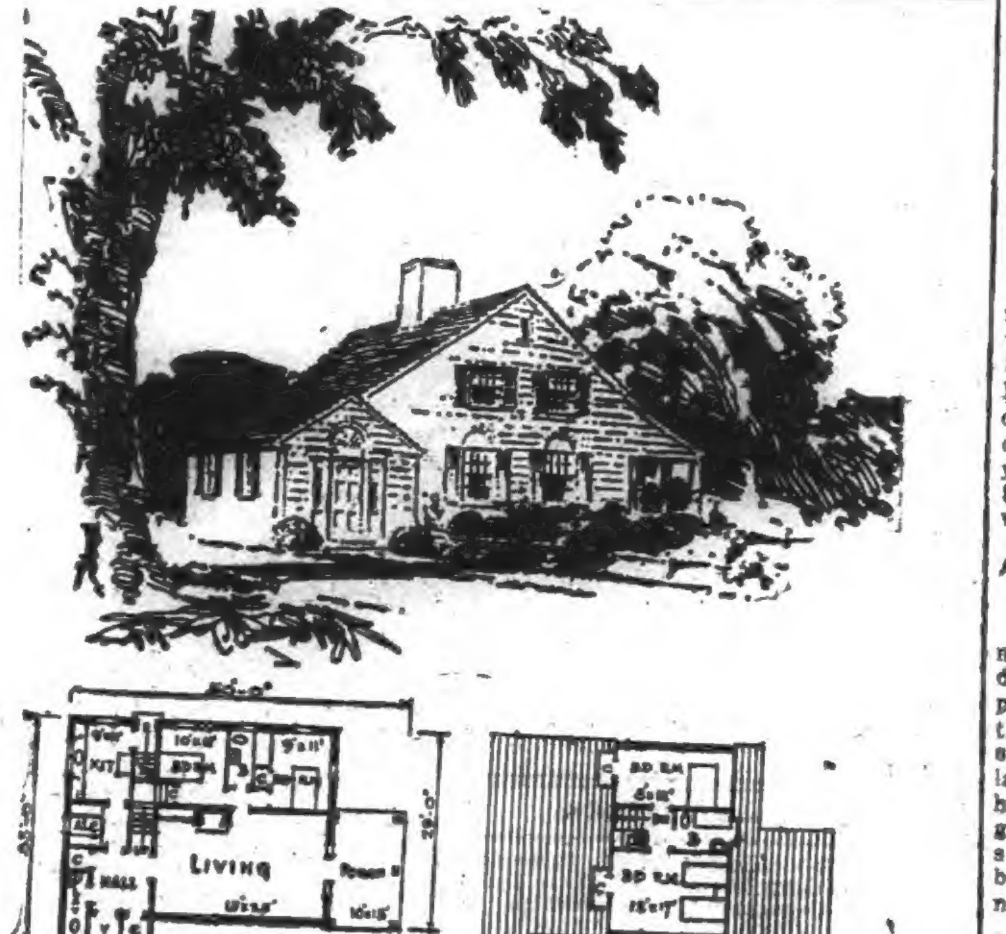
Wall brackets are most attractive in the dining room and will do much to supplement the lighting, particularly where a dining room dome has been installed.

UP-KEEP OF STUCCO.

Stucco has a low up-keep cost, that is, very little painting or other similar expense. Over the years it pays for itself, in saving of up-keep. It should be considered an investment, not an expense, because it adds to the value of the property more than its cost, and because it cuts down the future expense of up-keep.

In addition to this the stucco closes up the old openings which the years have brought and makes the building more comfortable, and saves fuel.

Colonial Charm Pervades House of Sturdy Lines



Perhaps the most praiseworthy architecture of the day is that which acknowledges precedent, but does not imitate.

Here is a design with strong colonial tendencies, but it is twentieth century American before it is colonial. There is a sturdiness about it that follows the early farmhouse type and recalls colonial tradition, but the design and detail are entirely modern.

On the second floor the two bedrooms are conveniently arranged with the stairs and bath.

The first floor, also with two bedrooms and bath, makes for a plan seldom seen in colonial designs. The dining alcove in this case is accessible from the hall instead of the living room.

The rear entry gives access to basement and kitchen, and this feature eliminates an exterior cellar door and stairs. Elimination of the dining room gives opportunity for the additional bedroom.

To give sunlight to all principal rooms, this house should face either south or west. The exterior is of shingles or clapboard painted white, while shutters would be dark blue or green, with the chimney painted white with black top.

Landscaping of course is highly important to all colonial houses, and flowers should line the path to the entrance, flanked by two box bushes with flowering shrubs along the wall.

A lot 75 by 100 feet is large enough, although 100 by 100 feet allows greater opportunity for the desired setting.

Such a house would cost between $9,000 and $10,000 in most communities, the actual figure of course varying with costs in different parts of the country.

WALL LIGHTS GIVE MANY BENEFITS

The desire to have light at night is frequent and its uses manifold. While there may be no need for light at all one can now enjoy the assurance and comfort of knowing that illumination is near should he happen to need it.

Here is a light which covers all the requirements for light at night and comfortable light too—guaranteed not to shine in anyone's eyes or to be annoying in any way. And it is such a joy to the "night walker" too, because it illuminates only the floor, so sufficiently that in his sleepy state he doesn't stumble into things, and it doesn't ruffle his disposition nor make him squint his eyes when lighted as would the other light sources if turned on in the bedroom when the eyes have been all quieted down for sleep.

This light may be had by simply attaching a wall receptable with a medium screw base socket to any part of the underneath frame work of the bed. Fifteen-watt lamps used in this way will light the floor quite sufficiently for most night light needs.

The light is controlled by a cord with pendent switch socket from a convenient place near the head of the bed. The cord can be tucked out of sight or dropped on the floor during the day.

One of its greatest merits is that the cost of installation and cost of operation are negligible, almost too little to compute.

TILE HAS BECOME POPULAR IN HOME

Forming a fitting background for the colorful cabinets, ranges, and furniture now in vogue, tile has become a popular kitchen wall covering. Particularly in the culinary department of the home is it desirable to have walls which can be easily cleaned as cooking and dishwashing are prone to leave their telltale marks, especially about stove and sink.

An effective tile for this purpose has a dull matt glazed surface from which grease can be easily removed with a damp cloth—leaving no permanent spots. The housewife will find it a simple task indeed to keep her kitchen looking bright and clean when so little effort is involved in keeping walls clean.

Dull matt glazed tile can be obtained in any of 18 colors—three shades of pastel blue, canary yellow, shell pink, cloud gray, jade green, peach blossom, black and white. Tiles in several of these colors can be combined to make an attractive wall covering which will blend with any desired kitchen decorative scheme.

CHUTES SEND LINEN TO LAUNDRY IN HOME

The sanitary way of collecting soiled linens is to send them directly to a receptacle in the basement laundry through a chute with openings on all floors. In this manner all soiled clothing and linens are disposed of until wash day and the housewife or laundress is relieved of carrying heavy, bulky bundles downstairs. Then, too, bathroom or hall space is not taken up with hampers.

The most satisfactory chute is of monel metal, a material which will not rust, chip, stain or in any way injure fabrics which are sent through it to the laundry room. Monel metal is a nickel-copper alloy of silvery color which combines the properties of several different metals into one.

NEW ENGLAND BUILDING CONTRACTS.

Contracts for building and engineering projects awarded during the week ended Sept. 9 amounted to $7,204,200, according to the F. W. Dodge corporation. The value of construction projects contracted for during the corresponding week last year was only slightly more, being $7,257,500. The average of previous weeks this year was $6,973,300.

ANCIENTS USED TO DECORATE PLASTER

Ornaments scratched in plaster and mud is the oldest form of surface decoration on record. Even before primitive man developed characteristics which we of this day would consider civilized, he began to scratch language and decoration on walls of his habitation. Later when the struggle for self preservation, food and shelter grew less strenuous man made better plaster and decorated more ornately.

Perfection in mixing plaster was reached at a very remote period as is well indicated by examination of the earliest samples still standing in hard, durable condition. The scientific composition of such examples compares even favorably with modern plasters. The pyramids of Egypt contain plastering done at least 4,000 years ago still hard and serviceable. It is interesting to note from recent discoveries that the principal tools of the ancients were substantially identical in design shape and purpose with modern tools. Also that the plaster so much used by the Egyptians was made of calcined gypsum like the plaster of Paris of today. Reeds were used for lath.

FOUNDATION FOR NEW NURSES' HOME BEING LAID

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Sept. 15—Progress on building enterprises in the city during the past week has been comparatively light, a review yesterday of the various projects now underway indicated.

Excavation and wall building for foundation purposes are the chief forms of construction at the Day Kimball hospital grounds on Pomfret street, where a new nurses' home is being erected. It is obvious that diligence in workmanship is the essence of the nurses' home building contract, for a month or more has elapsed since ground was first broken. A cellar hole has been blasted out of the rock ledge and builders are now at work in the setting and lining of walls. This phase of the basic work is nearly complete and judging from the quantities of supplies arriving on the site daily the secondary stages of construction will be launched at an early date.

The one-time unsightly spot on lower Main street, at the intersection of May street, has taken on a new aspect that is a decided improvement to its civic appearance, with the partial completion of the modern brick and steel garage building soon to be occupied by a motor company of Webster. Exterior portions of the structure are about complete affording the observer an excellent idea of what it will be when builders' equipment and debris is cleared from the surroundings. A story and a half high, with an imposing facade of red tapestry brick, the new Place building extends along May street for a considerable distance. Large windows set in the building walls at frequent intervals afford an abundance of light and air that will lend a pleasing atmosphere within, where symmetry and trim graces the lines of the city's newest and modern business block which is at present in the last stages of completion.

Home building in Putnam during the past week has not initiated any new candidates into its circle. Construction in this line has experienced an unusually quiet season and there are no bright prospects of the calm being disturbed during the winter months existing at the present time.

Although the week was quiet in other channels of building, the past seven days were active ones for the staff of engineers and their force of laborers engaged in the reconstruction work of the municipal water system. The ever growing line of pipe reaching from the million gallon standpipe on Oak hill, in a week has been extended from the crest of Wheaton hill on School street, to a point near the intersection of May street, and is continually surging its way through a trench which has its end on Mechanics street, near the foundry of Putnam company. This pipe net work when complete, will be one of the important arteries in the city's renewed water main system. The work is going through at rapid pace since the stubborn ledge deposits on Wheaton hill at the lower end of School street, were conquered early this week and from present appearances it is believed that contractors will have realized their ambitions of completing the task before the arrival of extreme cold weather.

WESTERLY

Westerly Building Inspector Thomas Wills and Zoning Inspector Louis J. Rossie have issued the following building and zoning permits for the second week in September:

Sept. 10—Max Lahn, 6 Hillside avenue. Erect two-story cottage and basement, 28 feet by 30 feet; with front and rear porch, 9 feet by 30 feet each, on north side of Atlantic avenue at Misquamicut.

Sept. 10—J. Pignolet, Weekapaug road. Addition of dormers on front and rear of house on Winnapaug road and interior alterations.

Sept. 10—S. Devere Laing, Westminister street. Erect two-story cottage, 24 feet by 24 feet.

VACUUM CLEANER BRINGS CARPETS BACK TO FAVOR

Carpets have come back. With the advent of the vacuum cleaner the old objections to carpets were swept away. With the floor carpeted to the baseboards, a small room looks larger than when cut up by rug and floor margin. For a long narrow room, the use of a carpet is the only way to avoid the appearance of a hall or corridor.

PLANNING SMALL LOT.

In developing the small suburban lot, the most practical arrangements is one in which the service door, the kitchen, and the purely utilitarian part of the grounds are grouped together near the street. By proper planning the living quarters of the house thus look out over a secluded yard unencumbered by garbage cans, kitchen doors, and clotheslines.

In the usual form of rectangular small lot, a formal or rectilinear design of walks and plants arrangement is the best. Definite boundaries should be established, a hedge, fence, or wall serving to separate two properties.

FRESHEN UP WITH PAINT.

The body and roof of the house may be still glowing from last year's paint, but freshening here and there would not be amiss. If the lattice work, for example, is weather-beaten, much of the neat appearance of the whole house would be lost.

The New York coffee exchange membership of John S. Lawson, of Milwaukee, was sold today to Louis Seitz, New York coffee importer, at $12,500, an increase of $1,480 over the last previous sale.

PHILADELPHIA WOMAN FATALLY INJURED IN AUTO

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., Sept. 15.—Miss Bessie Goldsmith, 30, of Philadelphia, died at the Westerly hospital shortly after 8 o'clock this evening, following an automobile accident on the Boston Post road early in the afternoon. The accident happened just east of Dunn's corners on a slight curve, when the Ford coupe driven by Miss Emmie Pape, of Germantown, Pa., collided head-on with a Newport taxicab.

Both Miss Goldsmith and Miss Pape were extricated from the wrecked car and Miss Goldsmith was rushed to the Westerly hospital, where she was attended by Dr. L. H. Johnson. Miss Pape was taken to the Elm Tree Inn, where her injuries were given attention, but she was later removed to the hospital after she had become hysterical. Miss Goldsmith's injuries were extensive and included head injuries, a possible hemorrhage of the brain, broken pelvis bone, fracture of both bones of the left leg, several fractured ribs, a punctured lung and a broken rib that pierced her heart. These injuries were ascertained from x-ray pictures by Dr. Johnson, who attended her, in consultation with Medical Examiner M. H. Scanlon.

Both cars were considerably damaged, the taxicab catching fire after the accident. The taxicab is said to have been occupied by seven sailors. Police are endeavoring to locate the driver of the Newport taxi. The number of the taxi was secured and the matter is in the hands of the state police.

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—(AP)—Walter C. Teagle, president of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, returning today from abroad, said that oil conditions in Europe are like those in America. "the industry there is suffering from over-production and depressed prices for both crude and refined products" Mr. Teagle said there "is nothing to the Spanish oil monopoly, which I have already emphatically denied."

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Impy Takes Frisky Home

Who thinks he knows a lady's mind
How wrong he is will someday find.
—Old Mother Nature.

"Do you know where my home is?" asked Impy very suddenly.

Little Miss Frisky nodded. "I've known for a long time," said she. "I've watched you come out and go in many times."

Impy remembered then that Miss Frisky had told him once before that she knew where his home was. He had pretended not to believe it. Now, however, this wouldn't do. He knew in his heart that she must be speaking the truth. "I didn't suppose any one would find that," said he. "I have never found your home and I've looked for it and looked for it."

Little Miss Frisky chuckled softly. "The entrance to my home is well hidden, if I do say so," said she. "I should love to see the inside of your home."

"If you like it will you live there with me?" asked Impy.

"That depends," replied little Miss Frisky.

"Depends on what?" asked Impy.

"Whether or not you'll come and live in my home if your home doesn't suit me," said little Miss Frisky.

"Then it's all settled," replied Impy promptly. "We'll live in whichever home you like the best. I do hope you'll like my home, for it is the very best one I've ever had. What are you chuckling about?"

"It's the only one you've ever had of your very own, isn't it?" asked little Miss Frisky demurely.

Impy had to admit that it was. He took her down inside and showed her the long hall that led to the snug bedroom, which was really on the other side of the big stonepile. He showed her where the back door had been, out of which he had pushed all the sand; and how he had filled the passage that led to this door. Miss Frisky examined everything with the greatest of care. She discovered the two little storerooms that opened from the long hall and wanted to know what those were. Impy told her.

"I guess I made those rooms just for the fun of working," said he. "I knew they would come in handy sometime."

Miss Frisky nodded approvingly. "These are very good," said she. "I think we'll make them a little larger; also, I think we'll add one or two more. I believe in having plenty of storeroom."

"Then we are going to live here!" cried Impy delightedly.

Miss Frisky nodded. "This is a better house than mine," said she. "This is very fine indeed. I can think of but one improvement."

"What is that?" asked Impy.

"We'll change the entrance," said little Miss Frisky.

Impy's face fell. He had been very proud of that entrance and the way it was hidden. "What is the matter with this entrance?" he demanded.

"Other folks know where it is," replied little Miss Frisky. "I saw that fellow you fought with over here looking at it."

"I suppose you are right, my dear," said he. "We'll change the entrance. I know another good place for the entrance. Come with me and I'll show you."

"We won't bother," replied Miss Frisky. "I decided long ago where the entrance is going to be. I decided before ever you had that great fight."

Impy blinked. He opened his mouth to say something and then thought better of it. He felt that there was nothing he could say.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Broadway Theatre

John McCormack, who is being seen and heard at Warner's Broadway in his first starring audible Fox movietone production, is today doing for song in America what Dante did for literature in Italy and what Spenser did for literature in England.

There are no indifferent audiences when John McCormack sings. McCormack audiences are composed of the really cultured men and women of the communities where he appears who listen spell-bound while a great artist sings great songs and proves to them that an artist and a song may be great without being mysterious.

Through the marvel of Fox movietone this great voice may now be heard everywhere.

In the Fox picture directed by Frank Borzage, the world's greatest tenor sings eleven numbers, four of them in foreign tongues.

The supporting company includes John Garrick, Maureen O'Sullivan, J. M. Kerrigan, Farrell MacDonald, Alice Joyce, Effie Ellsler, Tommy Clifford and Emily Fitzroy.

Palace Theatre

With plenty of song hits and lots of excitement Al Jolson makes another appearance on the silver screen in his latest picture "Big Boy" which will be shown today and tomorrow at the Palace Theatre for the last times.

"Big Boy" is a story of the Kentucky Derby and all those who like a good horse race should be on hand to see Jolson in his role as a jockey riding Big Boy first across the finish. As Gus, a colored jockey, Jolson plays his funniest role. The fortunes of the Bedford family have been on a steady decline and their only chance to replenish them comes when they decide to race the horse Gus has raised from colthood.

But there is something which interferes with their plans at the last moment and Gus is dismissed. The day of the race is at hand and Gus hears what has been happening in the Bedford stables. How he comes to the rescue and exposes a fiendish plot is a thrilling and exciting incident.

Jolson sings many songs in "Big Boy" and among the new hits are "Liza Lee" and "Little Sunshine." He also sings some of the old negro spirituals which are favorites at all times.

Supporting Jolson are Claudia Dell, a charming southern girl who plays her part of the southern aristocrat to perfection. Louise Closser Hale as her mother displays perfect understanding of her role.

On Thursday the Palace will present another of its big double feature bills with the showing of "Czar of Broadway" a thrilling drama of the uppercrust of the underworld with John Wray, Betty Compson and John Harron supported by a great cast and "Dough Boys" comedy with Buster Keaton, Sally Eilers and Cliff Edwards.

SCHWARTZ BROS., INC., TO CUT CAKE THURSDAY

Schwartz Bros., Inc., will celebrate their 25th year in the furniture business with appropriate ceremonies which will include the cutting of a huge 25th anniversary cake at 8:30 o'clock, Thursday night, on the main floor at 76-84 Main street.

Officers of the company and employes, including many who have been with the firm for nearly a score of years and a host of old and new customers, will share in this ceremony. The cake will be cut by Abner Schwartz, president and founder of Schwartz Bros., Inc.

A feature of this ceremony will be the awarding of prizes and cash gifts to the extent of $1,000, which will be found in the form of certificates which have been distributed throughout the cake; $250 in gold will be awarded to holders of certificates in the form of $2.50 gold pieces.

The Schwartz Bros. family invites everybody to come and share in this celebration and receive a piece of cake, it is believed that there will be enough to go around. The huge cake has been on display in the west window of the Schwartz Bros. store.

The cake was designed and baked by the Providence Bakery and presented to Schwartz Bros. on their 25th anniversary.

Magnet Draws Metal from Eye

VIENNA (AP)—A magnet capable of moving metal objects weighing up to 30 pounds has been installed in the Vienna Eye hospital. It is used to draw pieces of metal stray in the eye and to discover the location of pieces that are embedded.

Among California Indians the use of stone mortars for grinding seeds and crushing acorns was almost universal.

NEW LONDON COUNCIL MEMBERS KEEN TO REDUCE BUDGET $100,000

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 15.—Consideration of the budget was the principal business before the city council tonight. There was insistence that the budget be reduced $100,000. Councilor Minor told of the meeting of the budget committee and the appointment of a special committee to confer with the city manager. He represented the cuts proposed and where he said the cuts were to be effected. He said that it was only fair to every citizen and taxpayer. He compared the earnings of people today with what they earned a year ago and said that the council had gone on record in favor of cutting the budget $100,000.

Councilor May was opposed to the cuts proposed and said that the city was in better condition now than ever, was paying off its bonded debt, had made improvements and therefore he was not in favor of some of the proposed reductions.

Councilor Fox expressed himself as heartily in favor of the proposed reductions, especially he wanted real estate re-assessed and assessed fairly, then he said the budget could be reduced as proposed. Councilor Scott endorsed the committee report and said while he was not in favor of all the cuts that had been proposed, he was in favor of most of them. The committee is to meet again Wednesday evening and go over the budget again.

The sum of $600 was returned from the school board with the suggestion that it be applied to meet any deficit from the school cafeteria. That sum had been accumulating over five years as profits from the food sold, but the city had appropriated $1,000 per year for services of the management of the cafeteria, as Councilor Minor put it, "for a person to pass out the plates." The council accepted the money, but refused to take it for application to deficit. Councilor Fox said the money should not be received for any such purpose. If the children were too poor to procure food, the city made appropriations for that in another way.

The Young Italians club applied for a permit to have speech-making and a dance and for the erection of a speakers' platform at Columbus monument for Oct. 12. That day falls on Sunday and concerts, dances, etc., are prohibited by statute. The matter was referred to the city manager with power, with the understanding that he give them a permit for Monday, the 13th.

A dozen applications for permits for building and altering buildings were granted and applications for half a dozen electric signs were referred to the city manager, with power.

Hearing Today

M. A. Macklin, 11 Harrison street, was arrested tonight by Patrolmen Frank Philopena and Ernest Opperman, charged with breach of the peace, upon complaint of Isaac Baton. The accused was locked up and will be in court Tuesday.

J. A. Allain reported to the police this evening that a hand bag which had been on the running board of his automobile while being operated between New Haven and New London, had been lost. It contained a sailor's pea coat, besides underclothing.

LEWIS AND COWLES WOMAN IN WATERFORD TOWN COURT

Mrs. Margaret Cowles and William Lewis, submarine base, were arrested at the Golden Spur, Waterford, last night by State Police Officer William E. MacKenzie. The couple was brought to New London police headquarters and locked up and this afternoon were taken before the Waterford town court when their cases were continued for a week. Besides being charged with adultery the man and woman were charged with impairing the morals of minors. It is claimed that neighbors complained because of the illicit relations carried on between Lewis and the Cowles woman at the cottage of the latter and where the latter harbored several children. On these complaints the man and woman were arrested.

Transford Men Unruly

Albert Lockhart, Stanley Jankowski, Philadelphia; Edward C. Burke, Portland, Ore.; Benjamin Brower, Camden, N. J.; Richard Heath, London, Eng., and Daniel White, Virgin Islands, the last named colored, were charged with breach of the peace. All excepting White were fined $10 and costs and the Negro was found not guilty. The men, who are members of the crew of the Transford II, a steamer used for shipping Ford automobiles, were on Main street, corner of Shapley street, late Saturday night, and took possession of the sidewalk, forcing men and women from the walk besides abusing and insulting the women. Complaint was made to the police and Patrolmen George Bruhns and Arthur Feeley arrested the disturbers.

Joseph Grillo, 97 Riverview avenue, was charged with passing an automatic danger signal, as was Robert B. McCormick, Utica, N. Y. Neither driver appeared in court and their respective bonds of $15 were declared forfeited.

Plumbing Case Goes Over

Elias Nahass, a plumber, was charged with violation of a city ordinance, which requires a plumber to obtain a license from the city before performing work on water or sewer pipes. The state was not prepared to proceed with the case, so a continuance was granted for a week. Nahass, who was arrested Sunday by Detective Sergeant Nelson Smith, has, it is alleged, recently done work on pipes that connect with a public sewer and water mains. He has not been granted a license and City Plumbing Inspector William Pendleton made complaint to Prosecuting Attorney Max Boyer.

All Forfeit Bonds

R. G. Matthewson, Box 61, Uncasville, charged with parking in a restricted zone on State street; Edwin G. Swanson, 267 Broad street; Max J. Seiger, Box 42, Colchester; Hector Proulx, 21 Ramsdell street, Groton; John Fleming, 31 Fleming court, Groton; Orla E. Skinner, Box 3, Oakdale; Theodore R. Worden, 257 Prospect street, Willimantic, were charged with various violations of parking laws. As none of the drivers appeared in court their respective bonds of $2 were forfeited.

About a dozen cases of intoxication were tried and in most instances suspension of judgment was given, although one or two received fines or jail sentence.

Prosecuting Attorney Max Boyer will be absent from his duties for a fortnight or more for he is taking a vacation trip. Assistant Prosecuting Attorney John Quinn will prosecute cases presented in the police court.

The condition of John Davidson, hit by a New Haven railroad train several nights ago, sustaining a crushed right leg, later amputated at Lawrence Memorial hospital, remained uncharged yesterday. It is now believed that he will recover although Davidson is still on the danger list.

Collarbone Fractured

An automobile driven by Marshall Stevens, 116 Shaw street, hit Hector McDonald, 12, of 159 Shaw street yesterday afternoon. The boy, who was one of two youths coasting in a cart on Denison avenue, sustained a fractured collar-bone. He is a patient at Lawrence Memorial hospital.

Got No Plunder

Thieves entered the Reo sales service station, McDonald street, Sunday night, for this morning when the employes appeared there to go to work, it was evident that crooks had visited the place during the night. Everything in the office was in a disturbed condition, showing that the crooks, and probably youths, had thoroughly ransacked the office in their search for cash, but they were unsuccessful, for money was not left in the cash register or the safe. Entrance was obtained by means of an unsecured window.

A Ford roadster owned by Wilford Couture, 157 Norwood avenue, stolen from Huntington street a week ago last Sunday, is known to be in Somerville, Mass., or vicinity, for the car has been offered to sale to M. Mibrini, of that city, by a man who represents himself to be one McFarlane. The New London police have communicated with the Somerville police with the request that McFarlane be arrested.

Mrs. Harold Samson, of Groton, a patient at Home Memorial hospital, was discharged Saturday.

Miss Marjorie Prentis, daughter of Mrs. Arthur V. Prentis, Williams street, has entered Sweet Briar college, Sweet Briar, Va.

Miss Cynthia Waller has returned, having spent the week-end in Bridgeport.

Miss Maude Steele, of Oswegatchie, Waterford, has returned, after having spent several weeks in Europe.

Mr. and Mrs. Roger N. Daboll, Thames street, are entertaining Mrs. Chelsea Dart, Winthrop, Mass., formerly of New London.

Announcement is made by Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Robbins, of 54 Cutler street, of the engagement of their daughter, Miss Josie Roberta Austin, to Ellsworth O. Favro, of Montville.

Going to Honolulu

Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Tucker, of Broad street, left today for Los Angeles, Cal. They will sail from that port this month for a visit to the Hawaiian Islands.

Mrs Everett O. Atherton and children, 38 Waller court, are visiting relatives in Leominster, Mass.

Stiff Fine for Fabbri

Enrico Fabbri, proprietor of a drinking resort in the building in the rear of his residence, 19 Smith street who has been prosecuted many times for the same offense, was charged with violation of the liquor law on two counts, keeping with intent to sell and illegal possession. He was fined $200 and costs on each count. Fabbri, who has been arrested three times this year, was caught Saturday night when a raiding force in charge of Sergeant John Courtney, seized six cases of home-brew beer and about a quart of gin.

Walter Ripley, a stranger who claims to be without a home, was charged with vagrancy. His case was continued to the 24th inst., and in default of bail he was committed to jail. Ripley was arrested Saturday night when found asleep in a doorway in the rear of a Bank street store by Patrolman Joseph Sullivan. When aroused Ripley admitted ownership of a quantity of rope that was on the ground nearby and which he said he had stolen from a boat of the Portland Trawling company at Groton. He said he brought the rope to New London with intention of selling it and admitted having stolen other rope from boats at the Groton plant.

Charles Hoyer, sailor, stationed at the submarine base, charged with breach of the peace and intoxication, was fined $10 and costs. Hoyer was arrested on State street Saturday night by Patrolman William Riordan when the bluejacket insulted several women.

Thomas Weir, of Mystic; Gladys Skinner, 50 Plant street; Helen Douglass, 21 Garfield avenue; Edith Hunt, Fishers Island; Freddie Rolfe, Waterford and Herman Goff, Lyme, patients at Lawrence-Memorial hospital, were discharged Sunday and today.

An automobile driven by Henry Kane, of Cambridge, Mass., collided with a team driven by James B. Huntley, R. F. D. No. 1, of Niantic, Sunday in East Lyme. The vehicle in which Huntley was riding was damaged and Kane was arrested by State Police Officer Eric Swanson charged with reckless driving.

The state police, Groton barracks, arrested several auto drivers over the week-end. Leroy Buffington, this city, arrested in Stonington by Officer Arthur Whitmarsh charged with speeding; George W. Cone, U. S. coast guard, arrested by Officer Whitmarsh in Stonington, charged with speeding; Everett A. Denison, 98 Baker avenue, Groton, arrested by the same officer, charged speeding. Denison was penalized $25 and costs in the Groton town court recently on a charge of reckless driving of a motorcycle.

Whitney Teehan, U. S. coastguard, was arrested in Groton with failing James Dygert charged with failing to equip his car with windshield wiper. Officer Dygert also made two other arrests in Groton. Stanley C. Grybyck, U. S. coast guard, charged with failing to have windshield wiper on his auto and Walter Chesbro, Groton, charged with not providing a reflector on his truck.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Everett N. Lyon

Mrs. Ruth S. Lyon, 37, wife of Everett N. Lyon, died this morning at her residence at Golden Spur, Waterford, after a lingering illness, for Mrs. Lyon had been confined to her home since last June. Besides her husband and parents, Mr. and Mrs. William W. Smith, of this city, Mrs. Lyon is survived by two sons, Everett W. and William N. Lyon, and a daughter, Dorothy R. Lyon. Her two brothers are R. P. Smith and W. C. Smith, of this city and her sister is Mrs. Thornton N. M. Lathrop, also of New London. Mrs. Lyon was born in New London, Oct. 30, 1892, and resided here until about eight years ago when her family moved to Waterford. She was a member of the First Baptist church, circle No. 10, of the church; superintendent of the Crade Roll department, teacher in the primary department of the Sunday school, also a member of the Parent-Teacher association and the District Nurse association of Waterford.

GOLDEN WEDDING MONDAY OF MR. AND MRS. S. F. HUBBARD

Mr. and Mrs. S. F. Hubbard, of 338 Ocean avenue, today reached their golden wedding anniversary. The event was quietly celebrated with a family gathering of relatives, principally their children and grandchildren. Mr. and Mrs. Hubbard reside in New York, but annually spend their summers in this city.

SAILOR HAD BRAIN STORM AFTER SATURDAY OUTING

Mercer Langford, sailor, stationed at the submarine base, was in the police court this morning charged with breach of the peace. He was fined $25 and costs. Langford, who had shore leave Saturday night, visited numerous speakeasies and as a result became intoxicated. During the early morning hours of Sunday, Langford went to residences on North Bank street and attempted to obtain entrance. Later he went to the home of C. V. Spellman, 140 North Bank street and succeeded in gaining entrance through an open window. Once inside Langford aroused the occupants of the house by taking possession and attempting to wreck it for he smashed windows and abused the men and women. Spellman made complaint to the police and Langford was arrested by Automobile Patrol Officer Elwood Bailey and Patrolman Dennis Murphy.

TWILIGHT LEAGUE TROPHIES PRESENTED AT OUTING

Over 100 members and guests of Montville Industrial Twilight league held their annual outing Sunday at Camp Meow, on Lake Oxoboxo, making it an all-day affair. A large number took advantage of the boating and swimming. Exhibition diving was given by Mr. Canistri of New London and there was a swimming exhibition by Red O'Grady of the same place. An excellent shore dinner was served under the supervision of Head Chef John Lynch, assisted by William Fingers and Thomas Tucker. This was followed by a hot dog roast. Games and sports were provided during the afternoon. Music was furnished by the Waleneaya orchestra, of Montville and several of the players of different clubs, together with some of the guests entertained with solo selections. The program was brought to a close when Frank Richards, president of the league, paid a tribute to the champions, the Robert Gair Owls and thanked the players and officials of the various clubs for their fine cooperation in making the 1930 season a great success. On closing, he presented Manager John McInnis, of the champions Owls, a large silver loving cup, beautifully engraved, also presented each member of the winning team a small silver watch charm which was a miniature baseball. In conclusion he presented five small loving cups and read the following figures:

Leading hitter, Peter Morosky, played 14 games, at bat, 41, had 17 hits for an average of 415.

Leading outfielder, John Awezec, total chances, 17; errors, 0; average, .1000.

Leading pitcher, Buck Shahan, won 9, lost 2.

Leading base stealer, Robert Welchell, 27.

Most valuable player, Joseph Ski.

A meeting was held by the officials of the league when they made plans to start a basketball league. Armand Plouffe was named chairman. The success of this year's events was largely due to Chairman Michael Murphy, who was assisted by Andrew Rosenlund, Armand Plouffe, Edmond Killeen and Harvey Newton.

The Season Has Just Begun
At The Old Pease House

Never in the history of this old hostelry have so many lobsters been broiled, so many clams been opened, so many shore dinners been served as have been this summer.

Since early spring the spacious dining rooms of the famed old Pease House have been the Mecca for those who enjoy sea food and shell fish.

Here we are in the early fall with the Harvest Moon in all its glory. The big "Blues" are running; the oyster season is open; the lobsters were never more succulent.

And now an innovation for Pease House guests. Luxurious buses for parties are now available at special flat rates which are exclusive with the Pease House. Arrange your party—all come down together—enjoy a famous Pease House shore dinner — dance to the Pease House orchestra — and all go back together. It costs far less to come by bus than it does in individual cars. It's a lot more fun.

Simply call the Pease House, Saybrook 300; bus rates, all detailed arrangements, and reservations will be taken care of with dispatch.

Sincerely yours,
F. P. BRENNAN

GREENEVILLE

The first meeting of the Ladies' Aid society of the Greeneville Congregational church was held Wednesday evening in the church parlors with about 20 members present. The officers and the chairmen of the various committees gave their monthly reports. Plans were made to have a birthday meeting next month.

TAFTVILLE

As the members of the Taftville Rod and Gun club are packing away their fishing tackle for another year, there is a great deal of discussion right now of dogs and guns. Several new foxhounds, recently acquired from Kentucky kennels, and some coon dogs will be given their tryout by the local hunters this season. There is considerable speculation among the members as to how the cottontail rabbits have fared, which the club "imported" from a western state and liberated in the hope of building up a good game supply of this species. Also the bird hunters have begun to talk over the favorite sport. The specialists in this line of shooting report that there will be an abundance of English ringneck pheasants this year. They appear to be breeding well under local conditions. The Mongolians will not be so numerous. Not many weeks hence will be heard the reports of the guns in the Quinebaug valley as the great flocks of wild ducks follow the stream in their quest for wild rice. The state law provides that wild ducks, geese and brant (Canadian geese) shall not be taken except with a gun fired at arm's length and without rest; nor from any boat except one propelled by hand; nor from any floating device used to conceal the hunter if more than 50 feet from shore or natural growth of grass or reeds. Shooting may be done only with a shot gun. As in former years, the shooting of quail (bob white) is taboo. This handsome game bird is trying to stage a "come-back," and those who know state that it is slowly being successful. All about the village quail frequently come into the dooryards, generally traveling in pairs instead of the large flocks in which they used to congregate. The season will still be closed on Hungarian partridge, but as not a single bird of this variety has ever been seen by a member of the club since they were liberated by the state some years ago, this is not worrying the local sportsmen much!

NORWICH TOWN

The text used by Rev. George Warren Potter at the service in the Methodist church Sunday was 2 Timothy 2:3, "Thou therefore endure hardness as a good soldier of Jesus Christ." He took for a theme, "A Good Soldier of Jesus Christ." The church had been beautifully decorated with bouquets and baskets of flowers by Mary Waters of the decorating committee. The Junior vested choir under the direction of Mrs. Lewis E. Aldrich, sang "In the Garden." Millard Manning, a teacher at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Boston, a former member of the local church, had charge of the opening exercises of the church school.

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis E. Burdick and son, Lewis, Jr., of Harding Terrace, Riverside, R. I., were week end guests at the Methodist parsonage. Mr. Burdick is Rev. Mr. Potter's uncle.

Pastor Returns From Vacation.

Rev. George Warren Potter, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church returned Saturday after a vacation of three weeks. The first week was spent in Whitman, Mass., the boyhood home of Mr. Potter. He was invited to preach Sunday morning at the Methodist Episcopal church where he was for ten years in the Epworth league. The next two weeks were spent at Boston, at Revere beach, Chelsea, Cape Ann, Gloucester, and at Barrington Beach, R. I. While at Chelsea he was the guest of the Chelsea Rotary club at a luncheon. He was introduced to the club as a former boys' secretary of the Y. M. C. A. of that city with the distinction of having the finest boys' department in the history of the association. At Cape Ann, among the many interesting places visited by Rev. Mr. Potter was the paper house. The house and all the furnishings are made of Boston newspapers, 60,000 copies. A fine writing desk was made of the papers telling of Lingbergh's flights and will be presented to him. At Barrington, Rev. Mr. Potter was again invited to preach.

Congregational Church Interests.

"The Blessings of Rest," was the theme of Rev. Charles E. Reeves' sermon at the Norwich Town Congregational church Sunday morning; Mark 6:31 And He said unto them, come ye yourselves apart into a desert place, and rest awhile; for there were many coming and going and they had no leisure so much as to eat, with emphasis on the first sentence.

How Increase Our Membership? Acts 2:42-47 was the theme assigned to the Young People's C. E. service Sunday evening, in the chapel.

The Drop-in class of the Sunday school will hold a meeting Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the home of Mrs. David M. Dean of Town street.

For the Congregational mid-week service of conference and prayer Thursday evening, the theme will be "Spiritual Vision and Material Gain."

Mr. and Mrs. Frank H. Browning, of Colchester were guests Sunday of the former's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Browning, of Plain Hill. They were automobile guests of Mrs. Munson, of Colchester and New York.

CEREMONIES FOR DEDICATION OF ARK OF SYNAGOGUE

Addresses by Rabbi Morris Silverman of Emmanuel synagogue, Hartford, and by Rabbi Theodore Shabshelowitz of the Community synagogue on Church street, with a brief historical address by Abner Schwartz, president of the syynagogue, were given in the ceremonies of dedication of the new ark, which were held Sunday afternoon with an attendance of over 500. Cantor Paul Discount of the Hartford synagogue sang "Ma-Tovoo" with fine effect.

The honor of unveiling the ark went to Jacob R. Slosberg, treasurer of the synagogue. To Mr. and Mrs. Louis Pollock went the honor of furnishing the everlasting light, while Louis Strongin was given the honor of lighting it. The first to open the doors was Norman, 12-year old son of Mr. and Mrs. William Israelite. The honor of carrying the torahs or scrolls into the ark for the first time went to Jacob Savage and Samuel Rosoff, while Jacob R. Slossberg waived his rights to Rabbi Shabshelowitz. The opening of the pariches was by Mrs. Charles N. Gordon, while Rabbi Silverman had the honor of closing them.

Mrs. Abner Schwartz and Mrs. Abraham Bruckner donated the pariches. A torah was donated by Abe Kofman in memory of his father, who recently passed away. Another torah was donated by Charles N. Gordon.

The ark which was built for the Norwich congregation by Zachae Bros., is a duplicate of that in Temple Emtains the large, ancient scrolls, symbolic of the religion, on parchment. manuel at Providence, R. I. It con-Over the ark is an everlasting light and the trimmings are notable. The ten commandments are printed in the Jewish language, occupying a conspicuous place on the top of the ark.

The officers of the Community synagogue are: Abner Schwartz, president; Louis Goldblatt, secretary and Jacob R. Slosberg, treasurer.

The ark committee comprised Abe Ableman, chairman; H. J. Schatz, Jacob R. Slosberg and William Isrealite.

The committee on arrangements consisted of Morris Sussman, chairman; Louis Goldblatt, Alex Pasnik, Charles J. Sentler, Louis Pollock, I. M. Bronerwine, Benjamin Krieger, Charles N. Gordon and Abe Kofman.

YANTIC RIVER PROJECT CALLS FOR 12 FOOT CHANNEL, DISTANCE 400 FEET

A hearing on the proposed deepening of the Yantic river, from its junction with the Thames river, to the bridge on West Main street, will be held in the common council chamber at the court house this (Tuesday) morning at 11 o'clock. A representative of the United States Army Engineers' office, Providence, R. I., will be present to hear the arguments in relation to the proposed improvement.

The proposed improvement originated, it is understood, with the Mahoney Coal Co., which desires the deepening of the river in order that its coal barges may be unloaded at its docks.

The matter, through Congressman Richard P. Freeman, was taken up with Washington officials some time ago, and the army engineers' office at Providence has been requested to ascertain the facts. On their recommendation will depend the issuance of an order for a survey of the project.

The Mahoney Coal Co. will be represented by Attorney Edwin W. Higgins and others who will be present will include Christopher M. Gallup, chairman of the Thames River Deepening committee of the Norwich chamber of commerce. The chamber is in favor of the proposed project, which calls for the deepening of the channel from 8 to 12 feet for the 400-foot stretch. The river at that point is about 150 feet wide and the project calls for a 50-foot wide channel in the center of the river. The Mahoney Coal Co., it is understood, stands ready to widen the channel the remaining 50 feet in the vicinity of its dock.

LIQUOR APPARATUS SEIZED IN MONTVILLE RAID

(Special to The Bulletin)

MONTVILLE, Sept. 15.— A liquor raid was conducted tonight on the farmhouse owned by Joseph Mosarsky on the Salem road at Chesterfield by Police Officer Howard Lamphere of Montville, who was assisted by two special officers from the town of Waterford. The raiding officers secured as evidence one jar of mash, one large copper coil and a funnel. The accused was brought before Justice of the Peace Oscar E. Church who placed him under a $1,000 bond for his appearance in the Montville justice court Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. The bonds were furnished by William Yadwoski of Chesterfield.

The farmhouse was raided by the two Waterford officers yesterday but when they brought the accused before the court it was found that the house was in the town of Montville. As a result the Waterford officers secured the assistance of the Montville officer and again raided the place tonight, securing as evidence apparatus for the making of illicit liquor, besides an alleged actual sale several days ago.

DESTROYER REID BORE NORWICH NATIVE'S NAME

One of the 58 destroyers which are soon to become nameless and are due for the scrap heap is the U. S. S. Reid, named for Capt. Samuel Chester Reid, U. S. N., who was born in Norwich, Aug. 25, 1783, and entered the U. S. navy in 1794.

He was the son of Lieut. John Reid of the British navy, who was taken prisoner in a night boat expedition at New London and afterwards resigned his commission. At the age of 11 the son went to sea, was captured by a French privateer and confined in prison six months at Bassaterre, Guadeloupe. He served on the U. S. S. Baltimore with Admiral Truxton and became master of the brig "Merchant" when only 20 years of age. In the war of 1812 he commanded the privateer brig "General Armstrong," with which he fought one of the most remarkable naval battles on record at Fayal in the Azores islands, Sept. 26 and 27, 1814. While at anchor in a neutral port his ship was attacked by a British squadron of three boats, carrying 136 guns and more than 2,000 men. Reid's vessel carried 7 guns and 90 men, but in a series of encounters he beat the enemy, with the British loss of 120 men killed and 180 wounded, while the American loss was only two killed and seven wounded.

In later years Reid lived in New York, where he was harbor master and warden of the port. He invented and erected the signal telegraph at the Battery and at the Narrows and regulated and numbered the pilot-boats of New York and established the lightship off Sandy Hook. He was also the designer of the present form of the United States flag, proposing to retain the original 13 stripes and to add a new star whenever a new state should be admitted to the Union.

Capt. Reid died in New York city Jan. 28, 1861.

POLICE BROKE UP POTATO DIGGING PARTY

Charged with stealing potatoes three Norwich colored men are held by the state police for trial in Ledyard town court. The accused, David Sebastian, 21, Fred Smart, 24, and Joseph Smart, 19, were arrested about midnight Saturday by State Police Officer Arthur Whitmarsh when he caught them digging and bagging potatoes at the farm owned by Paul Massey in Ledyard. Farmers in the vicinity had complained of nightly raids on their potato patches and tipped off that the thieves planned to visit the Massey farm Saturday night, the officer lay in wait for them. He allowed them to dig and bag about 15 bushels when he appeared and informed them they were under arrest.

It is understood they admitted having stolen other potatoes in the vicinity and that they sold them in Norwich for 70 cents a bushel.

UNITED WORKERS OPEN MEMBERSHIP CAMPAIGN

In opening the annual membership campaign of the United Workers of Norwich, the following has been sent out by the committee:

"Are you not willing, by your contribution, to help the United Workers maintain the following departments?

"The Sheltering Arms, a home for aged men and women.

"The Rock Nook Home, a shelter for homeless children.

"The Family Welfare Dept., a source of relief to the needy and those in trouble.

"The Public Health Nursing Dept., which ministers to illness in the home and teaches principles of healthful living.

"The Mental Hygiene Dept., which diagnoses and treats behavior and personality difficulties in children and adults.

"The Club Work Dept., where, surrounded by helpful influences, young girls are taught cooking and sewing.

"The United Workers House, 8 Washington street, the headquarters of the organization."

For this membership campaign the committee has prepared the above list of departments of the United Workers, which with a subscription card has been sent out by mail.

No one has been intentionally overlooked, but in case there are those who have not received the card, contributions may be sent to Miss Ruby Vaughn, 24 Warren street. All amounts, large or small, are welcome and appreciated. To avoid expense, however, no individual acknowledgment will be made except that published in the daily press.

Attended Cousin's Marriage

Miss Katharine Miller of Lebanon road, Franklin, has returned home after visiting relatives at Staten Island, N. Y. While there she was the guest at the marriage of her cousin, Miss Elsie Huguenel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Huguenel of Odegard avenue, West Brighton, to Cornelius Brennecke, son of Rev. and Mrs. Ernst Brennecke of Manhattan, N. Y. This was a brilliant affair and was followed by a reception and buffet lunch at the home of the bride.

Preached At Quaker Town Hall.

Mrs. George H. Strouse of Bozrah preached at Quaker Town hall, Ledyard, Sunday afternoon, upon the theme, "The Man, Christ Jesus and Man." She drew a distinction between Jesus Christ and the human family, placing Jesus in a class of His own far above man and angels, showing Him to be God.

ROGERS REP. NOMINEE FOR GOVERNOR ON STATE'S LIQUOR CONTROL PLATFORM

State Ticket Was Nominated Without Any Real Contest—Levitt Received Four Votes for Gubernatorial Nomination and Pape Two Votes for Comptroller—Roraback is Credited With Having Blocked a Wet Plank Calling for Repeal of the 18th Amendment and the Volstead Act—State Central Committee Re-Elected Its Present Officers.

HARTFORD, Sept. 16—(AP)—The republican party of Connecticut today nominated Lieut. Gov. Ernest E. Rogers, of New London, a dry, as its candidate for governor, and adopted a platform advocating restoration of liquor control to the states.

In the November election Rogers will oppose Dr. Wilbur L. Cross, dean emeritus of Yale university graduate school, the wet democratic candidate.

The democratic platform calls for repeal of the 18th amendment and the Volstead act.

In a session that lasted less than an hour and a half, the republicans named the following ticket besides Rogers:

Lieutenant governor, Samuel R. Spencer, Suffield.

Secretary of state, Dr. William L. Higgins, Coventry, incumbent.

Treasurer, Roy C. Wilcox, Meriden.

Comptroller, Frederick M. Salmon, Westport, incumbent.

Attorney general, U. S. Judge Warren B. Burrows, Groton.

Albert Levitt, of Redding, former Brooklyn law professor, was nominated in opposition to Rogers, but in a rising vote received only four votes. The only other contest was for comptroller in which William J. Pape, Waterbury publisher, was named, as an opponent of Salmon. Pape got two votes on a rising vote.

Levitt and Pape have conducted a vigorous campaign against J. Henry Roraback, state chairman of the republican committee who was re-elected to that position today for the eleventh time.

They were nominated by George W. Hull, of Burlington, one of the three pledged delegates obtained in the primaries. After Rogers and Salmon had been nominated, Hull moved that their nominations be made unanimous.

With the slate certain of nomination, the interest of the delegates today was centered in the platform, particularly the plank dealing with prohibition. The resolutions committee last night adopted a plank which called for repeal of the 18th amendment and the Volstead act, but the wording was changed overnight upon the insistence of Roraback.

Roraback, it was learned, threatened to resign the party management if such a plank were adopted. So in its place, a plank urging restoration of state control was passed and approved by the convention without a dissenting vote.

The text of the prohibition plank follows:

"Conditions arising from the passage of the 18th amendment and the enactment of the Volstead act are unsound and unsatisfactory and disappointing to everyone. For this situation, Connecticut is no way responsible. Connecticut did not ratify the 18th amendment. Both of our senators and all our congressmen voted against the amendment and against the Volstead act.

"Their action was approved by the republican party in Connecticut. This action was based on the fundamental principle that regulation of this kind is properly the function of the several states and not of the federal government and we therefore urge upon our representatives in the national congress the need of prompt remedial action and that they assist in taking those steps which shall as early as possible restore to the states of the union the right to regulate their own affairs in regard to such matters."

Other planks in the platform commended administration of President Hoover, saying party pledges had been fulfilled, upheld principle of protective tariff; commended administration of Gov. Trumbull; approved pay-as-you-go policy in state building; approved reduction of state taxes as business policy; urged improvement of rural roads; endorsed newly created water commission; praised operation of state board of health; urged continuation of tuberculosis work with a progressive policy toward prevention of the disease; recommended development of comprehensive preventive program in treatment of dependents, defectives and delinquents.

The plank on prohibition and many of the others followed closely recommendations made by Senator Frederick C. Walcott, the convention chairman, in his keynote speech last night.

The revolt against the plank as favored by a large majority of the resolutions committee last night, declaring that relief from "intolerable" conditions arising under the prohibition law could be best obtained by repeal, was due to fear that dry republicans would not go to the polls at the November elections. Such a move, it was pointed out, might jeopardize the election of at least three republican nominees for congress.

In the arguments of those opposed to a repeal clause, it was claimed that repeal of the 18th amendment was almost an impossibility because 13 states by an adverse vote could prevent resubmission of the question. And so, it was asked, why endanger republican success in Connecticut?

Outside of the prohibition question, the delegates were interested chiefly in the candidate for attorney general. It was with general surprise that the name of U. S. Judge Burrows was introduced as a possible candidate. It was soon learned that he was in a receptive mood and his name was placed upon the slate. Judge Burrows was known to be desirous and exacting. He will submit his resignation to President Hoover in the immediate future.

After adjournment of the convention, Prof. Levitt issued a statement definitely stating that he would not run as an independent candidate for governor. He announced that he would not do anything "to embarrass the republican party before election.

"But," he said, "after the election we shall start once more to see if we can bring [illegible]ernment in accordance with our Connecticut tradition."

Lieut. Gov. Rogers, in his brief acceptance speech, made no reference to prohibition. He confined himself to a commendation of the administration of Gov. Trumbull and pledged himself "to work whole-heartedly for the best interests of all the people in Connecticut."

The state central committee met after the convention and re-elected its present officers. Besides Chairman, and Clarence G. Willard, of rine Byrne, of Putnam, vice chairman, and Clarenc eG. Willard, of New Haven, secretary.

AMERICAN GUNBOAT FIGHTS CHINESE COMMUNISTS

SHANGHAI, Sept. 16—(AP)—The American gunboat Luzon today fought a brief engagement with communists who have been firing upon foreign shipping from the Yangtse river shores between Kiukiang and Shasi. Rear Admiral Thomas Craven, commander of the American Yangtse patrol, directed the Luzon's fire.

The Americans suffered no casualties. What punishment was inflicted upon the Reds could not be learned.

When the Luzon was 25 miles above Wusueh, Hupeh province, the outlaws attacked with field guns and trench mortars. The skirmish lasted 40 minutes over 15 miles of the river, the gunboat sweeping the north shore with fire while it was proceeding down river to investigate their attacks upon commercial shipping.

The British gunboat Gnat, following the Luzon, was engaged later by Reds near Wusueh and poured much lead ashore without silencing the outlaws fire.

Besides visiting depredations upon Yangtse communities, the Reds continue their grip upon Hunan province, although not pushing their campaign against the Nationalist forces.

26 JOHN DOE WARRANTS FOR CHICAGO GANGSTERS

CHICAGO, Sept. 16—(AP)—The Daily Illustrated Times said today that Judge John H. Lyle issued John Doe warrants for the arrest of 26 men named as public enemies by the Chicago crime commission.

The paper said the warrants had been sent to the East Chicago police station to be served. They charged vagrancy.

The list includes gang leaders, booze runners, hi-jackers and racketeers of all sorts, and is headed by Alphonse "Scarface Al" Capone.

Others named were Ralph Capone, Tony "Mops" Volpe, Frankie Rio, James Belcastro, Jack Demore, known as "Machine Gun Jack" McGurn, Rocco Fannelli, "Dago Lawrence" Mangano, Jack Guzick, Frank Diamond, George "Bugs" Moran, Joseph Aiello, Edward "Spike" O'Donnell, Joe Saltis, Frank McErlane, Vincent McErlane, Danny Stanton, William "Klondike" O'Donnell, Myles O'Donnell, Frankie Lake, Terrence Druggan, James "Fur" Sammons, George "Red" Barker, William "Three Fingers" White, Joseph Genero and Leo Mongoven.

At least one warrant was unnecessary, for detectives arrested Danny Stanton earlier in the day. They said they found a loaded revolver in a pocket of Stanton's automobile.

RESIGNATION OF ADMIRAL C. L. HUGHES ACCEPTED

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16—(AP)—President Hoover today accepted the resignation of Admiral Charles F. Hughes, chief of naval operations, who leaves active service in the navy tomorrow when he is relieved by Admiral William V. Pratt.

"During your service in the navy," the president said, "you have successfully commanded all units of the fleet, culminating in the present highest office offered by the navy, from which you now feel it is your duty to resign. I wish to express my appreciation of the splendid services you have performed, and also the conviction that your resignation will be received with deep regret, not only from the naval service, but from the country as a whole."

Although Admiral Hughes will not be 64, the statutory age of retirement, until October 14, he said he took the action at this time "because of the realization that during the next two months important surveys and plans must be made for the future development of the navy."

BOXES OF JEWELS STOLEN FROM HOUSE IN FAIRFIELD

FAIRFIELD, Sept. 16—(AP)—While Senator and Mrs. Albert E. Lavery were attending the republican state convention at Hartford, their residence here was entered and three boxes of jewels were taken, while a fourth one was untouched. Senator Lavery is unable to estimate his loss. His daughter, Sally, who owns the contents of one of the boxes, is out of town and until her return the value is unknown.

Some family antiques which Mr. Lavery brought throught were in this box, were found in a drawer which had not been disturbed by the entrant.

MOTHER OF 13 CHILDREN SENTENCED TO REFORMATORY

AUGUSTA, Me., Sept. 16—(AP)—Mrs. Eva B. Coulomb, 38, mother of 13 children, today was sentenced to the women's reformatory at Skowhegan, by Municipal Judge Tiffin, on a charge of wanton behavior. Following her arraignment the woman attempted to wrest a pistol from a state highway officer standing near the door of the courtroom, but was unsuccessful. She told the court she expected soon to be a mother for the fourteenth time.

CABLED PARAGRAPHS

SOFIA, Sept. 16—(AP)—King Boris and his sister, Princess Eudoxia, returned from a trip to Germany that was widely reported to have been connected with marriage plans for the princess. The name of the Prince of Hesse was mentioned frequently.

LIMA, Sept. 16—(AP)—Thirty-five prominent political and military men were reported to have been arrested on political grounds by the military government of Lieutenant Colonel Luis M. Sanchez Cerro.

LONDON, Sept. 16—(AP)—The m[illegible] of thirteen lions have arrived [illegible] well known military tailoring [illegible]lishment in London to be made into headdresses for the "Lion of Judah," Ras Tafari, the emperor of Abyssinia.

BASEL, Switzerland, Sept. 16—(AP)—The bank for international settlements today advised Spain, Bulgaria and Rumania that plans submitted for the stabilization of their respective monetary units—the peseta, the lev and the lei—had been accepted, and that the bank was ready to advance the necessary loans for that purpose.

PARIS, Sept. 16—(AP)—Henry Ford announced to an international gathering of newspapermen that he expected shortly to begin manufacturing his automobiles in France and to do away with the assembly system he has previously employed. He hinted he might adopt this policy throughout Europe.

A SEVERE LIGHTNING STORM IN WATERBURY

WATERBURY, Sept. 16—(AP)—This city was in utter darkness for nearly 20 minutes tonight when lightning struck a breaker in the main power station here of the Connecticut Light and Power company and burned out a bearing as well as causing a short circuit. Since the station serves practically the entire city, all current was cut off leaving streets, homes, theatres and stores dark.

Police were forced to use their flashlights to direct what traffic moved but most auto operators remained parked for the time. Auxiliary lighting systems were switched on in the theatres and the telephone company. More than 100 telephones were reported as out of order. The electrical storm which hovered over the city for more than two hours was the worst in years.

Vivid flashes of lightning flared low over the house tops and at times the streets were as light as day from the continued illumination.

Considerable rain fell during the storm which slowly swept down the Naugatuck valley. Many dirt roads were washed out.

COMMISSIONERS TO OPERATE THE FLEXIBLE TARIFF BILL

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16—(AP)—Five men, four of them experts in tariff matters and the other a veteran diplomat, today were charged by President Hoover with operation of the flexible provisions of the recently enacted Hawley-Smoot act.

To the three commissioners previously selected—Henry P. Fletcher of Pennsylvania as chairman, Thomas Walker Page of Virginia and Dr. John Lee Coulter of North Dakota, chief economist of the commission—President Hoover today added the names of Edgar B. Brossard of Utah, the present chairman, and Alfred P. Dennis of Maryland, now the vice-chairman.

The sixth member of the commission, which is to be bi-partisan under the tariff act, is to be announced later. Mr. Hoover said the last minute declination to serve by one of the proposed democratic appointees would prevent completion of the group for a week or ten days.

LEVEL OF FARM PRICES THE LOWEST SINCE 1916

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16—(AP)—The general level of farm prices during the month ending August 15 was described today by the department of agriculture as at the lowest since 1916.

Suffering a further decline from the sharp break during the preceding month, the index dropped with 111 on July 15, 123 on June 15 and 143 a year ago.

Early in 1916 when farm prices began their war climb, the index was at 100. The index of 108 on August 15 was 2 per cent below the lowest level reached in 1921, when a low level was established for the post war period

Price advances from August 15 to September 10 at primary markets, however, have outweighed declines, although cotton and wheat failed to maintain their gains into the first part of September. Hogs, cattle, potatoes, and butter had the largest gains.

YACHTS UNDAMAGED IN COLLISION OFF NEWPORT

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 16—(AP)—The identity of the two yachts which collided in the harbor during the dense fog today which caused postponement of the third scheduled America's cup race, was established later in the afternoon when it was discovered that neither had been badly damaged.

The craft were the Silia, owned by Archie M. Andrews, of Los Angeles and the Seaborn of Richard F. Howe, of Glen Cove, L. I.

The collision occurred shortly before the race was called off.

The Silia it was understood, formerly was owned by Henry Ford, and at one time was saved after going aground on some rocks.

DECREASE REPORTED IN REVENUE CAR LOADINGS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16—(AP)—Revenue car loadings for the week ending September 6 were reported today by the American Railway association to have totalled 856,637 cars.

This was a decrease of 127,867 cars below the preceding week, which the association attributed to the Labor day holiday, and a reduction of 134,-402 cars below the corresponding week in 1929.

Miscellaneous freight loadings for the week aggregated 339,402 cars, a decrease of 72,008 cars from the same week a year ago.

Governor Frank G. Allen was swamping former Mayor John D. Devir, of Malden, who opposed him for renomination for governor in the republican primary. The vote was:

Allen, 70,700; Devir, 4,733.

The governor's renomination was unquestionably assured.

In the democratic contest for governor the vote was:

Cummings, 4,047; Ely, 45,101; Fitzgerald, 40,505.

Boston 330 reports precincts gave, for senator, in the democratic primary:

Coolidge, 26,660; Foss, 5,178; Joyce, 1,723; O'Brien 18,963; O'Connell, 27,-918.

The vote for governor in the same primary gave:

Cummings, 2,518; Ely, 41,898; Fitzgerald, 40,388.

For governor, in the republican primary in Boston, the vote of the 339 precincts was:

Allen, 26,741; Devir, 1,723.

FITZGERALD CONCEDES NOMINATION TO ELY

BOSTON, Sept. 16—(AP)—John F. Fitzgerald conceded the democratic gubernatorial nomination to Joseph B. Ely, of Westfield, in the following telegram tonight from his bed at the Robert Breck hospital:

"Nurse sets lights off and am off to sleep. Returns indicate your nomination. I congratulate you and pledge you my hearty support."

LINGLE MURDER SUSPECT IN JAIL AS A VAGRANT

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Sept. 16—(AP)—Ted Geisking, sought for several days as the suspected murdered of Alfred Lingle, Chicago reporter, was found today to have been in jail here on vagrancy charges since last Friday. A detective recognized him by a picture.

Hardly had the man admitted his identity before press dispatches from Chicago said authorities there were not so certain after all that Geisking shot the reporter. The man himself flatly denied that he had done it, or even knew Lingle. Police said he admitted rum running and hijacking.

A man brought here by George Williams, Chicago detective, and said to have seen the Lingle slayer, said, "that looks like the man except for his hair," and so Geisking was given a shampoo. That, however, failed to disclose any evidence of hair dye.

"Just showed he needed a shampoo," said a detective rather disgustedly."

Geisking was picked up as a vagrant and gave his name as Emmeral Harris, 22, Chicago laborer.

BRUENING TO CONTINUE CHANCELLOR OF GERMANY

BERLIN, Sept. 16—(AP)—The cabinet decided unanimously today that Dr. Heinrich Bruening should carry on as chancellor and place before the new reichstag Oct. 13 a program for solving Germany's economic, financial and social problems.

The chancellor immediately will consult party leaders and see what support can be obtained for continuing his administration following the elections of Sunday, which greatly increased fascist and communist representation in the country's leading legislative house.

Meanwhile, the various parties are calling conferences to establish their views, with the state party scheduled to have the first meeting tomorrow.

DETROIT MAYORALTY CONTEST TO GO TO COURT

DEROIT, Sept. 16—(AP)—Charles S. Abbott, attorney for Mayor Charles Bowles, announced today that the mayor intends to force Mayor-elect Frank Murphy through quo warranto proceedings to prove the latter's title to the office, and that he plans to carry his case to the United States supreme court if necessary.

Riot At Maryland State Penitentiary

Prison Guard Was Shot—Nine Convicts Attempted to Escape.

BALTIMORE, Sept. 16—(AP)—A prison guard was shot, probably fatally, this afternoon when he detected an attempt by nine prisoners, lifers and long termers, to escape over one of the walls of the Maryland state penitentiary here.

More than a score of shots were exchanged between guards and convicts, and a riot call brought 200 policemen to the prison, which is situated in the heart of the city.

The guard shot was Albert Owen, 39. He was taken to a hospital where it was reported his condition from a wound in his side was critical.

The escape attempt was made and discovered shortly after 5 p. m. as the prison shops were closing for the day, and for several hours little but wild rumors of revolt was obtainable. The official account of the affair came from Stuart S. Janney, chairman of the state board of welfare.

Janney said the nine prisoners, led by Rawlings Whittemore, serving a 21-year-term for bank robbery in the same prison, where his brother, Richard Reese Whittemore, was hanged several years ago, were attempting to throw a rope ladder over the wall from the roof of the foundry when Owen discovered them.

The guard fired at the group, but himself was shot twice in the answering hail of bullets from the armed prisoners.

The shooting attracted other guards, who herded the nine into a corner during a gun battle in which no one else was hit. The guards finally captured them and found two pistols in their possession.

Besides Whittemore, the group attempting escape included J. L. (Wiggles) Smith, serving life for murder; Edward Harding and Hunter Lewis, life for the murder of a grocer in a holdup; George Bailey, 15 years for safe cracking; August Byer, Robert Minner and Lew Mercer, serving long terms for the daylight holdup of the Ruoff Jewelry shop in Baltimore.

Whittemore was convicted for the hold up of a bank at Westminster more than a year ago. Another in the group was Edward Cissel.

TAKING TESTIMONY IN MAGISTRATE EWALD CASE

NEW YORK, Sept. 16—(AP)—Two witnesses testified today at the first session of a special grand jury investigating charges that former Magistrate George F. Ewald's appointment to the bench in 1927 was paid for.

Sheriff Thomas M. Farley of New York county, who had not previously been connected directly with the Ewald case, signed a waiver of immunity and replied, as a Tammany leader of long experience, to questions about the manner in which candidates for judicial office in New York are selected.

On emerging from the jury room he said only, "I could tell them nothing they were interested in."

Emmerich Boczor, one time secretary to Ewald, was questioned for an hour and a half by Special Prosecutor Hiram C. Todd and Attorney General Ward and was told to hold himself in readiness for further examination, he said.

Boczor said his testimony had been largely the same as his earlier statements before federal and county grand juries—that Ewald had told him he had paid $12,000 for his magistracy, $10,000 to Martin J. Healy, resigned city official and Tammany district leader, and $2,000 to Dr. Francis Schirp, a member of the Steuben society which had recommended Ewald's appointment to Mayor Walker.

WOUNDED IN A STREET FIGHT IN TALLAHASSEE

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., Sept. 16—(AP)—Fred O. Eberhardt, Tallahassee publisher, exonerated recently of charges that he conspired to cause the assassination of Governor Doyle E. Carlton, shot and wounded O. L. Bankston, of Crestview, Fla., in a street fight here today.

Witnesses said Bankston met Eberhardt on a street corner and assaulted him. The publisher drew a pistol and Bankston was shot in the hand as he attempted to push the gun away.

Eberhardt told authorities he did not know his assailant and could ascribe no reason for the attack.

He and Bankston and J. M. Harvell, who was seen in company with Bankston here, were arrested and held for an investigation.

U. S. ATTY. C. S. TUTTLE OF N. Y. RESIGNS; OUT FOR REPEAL OF 18TH AMENDMENT

NEW YORK, Sept. 16—(AP)—United States Attorney Charles H. Tuttle tonight announced his resignation, but said he did not wish to be considered for the republican nomination for governor and declared for repeal of the 18th amendment.

Mr. Tuttle, who has been considered a strong possibility for the republican gubernatorial honor, caused widespread comment in political circles by his pronouncement of his wishes in that regard. He refused to add to his formal statement and there was much speculation as to its significance.

Besides repeal of the 18th amendment, he said, he favors a constitutional guarantee outlawing the saloon and private liquor traffic for private profit. Meanwhile he favors strict enforcement of the amendment.

He sent his resignation to President Hoover to take effect not later than Nov. 16. The republican state convention will be held Sept. 25.

"National prohibition," Mr. Tuttle said, "as embodied in the 18th amendment, goes far beyond the outlawing of the saloon system; and even far beyond a grant to congress of power to give all possible cooperation and assistance to those states which desire within their own borders the prohibition system. It undertakes permanently to prevent any state from adopting any other system.

"Out of this latter undertaking the acknowledged evils of national prohibition have largely come. Real temperance and respect for law cannot be maintained by means of compulsion, unless the means are such as local sentiment approves. . . .

"The good in national prohibition lies in its outlawing of the saloon and the saloon system, and its grant to congress of power to cooperate internthe saloon system, and its grant to congress of power to cooperate internally with states that maintain a prohibition system and to protect such states from imporations of liquor from without. These principles, I believe, should be preserved in the constitution.

"On the other hand, the evil in national prohibition lies largely in the compulsion sought to be placed upon the states which do not desire the prohibition system. This principle, I believe, should be eliminated from the constitution."

Mr. Tuttle's statement followed an afternoon conference with William J. Maier, republican state chairman, at state headquarters. Mr. Maier immediately called a conference of upstate republican leaders and it was believed Mr. Tuttle's present status with respect to the nomination would be discussed.

Despite Mr. Tuttle's announcement that he did not wish to be considered as a candidate, some New York newspapers and close followers of political developments expressed the belief he would be among the foremost possibilities considered at the convention.

SENATE FUNDS COMMITTEE RESORTING TO SUBPOENAS

T. R. Thompson, Editor of the Rockville Republic, of Which Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick is Publisher, Has Been Served With Summons—The Committee Has Dropped All Espionage Charges and All Evidence Pertaining to Espionage.

ROCKFORD, Ill., Sept. 16—(AP)—Subpoenas ordering their appearance before the senate committee investigating Illinois campaign expenses at Chicago were served today on T. R. Thompson, editor of the Rockford Republic, of which Ruth Hanna McCormick is publisher; H. L. Boynton of Byron; Harry Warner, Dixon; and Charles H. Green, Freeport.

SENATE COMMITTEE DROPS ALL ESPIONAGE CHARGES

CHICAGO, Sept. 16—(AP)—All espionage charges, and evidence pertaining to espionage, were summarily dropped today by the senate committee inquiring into senatorial campaign expenditures in Illinois.

The committee decided to return forthwith to its main line of inquiry, investigation of the expenditures of Congresswoman Ruth Hannah McCormick in the primary election which gave her the republican nomination to the United States senate. Mr. Nye explained that the committee is pressed for time and wishes to conclude its work in Chicago by Saturday night.

Attorney General Oscar E. Carlstrom of Illinois stood by with a statement "in defense of the honor of Mrs. McCormick" and had present two witnesses by which he declared he would prove investigators for the committee practiced both espionage and wire-tapping.

He was not allowed to read his statement and his witnesses were not allowed to testify. To his protests, Chairman Gerald P. Nye of North Dakota replied each time with "Call Mrs Reinecke."

Mrs. Mabel G. Reinecke was a witness. She turned upon the committee with a lecture.

"You have disreputed our whole campaign," she charged. "It has seemed strange to us that while Mrs. McCormick, the only woman to be nominated for the United States senate, is interfered with, other candidates have not been."

Nye protested that the committee had no intention of interfering with Mrs. McCormick's campaign.

PUTS MRS. McCORMICK IN CLASS WITH VARE

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16—(AP)—Senator Frazier, republican, North Dakota, said today that if the senate seated Ruth Hanna McCormick in the event she were elected from Illinois it would be a repudiation of its action in the cases of William S. Vare and Frank Smith, who were barred because of excessive campaign expenditures.

Vare was elected from Pennsylvania and Smith from Illinois. Mrs. McCormick, republican nominee for senator from Illinois, has informed the senate campaign funds investigating committee that she spent $250,-000 in her primary campaign.

Frazier said he believed opposition to seating Mrs. McCormick would be strong.

The North Dakota senator said he believed Mrs. McCormick was injuring herself by the accusation that her telephone wires had been tapped and that her personal effects had been rifled by agents of the senate campaign funds committee.

WHEAT PRICES HIGHER ON WINNIPEG STOCK EXCHANGE

WINNIPEG, Man., Sept. 16—(AP)—Mysterious last-minute strength, attributed in some quarters to "shorts" running to cover, shot wheat prices higher on the Winnipeg grain exchange today.

After reaching the lowest point in 17 years, when the Octoper future touched 78 1-4, the market advanced sharply in the last few minutes of trading to close with net gains ranging from 1 3-8 cents to 1 5-8 cents a bushel.

October, after its record low slide, closed out at 80 5-8 cents; November at 82; December 83 1-8 to 1-4 and May at 89 5-8. A year ago, the October future was quoted at $1.50 7-8 a bushel, and May at $1.57 5-8.

The early decline today was attributed to lower Liverpool cables and an inactive export trade.

NO IMMEDIATE ACTION ON UNITED STATES OF EUROPE

GENEVA, Sept. 16—(AP)—After the League of Nations assembly had heard today the views of a score of governments on what the world needs to advance the cause of disarmament and relieve widespread economic depression, the delegates went into a night session to take up formally French Foreign Minister Briand's proposal for a "United States of Europe."

The assembly, it was announced, was prepared to dispose formally of the Briand proposal early tomorrow. A resolution to that end was read to the assembly tonight but its adoption was postponed until morning.

Leading delegates have agreed the best way to handle the French minister's plan is to submit it to a special committee representing all European states which are members of the league for their further study.

The results of their deliberations, it is widely suggested, will be presented to the assembly next September. Thus, for a twelve-month at least, the hope of immediate action has vanished.

DEATH FROM ALLEGED ILLEGAL OPERATION

BRIDGEPORT, Sept. 16—(AP)—Blood poisoning which developed from an alleged illegal operation performed on her August 23, resulted in the death of Miss Elizabeth Celuck, 22, daughter of Joseph Celuck, late today in Bridgeport hospital.

Miss Celuck's sweetheart, Anthony Sozanski, 24, Stratford, to whom she was engaged, and was to have been married this week, was arrested tonight on a technical charge of breach of the peace. He was released on a bond of $500 furnished by his parents.

Sozanski will be a witness for the state against Dr. Edward C. Krause, 58, of this city, who is accused by Miss Celuck and Sozanski, of having performed the alleged illegal operation on the girl.

FOR UPWARD REVISION OF THE CANADIAN TARIFF

OTTAWA, Ont., Sept. 16—(AP)—An upward revision of the tariff as a means to aid unemployment was proposed today by Premier R. B. Bennett in a bill presented the house committee on ways and means. One hundred and thirty articles were on the list including iron, steel, gasoline, cottons, woolens, fresh meats, butter and agricultural products.

A general revision of the tariff is proposed at the next session of parliament, the premier announced, the present revision merely being a temporary expedient to relieve unemployment.

WOMAN ARRESTED IN BUCKLEY MURDER CASE

DETROIT, Sept. 16—(AP)—Dorothy Duval, alleged "finger woman," in the assassination of Radio Announcer Jerry Buckley in the La Salle hotel July 23, was reported under arrest with her husband today.

The woman is said to have telephoned Buckley at midnight July 22, asking him to meet her in the lobby of the hotel where he was killed.

AMERICA'S CUP RACE PREVENTED BY FOG

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 16—(AP)—Befogged and almost becalmed, the America's cup armada rode at anchor in the harbor today instead of riding the waves out to sea.

The third race of the series in which the defender Enterprise twice so far has outsailed the challenger Shamrock V., was postponed until 10:20 a. m. (EST), tomorrow by the race committee of the New York Yacht club.

Two big steam yachts had already collided in trying to nose their way out through the murk. Hazards awaited any concerted attempt by the fleet to go out and conditions obviously were impossible for a satisfactory race.

The harbor, boats and race-course were blanketed for hours by a drenching fog that Britons compared to a "London particular", supposed to be the No. 1 brand of fog density. The vapor was so thick that it felt like rain.

TEXTILE WORKERS ARE CONSIDERING STRIKE

DANVILLE, Va., Sept. 16—(AP)—Meetings of United Textile Workers members were held here this afternoon and tonight to begin consideration of a proposed strike in the Riverside and Dan River mills. It was said a vote on the proposal might require several days.

The union's recent convention in New York adopted a resolution authorizing "drastic action" in the impasse between the mill management and the workers.

The union here has some 4,000 members, about half of whom are unemployed as a result of personnel reductions recently made by the management.

ANOTHER MAN BOTHERING CONGRESSMAN DE PRIEST

CHICAGO, Sept. 16—(AP)—Inquiry into the alleged attempt to exort $10,000 from Oscar De Priest, Negro congressman, was renewed today with the arrest of a man seeking to enter the representative's office carrying a revolves and a pint of liquor. The man, giving the name of Leon Linder, was taken to the criminal court building for examination.

Three men were named in true bills voted by the county grand jury yesterday charged with trying to collect $10,000 from De Priest under threat of death.

TWO BUILDINGS IN SHARON STRUCK BY LIGHTNING

SHARON, Sept. 16—(AP)—Lights were out, telephone connections were broken, scores of trees were blown down, and two buildings were struck by lightning here tonight, when this vicinity was visited by the worst wind and electrical storm in years.

It started at about 5:30 p. m., with a strong wind which uprooted many trees and tossed them across the highways. The severe electrical storm accompanied by a heavy rain, lasted for nearly five hours.

YE OLD COLONY INN, NEAR MERIDEN, RAIDED

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 16—(AP)—Federal agents, headed by Algot W. Knutson, today raided Ye Old Colony inn on the North Colony road near Meriden and arrested George Morgan, 28, alleged proprietor. Assorted liquors valued at $1,000 and several cases of Canadian ale were seized by the raiders.

UNITED STATES LEADS IN INT'AL BRIDGE CONTEST

LONDON, Sept. 16—(AP)—The United States was 2,965 points up on the British team in the international bridge contest today when the players adjourned for dinner after 31 hands.

The American players had a lead of 905 points at the conclusion of yesterday's first day's play.

ROGERS REP. NOMINEE FOR GOVERNOR ON STATE'S LIQUOR CONTROL PLATFORM

State Ticket Was Nominated Without Any Real Contest—Levitt Received Four Votes for Gubernatorial Nomination and Pape Two Votes for Comptroller—Roraback is Credited With Having Blocked a Wet Plank Calling for Repeal of the 18th Amendment and the Volstead Act—State Central Committee Re-Elected Its Present Officers.

HARTFORD, Sept. 16—(AP)—The republican party of Connecticut today nominated Lieut. Gov. Ernest E. Rogers, of New London, a dry, as its candidate for governer, and adopted a platform advocating restoration of liquor control to the states.

In the November election Rogers will oppose Dr. Wilbur L. Cross, dean emeritus of Yale university graduate school, the wet democratic candidate.

The democratic platform calls for repeal of the 18th amendment and the Volstead act.

In a session that lasted less than an hour and a half, the republicans named the following ticket besides Rogers:

Lieutenant governor, Samuel R. Spencer, Suffield.

Secretary of state, Dr. William L. Higgins, Coventry, incumbent.

Treasurer, Roy C. Wilcox, Meriden.

Comptroller, Frederick M. Salmon, Westport, incumbent.

Attorney general, U. S. Judge Warren B. Burrows, Groton.

Albert Levitt, of Redding, former Brooklyn law professor, was nominated in opposition to Rogers, but in a rising vote received only four votes. The only other contest was for comptroller in which William J. Pape, Waterbury publisher, was named, as an opponent of Salmon. Pape got two votes on a rising vote.

Levitt and Pape have conducted a vigorous campaign against J. Henry Roraback, state chairman of the republican committee who was re-elected to that position today for the eleventh time.

They were nominated by George W. Hull, of Burlington, one of the three pledged delegates obtained in the primaries. After Rogers and Salmon had been nominated, Hull moved that their nominations be made unanimous.

With the state certain of nomination, the interest of the delegates today was centered in the platform, particularly the plank dealing with prohibition. The resolutions committee last night adopted a plank which called for repeal of the 18th amendment and the Volstead act, but the wording was changed overnight upon the insistence of Roraback.

Roraback, it was learned, threatened to resign the party management if such a plank were adopted. So in its place, a plank urging restoration of state control was passed and approved by the convention without a dissenting vote.

The text of the prohibition plank follows:

"Conditions arising from the passage of the 18th amendment and the enactment of the Volstead act are unsound and unsatisfactory and disappointing to everyone. For this situation, Connecticut is no way responsible. Connecticut did not ratify the 18th amendment. Both of our senators and all our congressmen voted against the amendment and against the Volstead act.

"Their action was approved by the republican party in Connecticut. This action was based on the fundamental principle that regulation of this kind is properly the function of the several states and not of the federal government and we therefore urge upon our representatives in the national congress the need of prompt remedial action and that they assist in taking those steps which shall as early as possible restore to the states of the union the right to regulate their own affairs in regard to such matters."

Other planks in the platform commended administration of President Hoover, saying party pledges had been fulfilled, upheld principle of protective tariff; commended administration of Gov. Trumbull; approved pay-as-you-go policy in state building; approved reduction of state taxes as business policy; urged improvement of rural roads; endorsed newly created water commission; praised operation of state board of health; urged continuation of tuberculosis work with a progressive policy toward prevention of the disease; recommended development of comprehensive preventive program in treatment of dependents, defectives and delinquents.

The plank on prohibition and many of the others followed closely recommendations made by Senator Frederick C. Walcott, the convention chairman, in his keynote speech last night.

The revolt against the plank as favored by a large majority of the resolutions committee last night, declaring that relief from "intolerable" conditions arising under the prohibition law could be best obtained by repeal, was due to fear that dry republicans would not go to the polls at the November elections. Such a move, it was pointed out, might jeopardize the election of at least three republican nominees for congress.

In the arguments of those opposed to a repeal clause, it was claimed that repeal of the 18th amendment was almost an impossibility because 13 states by an adverse vote could prevent resubmission of the question. And so, it was asked, why endanger republican success in Connecticut?

Outside of the prohibition question, the delegates were interested chiefly in the candidate for attorney general. It was with general surprise that the name of U. S. Judge Burrows was introduced as a possible candidate. It was soon learned that he was in a receptive mood and his name was placed upon the slate. Judge Burrows was known to be desirous and exacting. He will submit his resignation to President Hoover in the immediate future.

After adjournment of the convention, Prof. Levitt issued a statement definitely stating that he would not run as an independent candidate for governor. He announced that he would not do anything "to embarrass the republican party before election.

"But," he said, "after the election we shall start once more to see if we can bring [illegible] ernment in accordance with our Connecticut tradition."

Lieut. Gov. Rogers, in his brief acceptance speech, made no reference to prohibition. He confined himself to a commendation of the administration of Gov. Trumbull and pledged himself "to work whole-heartedly for the best interests of all the people in Connecticut."

The state central committee met after the convention and re-elected its present officers. Besides Chairman, and Clarence G. Willard, of rine Byrne, of Putnam, vice chairman, and Clarenc eG. Willard, of New Haven, secretary.

AMERICAN GUNBOAT FIGHTS CHINESE COMMUNISTS

SHANGHAI, Sept. 16—(AP)—The American gunboat Luzon today fought a brief engagement with communists who have been firing upon foreign shipping from the Yangtse river shores between Kiukiang and Shasi. Rear Admiral Thomas Craven, commander of the American Yangtse patrol, directed the Luzon's fire.

The Americans suffered no casualties. What punishment was inflicted upon the Reds could not be learned.

When the Luzon was 25 miles above Wusueh, Hupeh province, the outlaws attacked with field guns and trench mortars. The skirmish lasted 40 minutes over 15 miles of the river, the gunboat sweeping the north shore with fire while it was proceeding down river to investigate their attacks upon commercial shipping.

The British gunboat Gnat, following the Luzon, was engaged later by Reds near Wusueh and poured much lead ashore without silencing the outlaws fire.

Besides visiting depredations upon Yangtse communities, the Reds continue their grip upon Hunan province, although not pushing their campaign against the Nationalist forces.

26 JOHN DOE WARRANTS FOR CHICAGO GANGSTERS

CHICAGO, Sept. 16—(AP)—The Daily Illustrated Times said today that Judge John H. Lyle issued John Doe warrants for the arrest of 26 men named as public enemies by the Chicago crime commission.

The paper said the warrants had been setn to the East Chicago police station to be served. They charged vagrancy.

The list includes gang leaders, booze runners, hi-jackers and racketeers of all sorts, and is headed by Alphonse "Scarface Al" Capone.

Others named were Ralph Capone, Tony "Mops" Volpe, Frankie Rio, James Belcastro, Jack Demore, known as "Machine Gun Jack" McGurn, Rocco Fannelli, "Dago Lawrence" Mangano, Jack Gyzick, Frank Diamond, George "Bugs" Moran, Joseph Aiello, Edward "Spike" O'Donnell, Joe Saltis, Frank McErlane, Vincent McErlane, Danny Stanton, William "Klondike" O'Donnell, Myles O'Donnell, Frankie Lake, Terrence Druggan, James "Fur" Sammons, George "Red" Barker, William "Three Fingers" White, Joseph Genero and Leo Mongoven.

At least one warrant was unnecessary, for detectives arrested Danny Stanton earlier in the day. They said they found a loaded revolver in a pocket of Stanton's automobile.

RESIGNATION OF ADMIRAL C. L. HUGHES ACCEPTED

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16—(AP)—President Hoover today accepted the resignation of Admiral Charles F. Hughes, chief of naval operations, who leaves active service in the navy tomorrow when he is relieved by Admiral William V. Pratt.

"During your service in the navy," the president said, "you have successfully commanded all units of the fleet, culminating in the present highest office offered by the navy, from which you now feel it is your duty to resign. I wish to express my appreciation of the splendid services you have performed, and also the conviction that your resignation will be received with deep regret, not only from the naval service, but from the country as a whole."

Although Admiral Hughes will not be 64, the statutory age of retirement, until October 14, he said he took the action at this time "because of the realization that during the next two months important surveys and plans must be made for the future development of the navy."

BOXES OF JEWELS STOLEN FROM HOUSE IN FAIRFIELD

FAIRFIELD, Sept. 16—(AP)—While Senator and Mrs. Albert E. Lavery were attending the republican state convention at Hartford, their residence here was entered and three boxes of jewels were taken, while a fourth one was untouched. Senator Lavery is unable to estimate his loss. His daughter, Sally, who owns the contents of one of the boxes, is out of town and until her return the value is unknown.

Some family antiques which Mr. Lavery brought throught were in this box, were found in a drawer which had not been disturbed by the entrant.

MOTHER OF 13 CHILDREN SENTENCED TO REFORMATORY

AUGUSTA, Me., Sept. 16—(AP)—M[illegible] Eva B. Coulomb, 26, mother of [illegible] children, today was sentenced to the women's reformatory at Skowhegan by Municipal Judge Tifin, on a charge of wanton behavior. Following her arraignment the woman attempted to wrest a pistol from a state highway officer standing near the door of the courtroom, but was unsuccessful. She told the court she expected soon to be a mother for the fourteenth time.

SOFIA, Sept. 16.—(AP)—King Boris and his sister, Princess Eudoxia, returned from a trip to Germany that was widely reported to have been connected with marriage plans for the princess. The name of the Prince of Hesse was mentioned frequently.

LIMA, Sept. 16.—(AP)—Thirty-five prominent political and military men were reported to have been arrested on political grounds by the military government of Lieutenant Colonel Luis M. Sanchez Cerro.

LONDON, Sept. 16.—(AP)—The m[illegible] of thirteen lions have arrived [illegible] well known military tailoring [illegible]lishment in London to be made into headdresses for the "Lion of Judah," Ras Tafari, the emperor of Abyssinia.

BASEL, Switzerland, Sept. 16.—(AP)—The bank for international settlements today advised Spain, Bulgaria and Rumania that plans submitted for the stabilization of their respective mometary units—the peseta, the lev and the lei—had been accepted, and that the bank was ready to advance the necessary loans for that purpose.

PARIS, Sept. 16.—(AP)—Henry Ford announced to an international gathering of newspapermen that he expected shortly to begin manufacturing his automobiles in France and to do away with the assembly system he has previously employed. He hinted he might adopt this policy throughout Europe.

A SEVERE LIGHTNING STORM IN WATERBURY

WATERBURY, Sept. 16—(AP)—This city was in utter darkness for nearly 20 minutes tonight when lightning struck a breaker in the main power station here of the Connecticut Light and Power company and burned out a bearing as well as causing a short circuit. Since the station serves practically the entire city, all current was cut off leaving streets, homes, theatres and stores dark.

Police were forced to use their flashlights to direct what traffic moved but most auto operators remained parked for the time. Auxiliary lighting systems were switched on in the theatres and the telephone company. More than 100 telephones were reported as out of order. The electrical storm which hovered over the city for more than two hours was the worst in years.

Vivid flashes of lightning flared low over the house tops and at times the streets were as light as day from the continued illumination.

Considerable rain fell during the storm which slowly swept down the Naugatuck valley. Many dirt roads were washed out.

COMMISSIONERS TO OPERATE THE FLEXIBLE TARIFF BILL

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16—(AP)—Five men, four of them experts in tariff matters and the other a veteran diplomat, today were charged by President Hoover with operation of the flexible provisions of the recently enacted Hawley-Smoot act.

To the three commissioners previously selected—Henry P. Fletcher of Pennsylvania as chairman, Thomas Walker Page of Virginia and Dr. John Lee Coulter of North Dakota, chief economist of the commission—President Hoover today added the names of Edgar B. Brossard of Utah, the present chairman, and Alfred P. Dennis of Maryland, now the vice-chairman.

The sixth member of the commission, which is to be bi-partisan under the tariff act, is to be announced later. Mr. Hoover said the last minute declination to serve by one of the proposed democratic appointees would prevent completion of the group for a week or ten days.

LEVEL OF FARM PRICES THE LOWEST SINCE 1916

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—(AP)—The general level of farm prices during the month ending August 15 was described today by the department of agriculture as at the lowest since 1916.

Suffering a further decline from the sharp break during the preceding month, the index dropped with 111 on July 15, 123 on June 15 and 143 a year ago.

Early in 1916, when farm prices began their war climb, the index was at 100. The index of 108 on August 15 was 2 per cent below the lowest level reached in 1921, when a low level was established for the post war period.

Price advances from August 15 to September 15 at primary markets, however, have outweighed declines, although cotton and wheat failed to maintain their gains into the first part of September. Hogs, cattle, potatoes, and butter had the largest gains.

YACHTS UNDAMAGED IN COLLISION OFF NEWPORT

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 16—(AP)—The identity of the two yachts which collided in the harbor during the dense fog today which caused postponement of the third scheduled America's cup race, was established later in the afternoon when it was discovered that neither had been badly damaged.

The craft were the Silia, owned by Archie M. Andrews, of Los Angeles and the Seaborn of Richard F. Howe, of Glen Cove, L. I.

The collision occurred shortly before the race was called off.

The Silia it was understood, formerly was owned by Henry Ford, and at one time was saved after going aground on some rocks.

DECREASE REPORTED IN REVENUE CAR LOADINGS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16—(AP)—Revenue car loadings for the week ending September 6 were reported today by the American Railway association to have totalled 856,637 cars.

This was a decrease of 127,847 cars below the preceding week, which the association attributed to the Labor day holiday, and a reduction of 124,402 cars below the corresponding week in 1929.

Miscellaneous freight loadings for the week aggregated 339,403 cars, a decrease of 72,093 cars from the same week a year ago.

Butler Leads Draper In Bay State Primary

For the Republican Nomination for United States Senate—Fitzgerald Defeated.

BOSTON, Sept. 17—(AP)— William M. Butler, dry candidate for the republican nomination for U. S. senator, wid[illegible] his lead over Eben S. Draper, [illegible]earest wet opponent to nearly 6,000 votes, with [illegible] precincts out of 1649 in the sta[illegible]rted early today.

[illegible]ote: Butler, 39,059; Draper, [illegible] Gillis, 4,801.

[illegible] same precincts in the contest [illegible]he democratic nomination for [illegible]tor gave:

Coolidge, 29,372; Foss, 5,452; Joyce, [illegible]842; O'Brien 19,363; O'Connell, 27,-910.

Governor Frank G. Allen was swamping former Mayor John D. Devir, of Malden, who opposed him for renomination for governor in the republican primary. The vote was:

Allen, 70,709; Devir, 4,733.

The governor's renomination was unquestionably assured.

In the democratic contest for governor the vote was:

Cummings, 4 047; Ely, 45,101; Fitzgerald, 40,506.

Boston 330 reports precincts gave, for senator, in the democratic primary:

The vote for governor in the same primary gave:

Cummings, 3,518; Ely, 41,898; Fitzgerald, 40,383.

For governor, in the republican primary in Boston, the vote of the 330 precincts was:

Allen, 26,741; Devir, 1,723.

FITZGERALD CONCEDES NOMINATION TO ELY

BOSTON, Sept. 16.—(AP)—John F. Fitzgerald conceded the democratic gubernatorial nomination to Joseph B. Ely, of Westfield, in the following telegram tonight from his bed at the Robert Breck hospital:

"Nurse sets lights off and am off to sleep. Returns indicate your nomination. I congratulate you and pledge you my hearty support."

LINGLE MURDER SUSPECT IN JAIL AS A VAGRANT

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Sept. 16—(AP)—Ted Geisking, sought for several days as the suspected murdered of Alfred Lingle, Chicago reporter, was found today to have been in jail here on vagrancy charges since last Friday. A detective recognized him by a picture.

Hardly had the man admitted his identity before press dispatches from Chicago said authorities there were not so certain after all that Geisking shot the reporter. The man himself flatly denied that he had done it, or even knew Lingle. Police said he admitted rum running and hijacking.

A man brought here by George Williams, Chicago detective, and said to have seen the Lingle slayer, said, "that looks like the man except for his hair," and so Geisking was given a shampoo. That, however, failed to disclose any evidence of hair dye.

"Just showed he needed a shampoo," said a detective rather disgustedly."

Geisking was picked up as a vagrant and gave his name as Emmeral Harris, 22, Chicago laborer.

BRUENING TO CONTINUE CHANCELLOR OF GERMANY

BERLIN, Sept. 16—(AP)—The cabinet decided unanimously today that Dr. Heinrich Bruening should carry on as chancellor and place before the new reichstag Oct. 13 a program for solving Germany's economic, financial and social problems.

The chancellor immediately will consult party leaders and see what support can be obtained for continuing his administration following the elections of Sunday, which greatly increased fascist and communist representation in the country's leading legislative house.

Meanwhile, the various parties are calling conferences to establish their views, with the state party scheduled to have the first meeting tomorrow.

DETROIT MAYORALTY CONTEST TO GO TO COURT

DEROIT, Sept. 16.—(AP)—Charles S. Abbott, attorney for Mayor Charles Bowles, announced today that the mayor intends to force Mayor-elect Frank Murphy through quo warranto proceedings to prove the latter's title to the office, and that he plans to carry his case to the United States supreme court if necessary.

Riot At Maryland State Penitentiary

Prison Guard Was Shot—Nine Convicts Attempted to Escape.

BALTIMORE, Sept. 16—(AP)—A prison guard was shot, probably fatally, this afternoon when he detected an attempt by nine prisoners, lifers and long termers, to escape over one of the walls of the Maryland state penitentiary here.

More than a score of shots were exchanged between guards and convicts, and a riot call brought 200 policemen to the prson, which is situated in the heart of the city.

The guard shot was Albert Owen, 39. He was taken to a hospital where it was reported his condition from a wound in his side was critical.

The escape attempt was made and discovered shortly after 5 p. m. as the prison shops were closing for the day, and for several hours little but wild rumors of revolt was obtainable. The official account of the affair came from Stuart S. Janney, chairman of the state board of welfare.

Janney said the nine prisoners, led by Rawlings Whittemore, serving a 21-year-term for bank robbery in the same prison, where his brother, Richard Reese Whittemore, was hanged several years ago, were attempting to throw a rope ladder over the wall from the roof of the foundry when Owen discovered them.

The guard fired at the group, but himself was shot twice in the answering hail of bullets from the armed prisoners.

The shooting attracted other guards, who hearded the nine into a corner during a gun battle in which no one else was hit. The guards finally captured them and found two pistols in their possession.

Besides Whittemore, the group attempting escape included J. L. (Wiggles) Smith, serving life for murder; Edward Harding and Hunter Lewis, life for the murder of a grocer in a holdup; George Bailey, 15 years for safe cracking; August Byer, Robert Minner and Lew Mercer, serving long terms for the daylight holdup of the Ruoff Jewelry shop in Baltimore.

Whittemore was convicted for the hold up of a bank at Westminster more than a year ago. Another in the group was Edward Cissel.

TAKING TESTIMONY IN MAGISTRATE EWALD CASE

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—(AP)— Two witnesses testified today at the first session of a special grand jury investigating charges that former Magistrate George F. Ewald's appointment to the bench in 1927 was paid for.

Sheriff Thomas M. Farley of New York county, who had not previously been connected directly with the Ewald case, signed a waiver of immunity and replied, as a Tammany leader of long experience, to questions about the manner in which candidates for judicial office in New York are selected.

On emerging from the jury room he said only, "I could tell them nothing they were interested in."

Emmerich Boczor, one time secretary to Ewald, was questioned for an hour and a half by Special Prosecutor Hiram C. Todd and Attorney General Ward and was told to hold himself in readiness for further examination, he said.

Boczor said his testimony had been largely the same as his earlier statements before federal and county grand juries—that Ewald had told him he had paid $12,000 for his magistracy, $10,000 to Martin J. Healy, resigned city official and Tammany district leader, and $2,000 to Dr. Francis Schirp, a member of the Steuben society which had recommended Ewald's appointment to Mayor Walker.

WOUNDED IN A STREET FIGHT IN TALLAHASSEE

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., Sept. 16—(AP)—Fred O. Eberhardt, Tallahassee publisher, exonerated recently of charges that he consired to cause the assassination of Governor Doyle E. Carlton, shot and wounded O. L. Bankston, of Crestview, Fla., in a street fight here today.

Witnesses said Bankston met Eberhardt on a street corner and assaulted him. The publisher drew a pistol and Bankston was shot in the hand as he attempted to push the gun away.

Eberhardt told authorities he did not know his assailant and could ascribe no reason for the attack.

He and Bankston and J. M. Harvell, who was seen in company with Bankston here, were arrested and held for an investigation.

U. S. ATTY. C. S. TUTTLE OF N. Y. RESIGNS; OUT FOR REPEAL OF 18TH AMENDMENT

NEW YORK, Sept. 16—(AP)—United States Attorney Charles H. Tuttle tonight announced his resignation, but said he did not wish to be considered for the republican nomination for governor and declared for repeal of the 18th amendment.

Mr. Tuttle, who has been considered a strong possibility for the republican gubernatorial honor, caused widespread comment in political circles by his pronouncement of his wishes in that regard. He refused to add to his formal statement and there was much speculation as to its significance.

Besides repeal of the 18th amendment, he said, he favors a constitutional guarantee outlawing the saloon and private liquor traffic for private profit. Meanwhile he favors strict enforcement of the amendment.

He sent his resignation to President Hoover to take effect not later than Nov. 16. The republican state convention will be held Sept. 25.

"National prohibition," Mr. Tuttle said, "as embodied in the 18th amendment, goes far beyond the outlawing of the saloon system; and even far beyond a grant to congress of power to give all possible cooperation and assistance to those states which desire within their own borders the prohibition system. It undertakes permanently to prevent any state from adopting any other system.

"Out of this latter undertaking the acknowledged evils of national prohibition have largely come. Real temperance and respect for law cannot be maintained by means of compulsion, unless the means are such as local sentiment approves. . . .

"The good in national prohibition lies in its outlawing of the saloon and the saloon system, and its grant to congress of power to cooperate internthe saloon system, and its grant to congress of power to cooperate internally with states that maintain a prohibition system and to protect such states from imporations of liquor from without. These principles, I believe, should be preserved in the constitution.

"On the other hand, the evil in national prohibition lies largely in the compulsion sought to be placed upon the states which do not desire the prohibition system. This principle, I believe, should be eliminated from the constitution."

Mr. Tuttle's statement followed an afternoon conference with William J. Maier, republican state chairman, at state headquarters. Mr. Maier immediately called a conference of upstate republican leaders and it was believed Mr. Tuttle's present status with respect to the nomination would be discussed.

Despite Mr. Tuttle's announcement that he did not wish to be considered as a candidate, some New York newspapers and close followers of political developments expressed the belief he would be among the foremost possibilities considered at the convention.

SENATE FUNDS COMMITTEE RESORTING TO SUBPOENAS

T. R. Thompson, Editor of the Rockville Republic, of Which Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick is Publisher, Has Been Served With Summons—The Committee Has Dropped All Espionage Charges and All Evidence Pertaining to Espionage.

ROCKFORD, Ill., Sept. 16 — (AP) — Subpoenas ordering their appearance before the senate committee investigating Illinois campaign expenses at Chicago were served today on T. B. Thompson, editor of the Rockford Republic, of which Ruth Hanna McCormick is publisher; H. L. Boynton of Byron; Harry Warner, Dixon; and Charles H. Green, Freepert.

SENATE COMMITTEE DROPS ALL ESPIONAGE CHARGES

CHICAGO, Sept. 16—(AP)—All espionage charges, and evidence pertaining to espionage, were summarily dropped today by the senate committee inquiring into senatorial campaign expenditures in Illinois.

The committee decided to return forthwith to its main line of inquiry, investigation of the expenditures of Congresswoman Ruth Hannah McCormick in the primary election which gave her the republican nomination to the United States senate. Mr. Nye explained that the committee is pressed for time and wishes to conclude its work in Chicago by Saturday night.

Attorney General Oscar E. Carlstrom of Illinois stood by with a statement "in defense of the honor of Mrs. McCormick" and had present two witnesses by which he declared he would prove investigators for the committee practiced both espionage and wire-tapping.

He was not allowed to read his statement and his witnesses were not allowed to testify. To his protests, Chairman Gerald P. Nye of North Dakota replied each time with "Call Mrs Reinecke."

Mrs. Mabel G. Reinecke was a witness. She turned upon the committee with a lecture.

"You have disreputed our whole campaign," she charged. "It has seemed strange to us that while Mrs. McCormick, the only woman to be nominated for the United States senate, is interfered with, other candidates have not been."

Nye protested that the committee had no intention of interfering with Mrs. McCormick's campaign.

PUTS MRS. McCORMICK IN CLASS WITH VARE

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.— (AP) — Senator Frazier, republican, North Dakota, said today that if the senate seated Ruth Hanna McCormick in the event she were elected from Illinois it would be a repudiation of its action in the cases of William S. Vare and Frank Smith, who were barred because of excessive campaign expenditures.

Vare was elected from Pennsylvania and Smith from Illinois. Mrs. McCormick, republican nominee for senator from Illinois, has informed the senate campaign funds investigating committee that she spent $250,000 in her primary campaign.

Frazier said he believed opposition to seating Mrs. McCormick would be strong.

The North Dakota senator said he believed Mrs. McCormick was injuring herself by the accusation that her telephone wires had been tapped and that her personal effects had been rifle by agents of the senate campaign funds committee.

WHEAT PRICES HIGHER ON WINNIPEG STOCK EXCHANGE

WINNIPEG, Man., Sept. 16 — (AP)—Mysterious last-minute strength, attributed in some quarters to "shorts" running to cover, shot wheat prices higher on the Winnipeg grain exchange today.

After reaching the lowest point in 17 years, when the Octoper future touched 78 1-4, the market advanced sharply in the last few minutes of trading to close with net gains ranging from 1 3-8 cents to 1 5-8 cents a bushel.

October, after its record low slide, closed out at 80 5-8 cents; November at 83; December 83 1-8 to 1-4 and May at 89 5-8. A year ago, the October future was quoted at $1.50 7-8 a bushel, and May at $1.57 5-8.

The early decline today was attributed to lower Liverpool cables and an inactive export trade.

NO IMMEDIATE ACTION ON UNITED STATES OF EUROPE

GENEVA, Sept. 16.—(AP)—After the League of Nations assembly had heard today the views of a score of governments on what the world needs to advance the cause of disarmament and relieve widespread economic depression, the delegates went into a night session to take up formally French Foreign Minister Briand's proposal for a "United States of Europe."

The assembly, it was announced, was prepared to dispose formally of the Briand proposal early tomorrow. A resolution to that end was read to the assembly tonight but its adoption was postponed until morning.

Leading delegates have agreed the best way to handle the French minister's plan is to submit it to a special committee representing all European states which are members of the league for their further study.

The results of their deliberations, it is widely suggested, will be presented to the assembly next September. Thus, for a twelve-month at least, the hope of immediate action has vanished.

DEATH FROM ALLEGED ILLEGAL OPERATION

BRIDGEPORT, Sept. 16—(AP)—Blood poisoning which developed from an alleged illegal operation performed on her August 23, resulted in the death of Miss Elizabeth Celuck, 22, daughter of Joseph Celuck, late today in Bridgeport hospital.

Miss Celuck's sweetheart, Anthony Soranski, 24, Stratford, to whom she was engaged, and was to have been married this week, was arrested tonight on a technical charge of breach of the peace. He was released on a bond of $500 furnished by his parents.

Sozanski will be a witness for the state against Dr. Edward C. Krause, 59, of this city, who is accused by Miss Celuck and Sozanski, of having performed the alleged illegal operation on the girl.

FOR UPWARD REVISION OF THE CANADIAN TARIFF

OTTAWA, Ont., Sept. 16—(AP)— An upward revision of the tariff as a means to aid unemployment was proposed today by Premier R. B. Bennett in a bill presented the house committee on ways and means. One hundred and thirty articles were on the list including iron, steel, gasoline, cottons, woolens, fresh meats, butter and agricultural products.

A general revision of the tariff is proposed at the next session of parliament, the premier announced, the present revision merely being a temporary expedient to relieve unemployment.

WOMAN ARRESTED IN BUCKLEY MURDER CASE

DETROIT, Sept. 16—(AP)—Dorothy Duval, alleged "finger woman," in the assassination of Radio Announcer Jerry Buckley in the La Salle hotel July 23, was reported under arrest with her husband today.

The woman is said to have telephoned Buckley at midnight July 22, asking him to meet her in the lobby of the hotel where he was killed.

AMERICA'S CUP RACE PREVENTED BY FOG

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 16—(AP)—Befogged and almost becalmed, the America's cup armada rode at anchor in the harbor today instead of riding the waves out to sea.

The third race of the series in which the defender Enterprise twice so far has outsailed the challenger Shamrock V., was postponed until 10:20 a. m. (EST), tomorrow by the race committee of the New York Yacht club.

Two big steam yachts had already collided in trying to nose their way out through the murk. Hazards awaited any concerted attempt by the fleet to go out and conditions obviously were impossible for a satisfactory race.

The harbor, boats and race-course were blanketed for hours by a drenching fog that Britons compared to a "London particular", supposed to be the No. 1 brand of fog density. The vapor was so thick that it felt like rain.

TEXTILE WORKERS ARE CONSIDERING STRIKE

DANVILLE, Va., Sept. 16.—(AP) — Meetings of United Textile Workers members were held here this afternoon and tonight to begin consideration of a proposed strike in the Riverside and Dan River mills. It was said a vote on the proposal might require several days.

The union's recent convention in New York adopted a resolution authorizing "drastic action" in the impasse between the mill management and the workers.

The union here has some 4,000 members, about half of whom are unemployed as a result of personnel reductions recently made by the management.

ANOTHER MAN BOTHERING CONGRESSMAN DE PRIEST

CHICAGO, Sept. 16—(AP)—Inquiry into the alleged attempt to exort $10,000 from Oscar De Priest, Negro congressman, was renewed today with the arrest of a man seeking to enter the representative's office carrying a revolves and a pint of liquor. The man, giving the name of Leon Linder, was taken to the criminal court building for examination.

Three men were named in true bills voted by the county grand jury yesterday charged with trying to collect $10,000 from De Priest under threat of death.

TWO BUILDINGS IN SHARON STRUCK BY LIGHTNING

SHARON, Sept. 16.—(AP) — Lights were out, telephone connections were broken, scores of trees were blown down, and two buildings were struck by lightning here tonight, when this vicinity was visited by the worst wind and electrical storm in years.

It started at about 5:30 p. m., with a strong wind which uprooted many trees and tossed them across the highways. The severe electrical storm accompanied by a heavy rain, lasted for nearly five hours.

YE OLD COLONY INN, NEAR MERIDEN, RAIDED

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 16.—(AP)—Federal agents, headed by Algot W. Knutson, today raided Ye Old Colony Inn on the North Colony road near Meriden and arrested George Morgan, 28, alleged proprietor. Assorted liquors valued at $1,000 and several cases of Canadian ale were seized by the raiders.

UNITED STATES LEADS IN INT'AL BRIDGE CONTEST

LONDON, Sept. 16. — (AP) — The United States was 2,965 points up on the British team in the international bridge contest today when the players adjourned for dinner after 32 hands.

The American players had a lead of 905 points at the conclusion of yesterday's first day's play.

ROTARIANS HEAR TALK ABOUT ENGLISH CHICKENS

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Sept. 16.—Incidents of the world poultry congress held in London, England, last July were interestingly told by Professor William F. Kirkpatrick of Connecticut Agricultural college in a talk before the Willimantic Rotary club at the regular noon session today. Professor Kirkpatrick, who is head of the poultry department at the college, attended the congress as a delegate. He was introduced by Nelson A. Daniels, chairman of the program committee.

President Louis A. Kingsbury introduced as guests: Rotarians John F. Mansure of Philadelphia, Pa., E. L. Duff and Frank G. Aubrey of Norwich, William I. Allen, Jr., of White Plains, N. Y., and State's Attorney Howard C. Bradford of Putnam, Charles D. Folsom and L. A. Lubbock of New York city were guests of J. E. Sullivan. The visitors were led in song by Harry W. Standish, with Clifford Donnelly at the piano. An excellent chicken dinner was served by the hotel management. Announcement was made that the club assembly would meet at 8 o'clock Thursday evening at the office of Secretary Gerard E. Loiselle, when the program for the ensuing six months will be outlined.

An alleged kidnaper is awaiting identification at police headquarters, his arrest having been made this morning after an all-night search for a man answering his description. The police received a report from Henry Martin of 13 Temple street Monday evening that a man had just made two attempts to kidnap little girls. In the second attempt he grabbed a 12-year-old girl but released her when the child screamed. While Martin reported the matter to the police, a group of men chased the kidnaper, but he made his escape.

Miss Beatrice Bill, younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur I. Bill of 183 Prospect street, and William Levering Cressman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson C. Cressman of Norristown, Pa., will be married at the Little Church Around the Corner in New York Saturday, Sept. 27, at 6 p. m. A private reception and dinner will follow at the Roosevelt hotel, with only immediate families and their friends in attendance.

Miss Bill attended the grammar schools in this city, then going to Bradford academy and Miss Baird's school for two years. She took a course in domestic science at Teachers' college, Columbia university, and for the past two years has been following out her educational lines in New York.

Mr. Cressman attended William Penn Charter school at Germantown, going from there to Cornell, where he graduated in 1927, having taken a course in civil engineering. He is now connected with the American Rolling Mills Co., at their New York office, in the steel department. They will reside in a newly completed apartment at 333 East 53rd street, New York city.

A fifth anniversary celebration when the mortgage will be burned as a feature, is being planned by the North Windham fire department. The final note of indebtedness was paid a short time ago, mainly from the proceeds of the recent community auction held for that purpose. The department was organized in August, 1925, and has since expended over $5,000 for building the firehouse, purchasing furnishings and a motor chemical truck, the money being raised through various public events, all staged in North Windham. Fire Chief Wilbur G. Stevens is expected to name a celebration committee at the next meeting.

Cases of local interest on the criminal docket of the Windham county superior court which will open at Putnam next Tuesday morning with Judge Newell S. Jennings of Bristol on the bench are: Harry Davis, alias Harry Dalwin, fraudulent issuance of check and embezzlement by agent; Arthur L. Balcom, embezzlement by agent; Thomas J. Borelli, violation of liquor law; Solomon Shorr, theft from person; Clarence A. DANIELSON

YOUTHFUL BANDITS HAD BEEN LIVING IN DANIELSON

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Sept. 16.—Telephone wires buzzed today and teletypes chattered out to police stations the tale of how two young men who have been living about Danielson the past two weeks held up a counterman at a lunch cart in Court square in Woonsocket this morning, forcing him at the point of a gun to leave the cart and enter a nearby shed, into which they locked him, and then returned to the cart and cleaned the cash register of $40.

Today the story of the stickup, which occurred about 1:25 this morning, had been broadcast to police all over southern New England and into New York state. The hunted men are Thomas Mulligan, who has been staying at the Attawaugan hotel here the past two weeks, and Charles Bachman, Jr., alias Charles Flynn, whose father is a resident of Baltimore, and who has been living with one Charles Reel at an old farmhouse in the Allen Hill section of Brooklyn. Both Bachman and Mulligan have criminal records. The pair recently was released from the Hartford county jail, where they served long terms for theft. Both have police records in Rhode Island, and Bachman an additional score of crimes in Maryland.

Reel innocently became involved in the police investigation of this morning's crime, when he was picked up by Woonsocket police as a suspicious person. He was questioned in Woonsocket, and later turned over to Lieut Ross V. Urquhart of the Danielson barracks for further grilling. After the local quiz he was released from custody, the officers apparently being satisfied that he had no knowledge whatsoever of the intentions of Mulligan and Bachman, who stole Reel's car as one incident of the operations of the night.

Last night Bachman and Mulligan jointly induced Reel to take his automobile and drive them over to Woonsocket, where a car, with a Maryland registration they had been driving became involved in an accident near Woonsocket a few nights ago and was taken to a garage there for repairs. They represented that the repairs had been completed, and that they wanted to get it and drive it back here.

Reel agreed to drive them over and did. Arriving in Woonsocket, he got out of the car to get some cigarettes, and either Mulligan or Bachman told him they would drive his machine to the garage where their machine was and he was to wait for them. Within five to ten minutes after they left Reel the hold-up took place, the hold-up men forcing William LeClair, the lunch cart counterman, to submit under threat of being shot.

Reel waited about an hour for the return of Mulligan and Bachman, who did not appear, and meanwhile an officer took Reel into custody, to explain why he was loitering about. He told his story, which was not fully convincing to the Woonsocket police, but today accepted as in accordance with the facts. Reel's car, which Bachman and Mulligan made their getaway in, is a Nash touring car, registered Conn. 48,028. It developed through police inquiry today that the Maryland registered car that Mulligan and Bachman had been using was taken out of that state on a conditional bill of sale by Bachman, contrary to law.

When Reel left here with Mulligan and Bachman they took along two young waitresses that have been employed in the Attawaugan hotel and who left their work there yesterday. Reel told of this. There was at first an inclination to somehow connect the girls with the Woonsocket happening. However, it was found that they left the Reel car in Providence, and were found asleep in a hotel room this morning, and knew nothing whatever of the happenings involving Bachman and Mulligan after they got out.

In view of the hold-up at Woonsocket, police there were inclined today to feel that Bachman and Mulligan may be the persons responsible for a series of crimes committed in and near that city during the past two weeks. As to age, Bachman and Mulligan are, in each case, about 23 years old.

Bodies of Auto Victims Brought Here

This afternoon the bodies of Lucien E. Comtois and Leo Comtois, Danielson youths who lost their lives as a result of an automobile accident near Occum yesterday afternoon, were brought here by Undertaker L. E. Kennedy.

Late this afternoon the body of Lucien was taken to Hartford by Undertaker Kennedy, to be forwarded on a night train to St. Felix de Valois, P. Q., for burial. The young man, 21 years of age, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Alex Comtois and he had been employed as a night weaver in the Main street plant of Powdrell & Alexander.

Leo Comtois, a cousin of Lucien's and son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Comtois of Morin avenue, was also a night weaver at the Main street plant of Powdrell & Alexander. The body is now at the home of his parents. His funeral is to be held in Danielson.

The numbers of friends of the dead youths in this town were much shocked today over their sudden deaths.

The accident involving a heavy truck on Main at Winter streets just before midnight last night, as told in this morning's Bulletin, brought a prompt revival today of the agitation for an urgently needed and adequate installation of traffic control lights. Such a light at the junction of Westcott road and Main street last night in all probability would have averted the accident, the like of which or the near approach to which is imminent about every hour of every day at this dangerous point. Two heavily traveled trunk lines meet there, a none-too-easy curve and poor lighting makes the place an especially dangerous one, especially to strange drivers.

The proposal heard today was for the installation of a series of control lights, the kind showing red, yellow and green lights. It is agreed by many that there should be such a light at Westcott road and Main, another at Main and Reynolds, another at Main and Academy, one more at Water and South Main and one at Water and Franklin, near St James' parish rectory. Every one of these points is a dangerous one. Every day there are near escapes from accidents, and also traffic delays.

Numbers of officials and business men agreed today that installation of the lights borders upon an urgent necessity if serious accidents certain to come are to be avoided. Permission first must be obtained, however, from the state highway commissioner. In view of the fact that similar privileges have been granted to many communities of the state, it is not unreasonable to hope that the same will be accorded to Danielson.

The prospects are for one of the largest meetings of Sarah Williams Danielson chapter, D. A. R., this fall, Thursday afternoon at the Parish house of the Westfield Congregational church, when Charles B. Hosmer of Washington, D. C., is to be the speaker, and members of Elizabeth Porter Putnam chapter of Putnam guests. There has been much confusion in the published dates for this meeting, but it is definitely on Thursday afternoon.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Sarah A. Farrell

Mrs. Sarah A. Farrell, 54, wife of Edward J. Farrell, wife of the overseer of the spinning department of the Wauregan Co mills, died this morning at their home in Wauregan. Mrs. Farrell had been in failing health for several years, and in critical condition for several months past. She had been a resident of Wauregan since her marriage to Mr. Farrell, 27 years ago, and the many friends she made there deeply regret her death. Mrs. Farrell was a woman of most gracious personality, kindly, considerate and of sunny disposition. Prior to coming to Wauregan to make her home, Mrs. Farrell was a resident of Jewett City.

She was born in New York state, a daughter of Dennis and Elizabeth Connor Murray. Her near surviving relatives in addition to her husband, who has the sympathy of all their friends, are two brothers, Ernest Murray of Providence, R. I., and Matthew Murray, a resident of Ohio.

The report of Miss Miriam Boomhower, as visiting nurse of the Civic federation, covering the month of August, shows that 16 cases were carried over from the preceding month, and that 20 new cases came under the nurse's care. During August, 21 patients were discharged. There were no deaths of patients being attended during the period. At the end of August 15 patients remained under care. The number of paying patients during August was 7, the number of free patients 29. Money received from patients totaled $21.45.

Though Miss Boomhower was away six days during the month, she made 98 nursing visits and 25 advisory visits. The medical patients numbered 13, the surgical patients 20. There also was one obstetrical patient and two tuberculosis patients. Twenty-three social service visits were included in Miss Boomhower's activities for the month.

Relief given included 72 garments, 11 pairs of shoes, two hats, vegetables and apples. Contributions of apples were received from Levi Aldrich and Alex Booher Clothing came in from one unknown contributor. Listed among the contributors for the month is Miss Susan Young.

During August Miss Boomhower took 13 children to the Day Kimball hospital for tonsilectomy. Cards were sent to inmates of the town farm because of the absence of the nurse.

Misses Elizabeth Dunn and Blanche Gauthier are at the Gauthier cottage at Groton Long Point to remain for a week.

Henry D. Crosby, who has been at his cottage at Oakland Beach throughout the summer season and will remain there for some time before returning to his home here, was a visitor in Danielson today.

Thomas Jessup of New York, for years resident here as an executive of the Connecticut Mills Co., is visiting in Danielson for a few days.

Announcement was made today of the marriage at Goodyear in the Congregational parsonage on Sunday by Rev. Charles A. Downs of Miss Ethel B. Mason and Kenneth I. Preston, both of this town.

Registering another hot weather stunt within the official limits of the summer season, the mercury ran up to 89 degrees in Danielson this afternoon.

It was announced today by Promoter Frank Barber that another fistic star will make his appearance here at the big benefit boxing bout in the interest of the Nurses' Home fund. He is Kid Kaplan, who will act as second for one of the boxers.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Cudworth, residents here for several years until the beginning of this year, will start out on Wednesday to motor back to their present home in North Carolina. They have been visiting with relatives and friends.

At a meeting of Norfolk Pomona grange next Saturday evening, at Wrentham, Mass., Rev. Charles A. Downs, Goodyear, chaplain of the Connecticut State grange, is to deliver an address on Grange week.

State Officer H. Theodore Strand has returned here after his annual vacation, during which he motored as far south as Norfolk, Va.

Lucien Comtois and Leo Comtois, local youths who so unfortunately lost their lives as the result of an automobile accident near Occum yesterday afternoon, were the first to die of the many hundreds of employes of Powdrell & Alexander, who are covered by the blanket insurance arranged for by the company a comparatively short time ago. The death claims, $1,000 in each instance, were filed by the company today.

WATER PURIFIED BETTER BY PEPPED-UP CHARCOAL

NEW YORK (AP)— The old practice of filtering water through charcoal has been brought up to date by a method of making the essence of the charcoal rush about in the water.

This in effect is what the research department of the Hackensack Water company has done by developing an activated carbon which they call activated char. It is pulverized substance, and 10 pounds of it spreads its effects through 1,000,000 gallons of water.

G. R. Spalding, sanitary engineer of the company, says that the new char absorbs bad odors and tastes.

Drought Robs Fish of Oxygen.

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Drought is bad even for fish, says Wandell Krull, specialist in diseases of fish at the University of Michigan. It robs the fish of some of their oxygen and breeds the bacteria which give them diseases.

Less happiness results from acquiring a thing than from the pursuit thereof.

21 NEW CASES LISTED ON SUPERIOR COURT CALENDAR

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Sept. 16.—The criminal list of cases scheduled for trial at the September term of superior court, which opens on next Tuesday morning with Judge Newell Jennings of Bristol, presiding, has been published by local court officials and circulated among members of the bar. Two continued cases and 21 new cases in addition to 13 probation cases comprise the list.

Important locally, among the cases which will come to trial, are those of Pedro DeClarke of this city, who will be arraigned on a charge of incest and abuse of a minor female child; Mary Ziemba, of Putnam, charged with assault with intent to kill, Ira Raynsford and Viola Hubbard, both of Danielson, jointly charged with adultery and Oliver Gobin of North Grosvenordale, who recently appealed a justice court's small fine, when found guilty of a charge of assault.

The complete list of cases is as follows:

Continued cases—State vs. Walter Murphy, violation of liquor law; State vs. Earle H. Rogers, forgery.

New cases—State vs. Arthur L. Balcom, embezzlement by agent; State vs. Frank Hanner, fraudulent issuance of checks; State vs. Harry Davis, alias Harry Dalwin, fraudulent issuance of checks and embezzlement by agent; State vs. William Hallion, theft of motor vehicle; State vs. Roger Durand, violation of liquor law; State vs. Thomas J. Borelli, violation of liquor law; State vs. Solomon Shore, theft from the person; State vs. Clarence A. Wilson, theft; State vs. Eddy John, assault with dangerous weapon; State vs. Leon Russell, seduction and harboring minor female for immoral purposes; State vs. Antonio Peno, burglary and assault with intent to rape; State vs. Mary Ziemba, assault with intent to kill; State vs. Pedro DeClarke, incest and abuse of female child; State vs. Frank Leone, seduction and fornication; State vs. Mitchell Piette and Adelle Piette, consenting to prostitution of minor daughter; State vs. Ira Raynsford and Viola Hubbard, adultery; State vs. Frederick Credit, assault, breach of the peace and intoxication; State vs. Oliver Gobin, assault; State vs. Philip Laporte, violation of motor vehicle law; State vs. Charles O. Fitts, sodomy; State vs. Nettie C. Porter, failure to grant right of way.

Probation cases: State vs. David Caya, violation of liquor law; State vs. Myron Pratt, non-support; State vs. Lionel Durocher and Normand Favreault, breaking and entering, and theft; State vs. Howard Conrad, violation of game laws; State vs. Charles Insalaco, adultery; State vs. Jonn Lemieux, abuse of female child; State vs. Alphege Potvin and Eugene Deluce, statutory burglary; State vs. Gilbert Bateman, abuse of female child; State vs. Joseph Flagg and Florina Borden, adultery; State vs. Ora L. Smart, rape; State vs. William Culley, statutory burglary; State vs. Phillippe Gaudreault, abuse of female child, State vs. Elmer Burdick, statutory burglary and theft.

LARGE ATTENDANCE AT FUNERAL OF DR. LAMARCHE

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Sept. 16.—A large number of relatives and friends, among whom he labored for so many years, and members of the Windham County Medical society, the Connecticut State Medical society and the American Medical association, with whom he was associated, gathered at St. Mary's church this morning for the funeral of Dr. George T. Lamarche, prominent Putnam physician who died Sunday at his home on Sabin street, which was held at 9 o'clock. Rev. U. O. Bellerose, pastor of the church was celebrant at the solemn high mass of requiem. He was assisted by Rev. Joseph D. Casey as deacon and by Rev. Leon Jegou, chaplain at the mother house on Church street, who served as subdeacon. A special programme of music was rendered during the mass by members of the 9:15 o'clock choir. The bearers were Dr. A. E. Parent, Henry N. Benoit, Joseph Rivard, Peter Bonin, Willis Carroll and Pierre Lacoux, all of this city. The body was taken to Springfield, Mass., for burial in St. Michael's cemetery there.

A small but stubborn blaze broke out in the attic of a two-family house at 39 May street early this afternoon. The dwelling is owned by the Davis estate and part of the house was occupied by Marcel Kennette and family. The upper portions of the house were used by Joseph Semaraska of Walnut street, as a storage place for a number of articles of clothing. Investigating after the fire had been extinguished, Deputy Chief Alphonse Dumas stated that the only cause for the blaze in his estimation was spontaneous combustion.

A passer-by, discovering the dense smoke rolling from the attic windows, telephoned to the fire headquarters in Union square and apparatus from this station responded. Water from the booster tank of the pumper was exhausted within a few minutes, the supply having little or no affect in checking the progress of the flames. A stream was trained on the roof and the fire was immediately brought under control and extinguished a few minutes later. The fire loss was slight, but the property and especially the personal effects of the Kennette family were heavily damaged by the gallons of water which were poured into the attic of the house.

The elite of railroad transportion, namely The Yankee Clipper, pride of the New Haven road; The Senator and the Knickerbocker, three of the fastest express trains operated by the New Haven railroad, speeded through this city yesterday, while wrecking crews were working to clear the Shore line, which was blocked by a wreck at Slocum. The Yankee Clipper, queen of the rails between Boston and New York, made its initial run over the Midland division yesterday and with clear signals awaiting as it entered the block in Putnam, the train thundered through the local yards hurling up a cloud of dust. One little boy standing on the platform at the depot as the flyer roared by, uttered the interesting and amusing juvenile remark to a locomotive engineer who was likewise thrilled at the sight: "Gee mister, don't you wish you could ride in the cab of that engine?" The railroad man smiled and turning to the lad of tender years, said: "I sure do, sonny."

Miss Harriet White, R. N., of Hartford, a member of the nursing staff of the Hartford hospital, is visiting with friends in this city.

Mayor Charles A. Richard left for Boston today where he will attend the New England reception in honor of the mayor of Boston, England, who arrived Monday in Boston to participate in the tercentenary exercises now being held in that city.

Curtis Dean, clerk of courts of the county has issued a notice to the bar to the effect that a short calendar session and a session for the assignment of cases for trial will be held in superior court in this city on Friday, Sept. 26, at 9 a. m. The session is ordered by Judge Newell Jennings, who will preside over the September terms of criminal and civil court.

Superintendent of Schools Leon M. Farrin has announced that evening school classes in typewriting, business practice and stenography will commence on Monday evening, September 29, at Putnam high school. The facilities of the high school business department will serve as the class rooms for the evening students. In past years the enrollment at evening school has been large and it is expected that there will be a large number of students who will apply to enrollment when the school opens. Supt. Farrin said today that the night school faculty will be announced at a later date.

Charles Von Brunt Cushman, millionaire Pomfret sportsman, is slated to appear this (Wednesday) morning in city court to answer to a charge of operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of liquor. Mr. Cushman was arrested Sunday evening by Supernumerary Officer Ernest L. Chandler, after he had backed his automobile into a hydrant on Providence street.

Miss Ruth Perry, who has been spending the past week with her mother, Mrs. Edith Perry, of Grove street, left yesterday for Boston where she will spend the winter months.

Arthur Kaminsky, of Fremont street, a graduate of Putnam high school in June, was in Providence yesterday where he took entrance examinations at Brown university.

FIRST TRACE OF ANIMALS 300,000,000 YEARS AGO

WASHINGTON (AP)—The earliest record of animal life upon earth goes back more than 300 million years, a short time compared with the 2,000 million years that astronomers estimate the earth has existed.

These earliest animal records come from the Cambrian rocks. Older rocks are known to geologists, and in the other rocks are abundant evidence of aquatic plant life.

"But," says Dr. C. E. Resser of the United States National Museum, "thus-far no undoubted animal fossils have been discovered in pre-Cambrian rocks anywhere in the world and geologists are speculating as to the meaning of this."

Dr. Resser is quoted in a Carnegie Institution report dealing with the grand canyon of the Colorado, where ancient rocks are exposed down into the Algonkian period which preceded the Cambrian.

BULLOCK CART GIVES WAY TO MOTOR CAR IN CEYLON

COLOMBO, Ceylon (AP)—The picturesque bullock cart is fast being superseded by the automobile lorry and the motor van, says the registrar of motor cars in his latest report.

The report points out that the increase in the number of cars imported during 1929, despite the trade depression, shows that an automobile is more and more becoming a necessity among natives as well as Europeans.

There are about 24,000 automobiles in the island.

A Statement by the Cadillac Motor Car Company Concerning the Cadillac and La Salle Program

THE bringing out of the Cadillac V-16 a few months ago and now the new Cadillac and La Salle V-Eights, and early in October the new Cadillac V-12, may give rise to some question as to our manufacturing program.

It is our desire that Cadillac and La Salle owners and the motoring public be apprised of the facts.

The La Salle will remain companion car to Cadillac. It was so introduced, as such it has greatly succeeded and as such it will continue.

• • • •

Obviously the number of motor cars which any manufacturer may sell in a given price field is finally governed by the ability of the public to buy them.

Cadillac cars having gained almost universal acceptance in the finest car field, any considerable expansion must be through cultivation of a broader market in lower price ranges.

• • • •

Our experience has been in building fine cars. The Cadillac organization could not adhere to its fine car ideals and successfully produce a low priced car, but through a more complete coverage of the fine car field it was apparent that we could give greater value and appreciably lower prices.

For the broader market, therefore, we created the La Salle out of our Cadillac experience and developed it as a quality car.

• • • •

For the highest priced fields we have produced the sixteen-cylinder Cadillac and the twelve-cylinder Cadillac.

And between the very broad market for the La Salle and the relatively narrow market for twelve and sixteen cylinder cars, there is a large market for Cadillac V-8's.

These lines of cars contribute to one another a tremendous influence in sales, a marked advance in values and make possible the low prices at which Cadillac and La Salle cars are sold.

• • • •

And this, briefly, is the reasoning in Cadillac's program.

Were it not for La Salle, all Cadillacs would be higher in price; and were it not for the Cadillacs, La Salle prices would necessarily be so high as to defeat the purpose for which the La Salle was designed.

Each of these lines is dependent one upon the other—the Cadillac V-16, the Cadillac V-12, the Cadillac V-8, and their companion car, the La Salle.

UNITED WORKERS APPEAL

In the annual appeal which is being made by the United Workers, Norwich's charitable organization which was incorporated in 1875, the people of this city are reminded of the invaluable service that is being rendered by the various branches of this organization. From the time that it was established it has been engaged in meeting, within its limits, those unfortunate conditions which call for a helping hand. Through its various branches it serves those in trouble, those in need, those who are sick, those who are aged, those whose circumstances have left them handicapped, those who have mental and behavior problems, while it wields a most important influence through the classes which it conducts.

It is the object of this organization to serve the needy of Norwich. This work is being ably and commendably done. It is service which not only means a vast amount to the community, but shoulders what would otherwise be thrown upon the town in most instances. Years of work have produced an organization that is in close touch with conditions, which is alert to the requirements and which is not only meeting the situation with gratifying results but is anxious to expand its efforts as rapidly as financial conditions will permit.

It is in connection with the maintenance and furtherance of the work of the United Workers that the appeal is annually made to the people of Norwich. Although it is an endowed organization, restrictions prevail in many instances, and there are always demands far in excess of what can be done. Thus the manner in which the people of Norwich give their support from year to year to the United Workers fixes, to a great extent, the activities in which it can engage.

There isn't any better way of giving endorsement to the gratifying work that is being done by this organization than by responding as generously as possible to the annual appeal. It is work for the community's good, work in which each and every one should be interested and work that can be most effectively done by such an organization. The greater the contributions, the greater the accomplishments. Its record calls for the heartiest endorsement.

RESULT IN GERMANY

Although it may have been anticipated that there would be an upset in the German election, the result in all probability far exceeded the most confident belief that a change was needed.

Germany, like other countries, has had its economic situation. It has had its unemployment. It has had financial troubles, and it has those who have persistently done their best to discard the Young plan. The vote on Sunday can be considered the outcome of this combination and the accompanying discontent. It likewise gives Germany something to think over seriously. It was known that the fascists were losing no opportunities to spread their doctrine and that Adolf Hitler was active in their leadership, but there was no thought that they would poll such a heavy vote and elect the second largest number of members in the legislature. Along with their gain there was also a considerable one for the communists. Each of these parties is favorable to a dictatorship, but on different lines, and the prospects of their getting together seems doubtful.

In the reorganization of the German government much depends upon the success that will result from the attempts of the social democrats to complete a coalition. There is no majority party control, so it rests for the party with the largest representation to reach such terms with others which are needed to provide a working majority. The change in party membership makes this sufficiently difficult, but it cannot fail to impress upon those who are commonly opposed to the upsetting of the government that their obligation to prevent any such development has been increased. It furnishes one of the strongest reasons for getting together.

The election gives Germany much to think about. It likewise affords a most interesting situation for the rest of the world to watch. The fact that it resulted in such a surprise emphasizes the need of dealing effectively with the present situation.

AIDING THE ISLANDERS

From the report of Governor General Roosevelt of Porto Rico, it is possible to gain an insight into the conditions which prevail in that island, the need for improvement, and the accomplishments of recent months.

Governor Roosevelt has made several pleas in behalf of the island and its residents. He has made a study of the conditions which exist there and set them forth in a manner which leaves no doubt as to the justice of the pleas. Further than that, he has been backed up by the surveys which have been made by one or more organizations.

In the report there are set forth the problems that confront the government, the manner in which it is trying to meet them, the progress that has been made, the contributions which have been sent by interested humanitarians and the things that still need to be done. It leaves no doubt as to the whole-hearted manner in which the governor has undertaken his work. It makes a good impression from the manner in which the situation has been handled and it cannot fail to convince that, regardless of what has been done for Porto Rico and what it is doing for itself, there exists in the island an opportunity for much more work along the same line.

Health conditions in the island are not what they should be. They are getting attention as thoroughly as possible, considering the means at hand, and an equally determined fight is being made against infectious diseases. Bettering the health conditions where neglect has prevailed for a long time is not an easy task and not one that can be quickly finished. Wise medical advice is being used as the guide and how thoroughly the job is being done is indicated by the efforts that are being devoted to correct the malnutrition that prevails among the children.

Porto Rico had plenty of trouble before the hurricane raised havoc there. It has not been able to meet its obligations without assistance, but the report shows not only that good use is being made of such means as the island commands and those advanced to assist it but that it is deserving and worthy of further aid.

CONNECTICUT REPUBLICANS

At their state convention the republicans made nominations for state office in accord with expectations. The state ticket means that the present lieutenant governor and treasurer have been made respectively candidates for governor and lieutenant, that Secretary Higgins and Comptroller Salmon have been renominated and that State Senator Wilcox is named for the state treasurership and Judge Warren B. Burrows has been selected for the position of attorney general.

All of the nominees are men well known about the state through their service to Connecticut. Their selection in most instances followed in the natural course of events. It has been customary to reward faithful servants by reelections or by advancement, and that policy has been followed at the Hartford convention.

Special interest has been displayed in the various provisions of the platform, not the least of which has been that concerning prohibition. It is significant that the platform holds the 18th amendment and the Volstead act to be "unsound and unsatisfactory and disappointing," and that our representatives in the national congress are urged to secure prompt, remedial action and that they assist in taking those steps which shall as early as possible restore to the states of the Union the right to regulate their own affairs in regard to such matters. This unquestionably represents a strong sentiment in the state, a sentiment in many instances which might have been more outspoken, but it is evident that there is a demand for the control of the liquor business by the state, a position which Connecticut has persistently held in state and national legislature.

As for rural roads, the platform explicitly states that "the time has now come when the state is in a position to give serious consideration to the problem of making the rural roads passable to the main arteries of traffic throughout the year." This is no more recognition than the rural roads have long since required and the pledging of support to more substantial appropriations for that purpose is in keeping with the needs.

For the first time in years the republicans have a gubernatorial candidate from this part of Connecticut. He is well known, with a good record in state office, a thorough-going republican whose loyalty and ability are unquestioned, and under his guidance Connecticut would be assured of the continuance of the present good government.

CHANGE FOR THE BETTER

From South America come indications of a more favorable sentiment toward the United States by those directing the provisional government in Argentina. This is an attitude which indicates an appreciation of the shortcomings of the Irigoyen government. It is an expression which is intended to overcome certain of the uncertainties that were created by the former president.

The new government in Argentina is desirous of recognition by the United States. While we have taken a stand against governments which are set up by revolutionary tactics in Central America, we have not applied the same ruling to South American republics. It is certain that full consideration will be given to the circumstances prompting the change and the declared intention of the provisional head of the government to retire as soon as a permanent government can be established. The change in attitude by Argentina must be interpreted as encouraging, and it will by no means operate to the disadvantage of that country.

AN AERIAL ST. VALENTINE

During the summer months it always happened that while Sally Earl was busy in the garden a mail plane would pass overhead. She fell into the habit of stopping work to gaze at this marvel of modern science and would remain watching the plane until it disappeared. There was something in the way it sailed gracefully along that reminded her of a huge silver gull she had once seen flying above the lake.

Then one morning the pilot, leaning over the side, waved, and Sally waved back; thereafter they always exchanged greetings. Even when cold weather came on she would hurry from the house at the first faint hum of the motor to assure her unknown friend she had not forgotten him.

It was during February that a white object fluttered from his hand and floated slowly down to the ground. It was a clever little sketch representing a diminutive plane, and Cupid, who was occupying the cockpit, was taking aim with a heart-tipped arrow at a young woman on the earth beneath. In a corner of the sketch were the initials "F. B."

"Why, it's Valentine's day!" cried Sally, "I had forgotten all about it!"

That spring Sally went east to visit a schoolmate and did not return for several weeks. The morning following her arrival home, while giving the family a detailed account of every person she had met and all the social affairs she had attended, the mail plane was heard approaching. Jumping up, Sally rushed out of doors. Alas! A stranger was acting pilot, the plane roared indifferently onward, and Sally, quite disconcerted to realize that her romance was ended, returned to the house.

"He's gone! she announced.

Being of a somewhat imaginative nature, Sally was wont thenceforth to lament the passing of this little affair. She kept the valentine on her dressing table and in endeavoring to fit names to the "F. B." finally decided on "Francis Bartlett"; and thus it was she spoke of her aerial acquaintance.

Once when reading in the newspaper of a wrecked plane, she exclaimed anxiously, "I hope Francis didn't meet with an accident."

"Francis?" queried her brother.

"Yes, my friend the mail pilot."

"When did you learn his name."

"Of course, I'm not positive that it is his name," Sally was obliged to confess, "but the initials on the valentine he dropped down to me are "F. B." so I concluded it must be Francis Bartlett."

"Your reasoning is truly feminine," laughed her brother.

"What a prosaic world this is," mused Sally; indulge in the least fancy and everybody considers you queer!"

It was a year later on the fourteenth of February that Sally attended a students exhibit at the Art institute. Wandering from room to room, pausing long before paintings and sketches that she liked Sally came to a large water color that caused her to utter an exclamation of astonishment. That the picture was a prize winner was announced by the blue ribbon rosette decorating a corner of the frame; that it was likewise a favorite was manifest by the crowd gathered around it. The subject, however, was what attracted and held her attention.

In the center of a garden of brilliant bloom stood a young woman shading her eyes with her hand in order to watch an airplane that was about to disappear into a distant bank of clouds!

Hastily consulting the catalogue she found that the picture was entitled, "The Goddess of the Garden," and the artist's name was Frederick Brown. F. B. That Frederick Brown and Francis Bartlett were one and the same she hadn't a doubt.

Turning to a woman at her side, she asked: "Do you know if the artist who painted that picture was ever a mail-plane pilot?"

"I believe that he was" the woman replied, "his name is—"

"St. Valentine of the Clouds!" Sally cried impulsively.

At this a young man near by, who had overhead the question and had been watching her narrowly, made an odd motion as if waving greetings to some one, and Sally—well, Sally understood.—Chicago News.

YOUR HEALTH

Aching Feet

By John William Shuman, M. D., Los Angeles.

(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

As a toe is bent, so will it grow, under or over itself or the next toe to it. The most prominent joint of such a toe and of its fellow gets friction, with the result of a painful callous, which is a corn. In trying to protect and spare this painful corn, the owner limps, shifts the body weight from the painful side, and causes a tipped pelvis, a crooked spine, and other ills due to improper balance of the body.

"Big aches from little corns do grow." The habit of foot covering is one that sticks until the grave, so let us pay some attention to it. Unfortunately fashion dictates that bare fee are taboo. We were born with bare feet—but there the story ends. Foot covering, then, is our present concern. Stockings and shoes that are too tight produce corns, hammertoes, bunions, ingrowing toe nails, fallen arches and many other painful conditions. Aching knees, hips, and back are a few of the most important as well as the most painful of these. Try laughing when you have a burning corn. There isn't any question but that aching feet cause a disturbed mental state.

But try to change this semi-Chinese custom of binding feet and see how unpopular you become. Our race admires its feet only when they are encased in natty looking and often tight-fitting shoes. Fortunately, the latter soon show signs of stretching to accommodate the contents.

Women no longer wear constricting clothing of chest and abdomen. The result is a great improvement in the health of womankind because their lungs, intestinal tract, and accessory organs are given better chances to function. Allah hasten the day when freedom of the feet will be the style. The human race will be better off mentally and physically.

When your feet trouble you, consult your family doctor. He will find the cause of the trouble and remove it, not matter whether it be a fungus infection, such as ringworm between the toes, or a dropping of one of the arches of the feet. When he advises that you buy a size larger shoe do no' look shocked. This is probably the cause of the whole trouble. The shoe salesman knows your correct size and desires to fit you properly but what can he do if you insist on being fitted simply on the basis of looks and style?

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16—The last time reapportionment of house membership was up for committee discussion by the house committee on census—and that was two years ago—"Twin Brother" Joe Crail of Los Angeles was the only house member not on the committee volunteering observations.

No wonder. He has upward of 1,300,000 in his district. Imagine a house member having to do constituents' chores for a lot of folks like that; or a congressman who reckons his plurality at above 281,000.

That margin of victory alone is much greater than the entire population of most congressional districts.

"Twelfth Congressman"

Crail has a close competitor for big district honors in Bob Clancy of Detroit, ex-democrat and present (post 1924) republican.

In fact, Clancy's was the biggest district in 1924 at around 460,000 while Crail's then showed about 416,000. But Clancy is a member of the census committee.

Crail now has 445,000 registered voters to consider when he goes campaigning.

Lots of home folks from Iowa, his native state, reside now in Southern California, more than 400,000 of them, he figures. He says his Iowa colleagues sometimes call him "the twelfth congressman from Iowa" on that account.

But Crail is among those house members who have noted that it is the old timers of the house, the veterans of long service, who get most of the limelight and the good committee jobs.

So while he urgently favored early reapportionment so that California could get the political benefit of her present population, he was against any enlargement of the size of the house.

He favored, in fact, reducing it from 435 members to 300, but his proposal involved the unique suggestion that the cut in size be projected 12 years ahead "where it would not affect the districts of present members of congress."

"Too Many Of Us"

It had been his observation as a "new member," Crail once said, that the trouble with house efficiency was "there are too many of us." He was asked if he believed the smaller senate functioned better than the house.

"I think every senator knows more of what is going on than members of the house. Only the old members have any real say in legislation in the house. Certainly new members do not have any say, and under the present size of the house that is the only way it could be. If we had a small house every member would know what was going on."

Crail expects his district to be cut up into three or four eventually. He does not expect that to affect him much politically.

Concise Autumn Bird Guide In This Section

PART ONE

The following guide to the autumn birds of this section is arranged from Ralph Hoffman's "Guide to the Birds of New England and Eastern New York," edition of 1923, published by Houghton Mifflin company, Boston and New York. The figures at the left indicate the length of each bird in inches. A robin is 10.00 inches long; an English sparrow is 6.33 inches.

Black.

12-13.50. In flocks; tail long.—Crow Blackbird.

9.55. In flocks near water.—Rusty Blackbird.

9.51. In flocks, with red or white at the bend of the wing.—Red-winged Blackbird.

8.50. (Only near New York city or Long Island Sound.) Walks on ground; purplish or greenish at close range; feathers of upper part tipped with buff.—Starling.

7.92. In flocks; head brown; body black.—Cowbird.

Blue.

13.02. Flying over water, or perched near it; bill long and pointed; much white showing, but no black; head crested.—Kingfisher.

11.74. In trees; bill not long; much white and some black about the head and breast; head crested.—Blue Jay.

7.01. In open country; upper parts blue, breast reddish.—Male Bluebird.

7.01. Upper parts grayish; breast reddish; wing and tail bluish.—Female Bluebird.

6.07. On trunks or large limbs of trees; top of head black; back bluish-gray.—White-bellied Nuthatch.

5.90. Near water, especially near the sea; flying about or perched often in great flocks; upper parts greenish-blue; under parts white.—White-bellied Swallow.

5.28. In trees; head and throat black; back and wings grayish-blue; spot on wing white.—Black-throated Blue Warbler.

4.73. In trees; upper parts grayish-blue; throat and breast yellow; wing-bars white.—Parula Warbler.

4.62. On trunks or large limbs; back bluish; top of head and line through eye black; under parts reddish—brown or buffy.—Red-bellied Nuthatch.

Black and White.

10.32. (Only after Oct. 25.) On trees; upper parts gray; wings and tail black.—Northern Shrike.

9.40. On trunks or large limbs; stripe down middle of back white; wings and tail barred with black and white.—Hairy Woodpecker.

8.56. On trunks or large limbs; back speckled with white; white stripe along edge of wings.—Sapsucker.

8.35. Scratching on the ground under bushes; head black; tail black, outer feathers tipped with large white spots.—Towhee.

6.88. In flocks, generally near the sea; wings and tail black and white; body chiefly white.—Snow Bunting.

6.83. On trunks or large limbs; stripe down middle of back white; wings and tail barred with black and white.—Downy Woodpecker.

6.07. Climbing about on the large limbs or trunks of trees; top of head black; back bluish-gray. —White-bellied Nuthatch.

5.30. (Rare after Oct. 1.) Climbing about the trunks or large limbs of trees; streaked black and white.—Black and White Warbler.

5.28. (Rare after Oct. 10.) In trees; head and throat black; under parts white; white spot on wing.—Black-throated Blue Warbler.

5.27. In small flocks in trees; cap and throat black; cheeks and breast white.—Chickadee.

Brown or Brownish.

11.83 to 12.20. In trees; very slender; tail long; under parts white.—Yellow-billed or Black-billed Cuckoo.

12.00. Flies from or to trees; rump white.—Flicker.

11.42. Reddish—brown, flies into bushes when disturbed; tail long.—Brown Thrasher.

10.75. Flies up from the grass; outer tail-feathers white.—Meadowlark.

9.56. In flocks; upper parts rusty-brown.—Rusty Blackbird.

8.35. Scratches under bushes; outer tail-feathers deeply tipped with white. Female Towhee.

8.12. In trees; line over eye and bar on wing white. Female Rose-breasted Grosbeak.

7.75. On or near the beach; throat yellow. Shore Lark.

7.26. (After Oct. 15). Fox color; scratches on ground; breast spotted. Fox sparrow.

7.19. In flocks in trees; plump, sleek; eats fruit. Cedar-bird.

7.17. On ground, or low limbs; tail reddish-brown. Hermit Thrush.

7.17. On ground, or low limbs; head, back and tail uniform olive-brown; cheek buffy; eye-ring white. Olive-backed Thrush.

6.25-7.56. On ground, or low limbs; head, back and tail uniform olive-brown; cheek gray; no eye-ring. Gray-cheeked Thrush.

6.99. On trees near water; tail constantly jerked. Phoebe.

6.74. Feeds on ground, generally in flocks; head marked with black and white; line over eye yellow or yellowish; throat white or whitish. White-throated Sparrow.

6.38. In flocks on the ground in ploughed fields and on mud-flats and marshes; tail constantly wagged; outer tail-feathers white. American Pipit.

6.36 (After Oct. 20). In flocks on the ground, or in low bushes; wing-bars white; spot on unstreaked breast dusky. Tree Sparrow.

6.30. In weedy fields, or at the edges of greasy marshes; breast streaked with dark blotch in centre. Song sparrow.

6.27. Brownish-gray, unstreaked; outer tail-feathers white; generally in flocks with slate-gray males. Female Junco.

6.25. Only in or near beach grass Ipswich Sparrow.

6.17. On the ground in woods; breast streaked. Oven-bird.

6.12. In grassy pasture-land, or in fields; outer tail-feathers white. Vesper Sparrow.

6.12. In grassy marshes, or borders of old fields; breast streaked; line through forehead white. Savanna Sparrow.

5.90. A swallow with brown back and white under parts; common along the seashore. Immature. White-bellied Swallow.

5.89. In grassy marshes, or weedy edges of old fields; breast unstreaked, wing reddish-brown. Swamp Sparrow.

4.06. In brush heaps, stonewalls, or along woodland streams; call a sharp "chick"; Curtsies nervously. Winter Wren.

This guide to the autumn birds hereabout will be concluded tomorrow.

IN THE DAY'S NEWS

Andree Relics In Washington

Solution of one of the most dramatic mysteries of the Arctic during the four centuries of polar exploration, by the discovery after 33 years of the frozen remains of the Swedish explorer and aeronaut, Solomon Auguste Andree, has aroused keen interest at the headquarters of the National Georgraphic society here. Through Dr. J. Howard Gore, of this city, one of the founders of the society, relics of the expedition were collected at Danes Island in 1898, the year after Andree began from there his ill-fated air voyage; and in the same year the society contributed to the expedition of Walter Wellman whose trip to Fridtjof Nansen Land (then Franz Josef Land) had as one of its most important aims a search for the missing explorer and his two companions.

Dr. Gore with an assistant went to Danes Island of the Spitsbergen group in July 1898, just a year after Andree's ascent, to conduct some gravitational experiments. The uninhabited island had been left by Andree's supporting party less than a year before. The little house occupied by the balloonist was standing, and in it Dr. Gore and his companion established themselves.

In the house Dr. Gore found a wooden replica of the old Swedish-Norwegian Union flag, left by Andree, and this he brought with him to Washington together with a section of the crate that had held the balloon and an envelope bearing the official insignia of the expedition. At the time of Dr. Gore's visit the balloon house was standing as it had been left on the day of the ascent, and the long wooden runway over the jagged rocks was still coated with the axle grease that had been smeared on to facilitate the take-off.

An unfortunate down gust of wind at the time of the ascent may have had much to do with the tragic ending of the flight, in the opinion of Dr. Gore after his careful examination of the situation of the balloon house.

"I am convinced," he says," that it was a current of descending air, sweeping down from the top of the hill, rather than any fouling of the drag lines, as has been recently suggested, that caused the balloon to dip toward the water just after it was launched. I was told that Andree and his companions quickly threw over considerable ballast, with the result that the bag rose to a great height, lifting the drag lines out of the water. With the lines out of the sea, steering was impossible, so Andree released osme of the hydrogen that he had sought to preserve so carefully. The balloon then settled down again and when the craft disappeared on the horizon it was progressing favorably in a wind blowing from the south."

The Wellman expedition of 1898, to which the National Geographic society contributed funds, expected to find Andree and his companions at Cape Flora near the southernmost point of Franz Joseph Land, which was recognized as a meeting place for Arctic explorers. Failing to find the party, Wellman concluded—erroneously, it now appears—that the balloonists had perished in the polar waters.

Records of the National Geographic society dated 1907 refer to Andree's flight—the first effort to conduct polar exploration through the air—as "the most daring of all schemes of polar exploration." Outlining the Swedish balloonist's scheme, the account continues:

"The plan looked to the flotation of the balloon some 800 feet above the sea by means of three attached heavy guide ropes, each 900 feet long, to which in turn were attached eight ballast lines, 250 feet long, with which it was expected by shifting the position of the guide ropes to change the direction of the balloon. . . . On July 11 the wind was favorable in strength and direction and everything was ready. The balloon, named the Ornen (Eagle), had its load of about five tons of food, ballast, and freight and men, and from measurements of escaping gas had a flotation life of about 30 days. . . . The wind carried the balloon across the mountainous island of Vogelsang, making it necessary to rise some 1,500 feet, whence it passed out of sight in an hour, below the northeast horizon. As the balloon had at its best a flotation life of 30 days, it is obvious that the report is erroneous of its appearance in Siberia 65 days later."

A HISTORY OF CONNECTICUT INDUSTRY

Released by Manufacturers Association of Connecticut.

The Fenn Manufacturing Co., Hartford.

The Fenn Manufacturing company of Hartford was organized January 28, 1911, as a co-partnership, the partners being Wilson L. Fenn and his son, Wilson A. Fenn. The company was located in the building at the corner of Asylum and Spruce streets. By March 1, 1917, the company had outgrown the available space which consisted of three floors and constructed a modern factory building located at 1841 Broad street.

During the next six years the company built for the American High Speed Press company of New York city, 600 standard automatic high speed printing presses. During this period they also manufactured jigs, fixtures, tools and special machinery.

At the present time about 75 per cent of the capacity of the plant is occupied in the manufacture of special machinery for making paper containers. They have been manufacturing these machines for the same customer since 1907 at which time both Wilson L. Fenn and Wilson A. Fenn were connected with the Taylor & Fenn company of Hartford. Since the company was organized they have built special machinery of many types such as filling and capping machines for ice cream, cottage cheese, meats, berries, peaches, etc.; fish scaling and fish cutting machines; machinery for cutting, bending and branding wooden spoons and forks, etc.; machinery for making and sealing containers for soap powder; tapping machines; gear cutting grinders; ball rolling machines and ball grinding machines.

Machines manufactured by this company are now used extensively throughout the entire United States, Canada, as well as in England, France, and Australia.

In 1920 the company was incorporated under the laws of the state of Connecticut with the following officers: Wilson L. Fenn, president and treasurer; Wilson A. Fenn, vice president; Stanley L. Livingston, secretary. In July, 1921, Wilson L. Fenn died at which time Wilson A. Fenn was elected president and treasurer under whose management the company now operates.

The present officers are: Wilson A. Fenn, vice president; Stanley L. Livingston, secretary and assistant treasurer.

AMER. LEGION CONVENTION PROGRAMME IN BOSTON

Fletcher post of the American Legion has received the tentative programme for the national convention to be held in October at Boston.

The following is the outline:

Sunday, Oct. 5—2 p. m., sightseeing, Lexington, Concord, etc. 3, tercentenary pageant float parade; 8, memorial meeting, Faneuil hall (Cradle of Liberty); 9, 40 and 8 convention, Horticultural hall.

Monday, Oct. 6— 10 a. m., Legion convention opens, (Boston arena); 10:30, motor boat preliminaries, Charles river; 1 p. m., governors' luncheon to President Hoover; 2, motor boat finals, Charles river basin; 8:15 a. m.-2:30 p. m., auxiliary convention sessions; 2:30 p. m., football, Boston college and Quantico Marines; 3, 40 and 8 session, Horticultural hall; 3, air demonstration (200 planes); 7, 40 and 8 parade and national wreck; 7:20, national commander's dinner; 8, night aero pageant; 9, illuminated historic pageant, Charles river basin; 9, band concerts, Charles river bank; 10, fireworks display, Charles river basin.

Tuesday, Oct. 7—8:15, chamber of commerce breakfast; 10:00, the big parade (60,000 to 75,000 in line); 7, all states dinner, auxiliary, Symphony hall; 8, boxing tournament, Boston garden; 12, 40 and 8, 8 and 40 banquet, Hotel Statler. Outfit reunions all through the evening.

Wednesday, Oct. 8—9 a. m., Legion and auxiliary convention sessions; 2 p. m., band contests and drum corps contests; 3, naval demonstration, Boston harbor; 8, contest finals —Fenway park; 9, armistice barrage, fireworks, Fenway park; 9:30, historic ball and pageant—Military ball.

Thursday, Oct. 9—9 a. m., final sessions of convention. International Fisherman's race—Gloucester.

Each day there will be special historic trips in and around Boston. There will be special theatrical performances renewing wartime memories and numerous regimental, divisional and state dinners and reunions. Lexington and Concord are planning daily reproductions of the famous battle during the time of the convention.

The auxiliary are training 1,000 historic guides to lead visitors about. Boston trolley and bus service arranged to take in all points of interest and including Pullman parking areas, automobile parks and camp areas, in Greater Boston, as well as steamship docks.

It is very important that every Legionnaire going to Boston carries with him his 1930 membership card. Realizing that many ex-service men would like to attend this convention but would be minus the 1930 membership card by reason of not having joined the organization during the year the state department has issued the following bulletin:

Action has been taken by the department whereby it waives its claim to department dues and initiation fees on 1930 members signed up after September 3. This action is taken because of word from national headquarters that 1930 cards would be necessary for all attending the Boston convention and taking part in its activities. The action provides that posts signing up members now may transmit to the department treasurer's office the regular amounts due for the year from each applicant and cards will be issued for 1930 and 1931.

SUPT. TITCOMB SPEAKS ON HUNTING SEASON

There will be an open season this fall on grouse, the "gamest of Connecticut game birds," Superintendent of Fisheries and Game, John W. Titcomb told a radio audience Tuesday afternoon from WTIC, the Travelers station. He was speaking on the program of the Home forum, which is conducted by the station in co-operation with state departments, the Connecticut Agricultural college and farm bureaus.

The close season on grouse, which has been in effect for a number of years, will end on October 20, the hunting season on these birds beginning simultaneously with the opening of the season on pheasants and woodcock, said Superintendent Titcomb. Grouse are reported to be numerous and apparently have staged a comeback after a period of decimation. Reports to the fish and game department indicate that there has been a good breeding season.

Mr. Titcomb indicated in his talk that there should also be good sport for hunters of other birds. He said that in the spring, 1,589 cock pheasants were distributed in overshot covers, 481 of which were imported from England. In July and early September, 16,494 young pheasants were liberated, an increase over the total distributed last year. He finds that it has also been a good breeding year for pheasants.

Attention was called to the fact that pheasants, which could be hunted last year on October 8, cannot be lawfully taken this year until October 20. The limit on upland birds is 2 grouse, 2 cock pheasants, and 4 woodcock in one day. The only game bird on which the season is open at this time is the rail. The season for this bird began September 1.

"The hunting season on waterfowl, including geese, brant, Wilson's snipe or jack-snipe, and coot, opens on October 1," said Mr. Titcomb. "Those who hunt the Wilson's snipe should not confuse this bird with the killdeer plover. The Wilson's or jack-snipe is the only member of the snipe family which may be lawfully shot. Hunters should be absolutely certain they can identify it before shooting.

"Water-fowl may be shot only from one-half hour before sunrise to sunset. The daily bag limit on wild ducks has been reduced to 15; wild geese, 4; brant, 8; Wilson's snipe, 20; rails, 25; coot or mud hen, 25. Wood ducks and eider ducks are protected against all shooting.

"The open season on gray squirrels begins on October 8. The bag limit is 5 a day. The open season for cottontail rabbits and varying hares or snowshoe rabbits begins November 1. The daily bag limit is 3. The European gray hare, locally called jack rabbit, is not protected.

"There is a definite penalty for killing deer, except where they are discovered doing damage to crops. Provisions to cover this are contained in the statutes.

"The raccoon hunters will be interested to know that the commission is holding in breeding pens at the Shade Swamp sanctuary in Farmington 1 raccoons born last year. These are being kept with the expectation that they will bear young early next spring. In addition there are 17 raccoons distributed among six custodians in various parts of the state, some of which, at least, will be held until they have borne young next spring. Nineteen have been liberated in suitable covers."

Henry Pester was fishing in Long Island sound off Mayville, L. I. A sea gull frisked greedily about his catch. He kept chasing it way. Just to show that there were no hard feelings, the gull darted at the water, caught a one-pound weakfish, dropped it squarely in Mr. Pester's lap and flew away.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Walter A. Towne

Alice Warner, wife of Walter A. Towne, who died Sunday at Seattle, Wash., at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Francis F. Powell, was a cousin of the late Miss Fannie Warner Sibley, of Norwich and of the late Judge Edgar M. Warner, of Putnam. Mrs. Towne was an occasional visitor in Norwich when her home was on West street, New London and when her husband was headmaster of Bulkeley school there.

After Mr. Towne's retirement, they went to Seattle to make their home with their daughter. Another daughter surviving is Mrs. H. E. Donigan, of the Powell River District, B. C., also there is a son, Marcus Towne, in New York.

Mrs. Towne was a member of the Second Congregational church, New London, and leaves many friends in that city who were saddened at the news of her death. She was ailing when she accompanied her husband to New London the past summer and Mr. Towne was the guest of honor at the annual banquet of Bulkeley Alumni association.

Mrs. William H. Fitch

The death of Fannie C. Smith, widow of William H. Fitch, formerly of Norwich Town, occurred Saturday at Hartford after a considerable period of failing health. Her home had been in Norwich Town the greater part of her life but for several years past she had been in Hartford. She is survived by a son, William D. Fitch of New Haven.

Private funeral services were held Tuesday and the body was brought to Bozrah where interment was in Bozrah cemetery.

FUNERALS

Nicholas Jackson

The funeral of Nicholas Jackson was held at the parlors of Undertaker C. A. Gager Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock and the service was conducted by Rev W. J. Harris, pastor of Mt. Calvary Baptist church. The church choir sang Nearer, My God to Thee, Safe in the Arms of Jesus and Abide With Me, during the services. Relatives were the bearers and the interment took place at Maplewood cemetery where Rev. Mr. Harris conducted the committal service. There was a large attendance of relatives and friends at the service and there were many beautiful floral tributes.

INCIDENTS IN SOCIETY

Mr. and Mrs. Henry F. Parker and daughters and Miss Matilda B. Randall have returned from Misquamicut where they spent the season. Later in the month Miss Deborah Parker will enter the Erskine school, Boston, for a two years' college course and Miss Letitia Parker will attend the Putnam school for girls, at Poughkeepsie.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Lee are at Turner's tavern, Bethlehem, while motoring through the White mountains.

Miss Barbara F. Allen is at her home in Huntington place from Lighthouse inn for a vaction.

Mrs. George C. Preston, who has spent the summer with her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Peter C. Ward, of Glenwood avenue, New London, takes possession Friday of her recently purchased cottage on Mott avenue, Neptune park.

Mr. and Mrs. William H. Allen have closed their Crescent Beach cottage and are at their home in Huntington place.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter T. Camp, Mr. and Mrs. Frederic S. Camp, Miss Alice Sayles and Raymond G. Camp, who occupied the Lippitt cottage, Neptune park, for two weeks early in September, have returned to town.

Mr. and Mrs. John H. Harris, of Chicago, are visiting the former's sister, Mrs. Lydia S. Perkins and Mrs. J. M. Gifford, of 115 McKinley avenue.

Miss Laura Masury Carleton, who has spent a fortnight at Norwich Inn, left Monday for New York.

A pleasant family reunion was held Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Allen Latham, on Scotland road, when they had with them all but one of their children. The home-coming guests were Paul Walker Latham, of Minneapolis; William Harris Latham, of Babylon, L. I.; Allen Latham, Jr., of Charleston, W. V., and Mr. and Mrs. Howard Cook, (Barbara Latham) of New York and Granville, Mass.

Miss Mary G. Osgood and Miss Martha L. Osgood are at Bass Rocks, Mass., the guests of Miss Nellie Day, formerly of Norwich.

When Mrs. Edgar VanWinkle entertained at bridge at her home in Jerome Court, New London, Saturday afternoon her guests included Mrs. L. Goffe Briggs, of Norwich.

At the Krishna cottage, Pleasure Beach, Mrs. Herbert M. Booth, of Nelson Place, has entertained during the past fortnight her sister, Mrs. F. P. Mills, her nieces, Misses Marion and Clara Mills, and her nephews, Frank Mills and wife and David Mills and wife, all of Stratford. Mr. and Mrs. Booth have occupied the cottage for the past two weeks.

The 1930 annual and roll of the Connecticut society, Sons of the American Revolution, lists the officers of General Israel Putnam branch, of Norwich as: President, E. Allen Bidwell; vice president, William G. Tarbox; secretary-treasurer, Earle M. Wood.

Mr. and Mrs. William T. Crandall have been in Montreal and Quebec for several days.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick S. Crowell and children are remaining at Groton Long Point until October.

Back From Motor Trip

The Misses Mae Generous and Viola Peltier of Occum, and Harold Stearns and Elsid Barr of Glasgo have returned from a motor trip to New York and New Jersey, where they were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Peltier of Hackensack, N. J., and Mr. and Mrs. Victor Richard of Passaic, N. J.

CITIZENS PRESENT CLAIMS TO HAVE DEEP CHANNEL IN YANTIC RIVER

Following a hearing on the proposed deepening of the Yantic river from its junction with the Thames river for a distance of about 500 feet, held Tuesday morning in the common council chamber at the court house, Major Charles J. Taylor, U. S. A., district engineer at the Providence office, reserved decision. The hearing was in the nature of a preliminary examination authorized by the rivers and harbors act of last July, and was held for the purpose of securing the consensus of local residents regarding the proposed project. Those present at the hearing included ex-Mayor Timothy C. Murphy, First Selectman William S. Murray, Daniel T. Shea, Henry G. Peck, James O. Mahoney, Frank Davis, Alex Pasnik, ex-Congressman Edwin W. Higgins, Attorney C. V. James, Christopher Gallup of the chamber of commerce Thames river committee and Miss Mary Bundy, acting secretary of the chamber of commerce. Mayor Robbins, who was at the republican convention at Hartford, sent a communication.

Major Taylor presided and Attorney Edwin W. Higgins, counsel for the Mahoney Coal Co., conducted the presentation of testimony. Christopher M. Gallup, chairman of the Thames river improvement committee of the Norwich chamber of commerce, also took an active part in the hearing.

It developed at the hearing that it is proposed to have the 18 foot channel of the Thames river, now almost completed from Allyn's Point to this city, continue up the Yantic river on both the east and west branches for a distance of about 500 feet. The depth is sought to be the same, although a 14-foot depth would be acceptable. The width would be the distance across the Yantic river. It was desired to have the 18-foot channel continue up to the highway bridges. Both branches of the Yantic river run on opposite sides of central wharf and the west branch was considered the best project inasmuch as coal barges use it.

Among letters in favor of the survey, obtained by the Norwich chamber of commerce and presented at the hearing were communications from the Atlantic Carton Corp., Glen Woolen Mills and Philip A. Johnson. Attorney Higgins presented letters from John O. Peckham, James O. Mahoney and the Norwich Taxpayers' association by Herbert M. Lerou, who signed as president and a former mayor of the city. There were also letters from city and town officials.

The communications are as follows:

Norwich, Conn., Sept. 16, 1930.

To Major Charles J. Taylor, Board of United States Army Engineers, River and Harbor Improvements:

Complying, as we understand it, with the suggestion made that the reasons for federal action in deepening the west branch of the Yantic river as well as the east branch be presented to you in writing as supplemental to oral statements we submit the following:

It is our understanding that this hearing is held for the purpose of getting necessary legislative authorization predicated on a favorable preliminary report by the board of army engineers in charge of river and harbor improvements.

We ask that the improvement in the navigation of these two branches of the Yantic river from Central wharf to the Norwich harbor lines be included in what we know as the Thames river project.

The Edward Chappell Co., the People's Coal Co., the Werman company, the Max Gordon Co. and other manufacturing and merchandise organizations all have docks on one of the other branches of the Yantic.

The dock frontage of the Mahoney Coal Co. is approximately 150 feet, of the People's Coal Co. about 200 feet and of the Werman Co. of about 200 feet. The writer handles about nine thousand tons of coal annually, all coming in barges which draw from right to ten feet while the present depth of the west channel at mean low tide is about eight feet.

We understand the harbor basin is about 700 fet by 500 feet and that the enlargement of the Thames river project from Allyn's Point to Norwich provides for a depth of 18 feet.

Barge coal can be more conveniently handled, more economically and efficiently handled from either channel of the Yantic river than from any docks or wharves near the city of Norwich on the Thames river. The figures that we have submitted are but approximations particularly with regard to the harbor basin but this accurate information is available we presume for surveys heretofore made on projects approved.

The evidence before the general board of river and harbor improvement at a hearing on the enlargement of the Thames river project from Allyn's Point north to Norwich disclosed and it was openly stated that one shipper fronting on the Thames would serve about $6,000 in lighterage charges yearly if the 18 feet depth was granted. It was granted due in part to the increased raft of barges and in the public interest to make the Thames river more suitable to meet the changing conditions. While it may be said that I will personally benefit by the increased depth, as doubtless I will, it will still be necessary for me to do some dredging.

About 20 years ago some $2,500 was authorized and appropriated for the removal of rock obstructions in the Shetucket river a short distance about Laurel Hill bridge. While perhaps neither these two enlargements of so-called Thames river project furnish an inanswerable argument for a preliminary survey of both branches of the Yantic for a distance of about 500 feet still we feel that there is some parallel and that they furnish a precedent for an estimate of cost and finding as to tonnage and the public need. We submit that this short distance in the Yantic branches makes naturally the Yantic a part of the Thames river project and that it should be included to make the Thames river project more available.

The barge rate for coal up to 600 tons is now $1.15 while above 600 tons it is $1.00. We could get the lower rate sometimes at least with increased depth. We now average about one barge a month. This request for favorable action has the support of the local chamber of commerce, taxpayers' association, as well as manufacturers and shippers who do not own wharfage rights along the rivers.

The amount of money that seemingly is involved is small as compared to Norwich's return to the federal treasury in taxes. While this disproportion of course is not a justification of an unwise expenditure still we submit such a statement should carry some weight in connection also with the size of Norwich and its location with reference to a considerable outstanding area of manufacturing communities.

With rival coal companies now in competition and owning docks along the Yantic the prospect of any co-operative private effort apart from the help of the federal government is remote while some of the docks are owned by manufacturing companies and some by merchandising concerns.

While we suggest that these two branches of the Yantic should be dredged and maintained to equal the depth of the Thames from Norwich to Allyn's Point we defer as of course we are bound to your judgment and would be grateful for even a 14 feet channel.

Respectfully submitted,
MAHONEY COAL CO.
By Edwin W. Higgins, Attorney.

September 15, 1930.

Major Charles J. Taylor, U. S. District Engineer, New Federal Bldg., Providence, R. I.

Dear Sir:

This city is vitally interested in every effort to deepen the channels the east and west channels of the of local rivers. The dredging of both Yantic river, up as far as the highway bridges, is the logical step to follow the deepening of the Thames. In fact it is incomprehensible that the scheme of deepening the latter river fails to evolve the maximum benefits possible to be derived from this expenditure. Extending similarly deep channels up the Yantic to enable boats upon arrival here to reach adjacent docks, is clearly corollary to the first project.

Respectfully submitted,
LEE R. ROBBINS, Mayor.
Norwich, Conn.

Town of Norwich.

September 16, 1930.

Major Charles J. Taylor, Corp. of Engineers, District Engineer.

Dear Sir:

As first selectman of the town of Norwich, I take pleasure in indorsing the project for the deepening of the channel of both branches of the Yantic river, in this town from its junction with the Thames river to the West Main street bridges.

It would seem to me that this work is necessary in order to obtain the full benefit of the deepening of the Thames river and should result in a benefit to the citizens of this town and increase use of the Thames river for water-borne traffic.

It would increase the use and value of the present wharfage rights in this vicinity, which at present can only be used with difficulty and the resulting saving of transportation costs should be of benefit to all citizens of this community.

WM. S. MURRAY,
First Selectman Town of Norwich.

Norwich, Conn., Sept. 15, 1930.

Major Charles J. Taylor, Engineering Officer, U. S. A., River and Harbor.

Dear Sir:

I favor extending the Thames river project to include the deepening of both the east and west channels of the Yantic river east of the Central wharf bridges. I am interested in a dock frontage of about 220 feet on the west bank of the Yantic. It is used for coal. We have been troubled in using this dock due to low water. There is only about eight feet of water at this dock when the barges draw much more. I believe the public interest will be served by deepening both branches of the Yantic and am in favor of it.

Respectfully,
JOHN O. PECKHAM.

Phillip A. Johnson.

Phillip A. Johnson of this city, large mill owner, in a communication wrote: "As a resident and taxpayer of the town of Norwich and one interested in its future welfare as well as past accomplishment, it is my belief that deepening this additional portion of the harbor of Norwich will prove of great value in making a greater portion of the city's water front available to cheap water transportation.

"The industries of New England here have been hit in recent years for various reasons and any step which would assist the industrial growth of the community is deserving of encouragement.

"Cheap water transportation is a community asset whose benefits cannot always be defined in advance but which has proved time and again the basis of growth and greater prosperity.

"I therefore heartily endorse the program promulgated by the chamber of commerce in deepening of the Yantic river."

WOMAN'S CITY CLUB PREPARES SEASON PROGRAMME

Members of the Woman's City club of Norwich, Mrs. Charles Breed Gilbert president, have in anticipation for the coming season some 50 appointments arranged by the programme committee and heads of the various departments cooperating. The committee consists of Mrs. Hugh B. Campbell, chairman; Mrs. Frederick W. Lester, vice chairman; Mrs. James A. Bidwell, Miss Ruth Hamilton, Mrs. Frank Crowell and Mrs. Herbert Willey.

Very early in the season will come a lecture with pictures on "Anatomical Engineering," by Dr. James Wilson. In November, J. E. Williamson will give his fascinating lecture entitled "Beaty and Tragedy under the Sea." This lecture will be illustrated with a series of motion pictures in natural colors, taken near the Bahama Islands, and highly approved by United States naval authorities. In January Gale Noyes comes again, this time to speak on "Conrad." An afternoon of bridge, the popular "Guest Night" with bridge and dancing, a garden party in May and an evening of solo dances by Miss Miriam Mamein give splendid variety with the programmes arranged by the different departments. Of Miss Marrein it is said that she is a young American dance artiste, whose every dance is a miniature drama, or chores graphic poem, set with movement of beauty and charm to the music of some master and costumed and lighted accordingly.

At the annual Christmas party for the children the dramatic department, Miss Margaret Sullivan chairman, offers a children's play, "The Brownies." In March a club play will be given. Four evening round tables include "The Passion Play," by Rev. John J. Reilly; dramatic dancing, by Mrs. Willis P. Austin, interpreted by Miss Helene Crandall; "The Influence of the Little Theatre Movement in America," by Prof. Seckerson of Storrs college, and the reading of a play by Miss Hannah M. Crowell.

The largely attended round tables last spring on "Literary Norwich" are to be followed this fall by another afternoon on the same subject together with an exhibition of books by Norwich authors. A novel is listed as the subject of a later round table. In March will come the reading of the prize poems and the distribution of the prizes. A prize of $10 is offered for the best sonnet and a like prize for the best lyric. Any member of the club is eligible to enter this contest. Mrs. Leslie L. Brewer heads the committee of the literature department.

In November, the music department, Mrs. Walter M. Buckingham chairman, offers an "Old Folks Concert," at Slater hall. This department has also arranged for seven round tables covering, Early American Music, Modern American Music and American Music; one evening given to MacDowell, and the operas Il Travatore, Hansel and Gretel, Pelleas and Mulisande. Each round table is in charge of three members of the committee.

On the first Wednesday afternoon of each month beginning in October those interested in child study are invited to round tables as follows: Oct., "Recreation Problems," discussed by Miss Nancy Tomlinson; in November, "Pediatrics," by Dr. William Driscoll; in January, "School Problems," as seen by Supt. of Schools Edward J. Graham; in February, "The Purpose and Use of Psychiatric Tests," explained by Mrs. Helen Kemmel; in March, Mrs. A. H. Chase will present the timely subject of junior high schools; in April, Principal H. A. Tirrel will talk on "Problems of High School," and in May there will be an open meeting for college problems. Mrs. Willis Austin is chairman of the child study group.

The current events department, Mrs. Willard P. Haugh chairman, has engaged Prof. Henry W. Lawrence, Ph. D. (Yale) to give a lecture on current events on the third Monday evening of each month from October to April inclusive. Prof. Lawrence is head of the department of history at Connecticut college. He is a frequent contributor to newspapers and periodicals. He has been for twenty years a teacher of history in New England colleges and universities. He is a member of the American Historical association, the American Political Science association, the American Academy of Political and Social Science, the National Economic league and the American Association for Labor Legislation.

The art department under the supervision of Mrs. Ozias Dodge, will give another of its very interesting exhibitions late in February.

There will be a few business meetings during the year, each of which will be followed by a social, a Girl Scout programme, or by some other form of entertainment.

All of these various club appointments, with the exception of the current events class, are free to all club members. An additional fee is required for the current events course.

The comfortable club room situated at the head of the main stairway at the Wauregan hotel will maintain its excellence under the direction of Mrs. John F Rogers, chairman of the house committee. This room is open to club members at any time. The work of the popular Girls' City club will be continued under the chairmanship of Miss Constance Raymond.

MAYOR ROBBINS MADE NOMINATION OF BURROWS

Mayor Lee Roy Robbins played a prominent part in the republican state convention at Hartford Tuesday when he made the nomination of Judge Warren B. Burrows for attorney-general on the party ticket.

In a brief speech, which is reported to have made a very favorable impression, Mayor Robbins put the name of Judge Burrows before the convention in the following words:

"We all know that the position of attorney-general is one of the most important in the state. The place requires a lawyer, and consistent with the policies of the republican party the attorney-general must be one of the most able lawyers. He must be a man of sterling character and he must have the analytical mind, because much of his duties revolves about the interpretation of the laws of the state.

"He must be a man of great common sense so that he may maintain the wonderful record which this office, under a succession of republican attorney-generals, has attained.

"At this time the republican party has scanned the state for the right man and the right lawyer to nominate for attorney-general, and it was not until yesterday that Warren B. Burrows was elected. For 30 years Mr. Burrows has been a practicing attorney before the bar of Connecticut. He was prosecuting attorney of the Groton town court for 25 years. He was assistant state attorney for New London county for a number of years, has represented his town and his district in both houses of the general assembly and is now rounding out his second year upon the United States district court bench.

"At this time Mr. Burrows is willing to sacrifice his labor for the government to undertake the labor of his state, and any man who is willing to make this sacrifice most certainly is a good man to tie to.

"It gives me great pleasure to nominate Warren B. Burrows for attorney-general of Connecticut."

SECOND DEATH FROM ACCIDENT IN TAFTVILLE

A second death from the automobile accident in Taftville on Monday afternoon occurred at 2:30 Tuesday morning when Leon Comtois of 45 Merin avenue, Danielson, died at the Backus hospital. His back was broken. His cousin, Lucien E. Comtois of 122 Main street, Danielson, was instantly killed in the automobile crash.

Mrs. Yvonne Sylvester, of 34 Merchants avenue, Taftville, wife of Philibert Sylvester, who also suffered a broken back, was reported at the hospital early this (Wednesday) morning as being in fairly good condition. She also has a badly bruised arm, but has suffered no paralysis from her broken back.

In the city court Tuesday morning there was a continuance for a day in the case of Lucien Comtois of 38 1-2 Water street, Danielson, under $2,500 bonds given by his uncle, Philip Leroux of Lisbon.

POTATO THIEVES HELD FOR HIGH COURT TRIAL

The Old Mystic trio, David Sebastian, Fred Smart and Joseph Smart, who were arrested Sunday night by State Trooper Arthur Whitmarsh, charged with stealing potatoes at night and selling them the next day, were bound over to the superior court at a special session of the Ledyard town court Monday night by Justice Walter M. Buckingham. The trio were taken into custody on the farm of Paul Massey in the town of Ledyard after they were alleged to have loaded 15 bushels of stolen potatoes into an automobile.

It is also alleged that they were responsible for the complaints which were received from several farmers in the vicinity of Old Mystic and Norwich that potatoes were being stolen from their gardens.

Attorney Dorsey Visited Here

Attorney Thomas J. Dorsey, of New London, was a caller in Norwich Tuesday afternoon, stopping over to greet old friends on his return from attending the republican state convention at Hartford.

A woman can make a fool of almost any man if nature doesn't get its work in ahead of her.

COUNTY BAPTISTS VOTE TO MEET IN NORWICH

Baptist churches in all parts of the county were represented Tuesday at the 118th anniversary of the New London Baptist association which was held with the Lebanon Baptist church of which Rev. A. G. Littlefield is pastor.

In the election of officers, which came in the afternoon session, Rev. Mr. Littlefield was elected moderator for next year when the association is to meet in Norwich. Rev. R. W. Porter of Huntington street church, New London, was elected vice moderator, and Mrs. E. Jean Mosier, of Waterford First church, was re-elected clerk-treasurer.

The attendance filled the church when the meeting was called to order at 10:30 a. m. by Rev. Herbert B. Hutchins, of Quaker Hill, moderator, and the devotional services were in charge of Rev. R. W. Porter. The welcome was given by Pastor Littlefield, with response by the moderator, which was followed by a business session in which reports were presented.

Committees were appointed which reported in the afternoon session as follows:

Program— Rev. A. G. Littlefield, Mrs. R. W. Ferguson, Rev. P. A. Kilmister; resolutions, Rev. R. I. Porter, F. F. Richards, Miss Maud Wheeler; ordinations, class of 1930, Rev. J. F. Speerli, E. R. Gorlick, Rev. R. W. Ferguson, class of 1931, Rev. A. G. Littlefield, Rev. H. B. Hutchins, Rev. H. P. Brothwell; class of 1932, Rev. D. A. Pitt, D. D., Rev. P. H. Kilmister, R. W. Mansfield; obituaries, R. W. Mansfield, Rev. A. G. Littlefield, Mrs. H. I. Peckham; nominating, Rev. P. A. Kilmister, Rev. D. A. Pitt, D. D., George E. Briggs; enrollment, Rev. G. W. Borden, Rev. G. H. Strouse, Herbert Rogers; social service and temperance, F. F. Richards, Herbert Rogers, Herbert L. Avery.

The association sermon was by Rev. J. J. Allen, of New London, after which Moderator Hutchins extended the right hand of fellowship to new pastors in the association, who were Rev. Mr. Bates of Montville, Rev. W. J. Sly, Third Baptist, Norwich; Rev. J. J. Allen, First, New London, and Rev. R. W. Porter, Huntington street, New London. The Lord's supper, which was in charge of Rev. P. A. Kilmister, of the First Baptist church, Norwich, closed the morning session.

A very fine dinner menu was served by the women of the church in the social room at the rear where tables were set for 72 and twice filled.

Woman's Hour

In the afternoon, at 2 o'clock, the woman's hour was held with R. W. Ferguson presiding and the following programme: Our Aim for the Year, White Cross Work, Overland Mrs. Percy Allen; Overseas, Mrs. Ida Richardson; Missionary Education, Mrs. B. R. Gardner; Echoes from the House Party, Mrs. C. E. Gardner; Our Missionary Message, Rev. P. R. Bakeman, East China.

Afternoon Session

The association meeting was resumed at 3:30 o'clock when there was an address on Prohibition by Gustave Bochman, which was followed by business in which reports were made by the standing committees on evangelism, missionary cooperation and Christian education and by the association committees appointed in the morning.

Officers were elected and there were greetings from state officers as follows: Rev. E. E. Gates, general secretary of Connecticut Baptist convention; Rev. H. B. Sloat, secretary Missionary cooperation; Rev. O. P. Campbell, secretary young people's work.

Evening Session

After the excellent supper served by the women of the church the evening session was opened at 7 o'clock with the following programme:

Song service led by Rev. Raymond J. Bates; selections by choir of the Lebanon church; laymen's movement —Its Aims and Purposes, T. T. Phillips, Bridgeport; address, "Religious Education: Whither?" Rev. J. Quinter Miller, secretary of the Connecticut Council of Religious Education.

TEACHER FOR THE BLIND LEAVES FOR NEW JERSEY

Miss Izetta Dilette, for the past four years an esteemed resident of Norwich Town, left recently to take up work in New Jersey, similar to that which she did while in Connecticut.

Miss Dilette was home teacher for the blind, being sent out by the state to various places in this section, which she visited each week, often carrying on her mission in two or three places in one day. The places where her influence and teachings were given, were New London, Groton, Mystic, Jewett City, Danielson, Brooklyn, Putnam, Hebron and Willimantic. Miss Dilette originally came to Norwich Town from New Jersey, although her home town is not very near to where she is now located at Newark. It is from there that she will continue in this most worthy work, when taking into consideration that she has been afflicted with blindness herself, since 12 years of age.

When first locating in Norwich, Miss Dilette resided on West Main street, in the family of Rev. and Mrs. James B. Aldrich, former residents of Norwich Town. For the past three years she has been a loved member in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Stanton W. Brown and family of Wightman avenue, who sincerely regret her departure, as she was such a loyal and devoted member of this family circle.

It has been mentioned that her absence will be severely felt in the Norwich Town Methodist Episcopal church, which she loved so well and where she was a faithful member. Always ready and willing when called upon for anything in the interest of this church, Miss Dilette was also a loyal teacher in the Sunday school, where she had a class of young girls under her guidance and instruction.

A prominent leader of this church in speaking of Miss Dilette, alluded to her splendid and helpful and inspiring talks when leading a Christian Endeavor service, also what a great help she was in contributing her share of the entertainment at church socials by her whistling solos, and harmonica solos. Miss Dilette, who is an accomplished elocutionist has on several occasions favored large audiences in this way, in her cheerful, sweet, Christian spirit, much admired by her audiences.

Before leaving Norwich Town the Sunday school teachers of the Methodist Episcopal church gave her an informal reception at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Aldrich. In behalf of the Sunday school she was presented a calf skin and seal hand bag. During the evening refreshments were served by the hostess.

Dahlia Stalk 9 Ft. Tall

A real giant of a dahlia stalk is that in the garden at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Nathan A. Bingham, 24 Oreco street, a Jersey beauty, 9 ft., 8 in., tall. So prolific is it that there are 14 blooms on the single stalk.

Jacobs-Rosenberg Marriage

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Rosenberg of West Main street, announce the marriage on Sept. 8 of their daughter Viola, to John Jacobs, formerly of Boston, now connected with the West Side Garage of this city.

Made Long Motor Trip

The members of the May club and its auxiliary have returned from a motor trip to the Thousand Islands, Niagara Falls, Canada, Watkins Glen, Storm King highway and Bear Mountain bridge, covering in all nearly 1,400 miles. The weather proved to be fine throughout the trip and the trip was keenly enjoyed by all.

Shows Continued Improvement

Reports were received from Middlesex hospital at Middletown Tuesday night of continuing improvement in the condition of Robert W. Perkins of this city, vice-president of the Connecticut Light and Power company, who was injured in an automobile accident last week. Early Tuesday evening, it was said, Mr. Perkins had been rather uncomfortable, but at midnight he was sleeping very quietly.

Dismissals at Backus Hospital

Patients dismissed in the past two days at the Backus hospital were the following:

CITIZENS-KACEY SERIES IS ON AGAIN; KACEYS CALL GAME "NO CONTEST"

Norwich's championship Polish Citizens team will have to win the county baseball title on the ball field and will endeavor to do so next Sunday at New London. Manager O'Connell and Capt. MacInnis of the New London Kaceys have decided not to let the Citizens get away with the county crown by claiming it on two victories and a disputed game.

The Kacey management sought out Manager George Bizinski and Capt. Leo Jarvis of the Norwich champions yesterday and at a conference held in Norwich decided to call last Sunday's game "no-contest" and play it over next Sunday at Mercer field, in New London. The New London boys after considering the matter from all angles decided that the most fair way was to call the game "no-contest" and play it over. The matter was patched up between the two management and arrangements for the fourth game of the series are under way.

The Kaceys expressed themselves as being adverse to taking a game when there was any doubt as to their right to it and said that the championship would be settled on the ball diamond and further guaranteed that there would be no such demonstration as took place at Mercer field last Sunday. The New London team is to be complimented on their attitude in the matter and for their sportsmanship.

It was decided at the meeting of the two managers that Sunday's game would be played with umpires from out of town, probably from Providence. This is a wise decision as in all series where local umpires are used there is bound to be more or less dissatisfaction either from one side or the other. Not only that, but it puts the umpires themselves in mighty tough positions.

Two more evenly matched teams it would be hard to find as the scores in each game have indicated. The first game was won by Norwich 2 to 1, the second by Norwich 8 to 2, the third by New London 1 to 0, and the fourth resulted in a scoreless ten-inning deadlock. Teams that play such close games are playing baseball on a par with the league clubs. And not only that, but brilliant baseball has been displayed in each game, especially by the pitchers of both clubs.

With the interest in the series at fever pitch in both Norwich and New London there is every indication that the crowd will tax Mercer field to its capacity on Sunday. There is little doubt but that the crowd Sunday will be the largest ever to attend a single sporting event in eastern Connecticut.

ALEXANDER'S HITTING WINS GAME FOR THE TIGERS

DETROIT, Sept. 16.—(AP)—Two timely hits by Dale Alexander gave Detroit a 7 to 5 victory over the Red Sox in the first game of their series here. Alexander delivered his blows—both singles—in the third and fourth innings with two runners on base each time, thus driving in four runs.

Russell relieved Gaston on the mound for Boston after four innings and held the Tigers scoreless for the remainder of the game. Waite Hoyt allowed ten hits, including a homer by Webb with Miller on base, but steadied in the pinches enough to win. He allowed no bases on balls. There were no strikeouts in the game.

YANKEES HAMMER OUT ONE-SIDED WIN OVER BROWNS

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 16.—(AP)—Unloosing a thunderous storm of hits of all sizes in the first five innings, the New York Yankees gave the Browns a sound trouncing today by a 19 to 10 score. The Yanks hammered four St. Louis pitchers for a total of 23 hits, 20 of them coming in the first five frames.

New York started off with four runs in the first inning, only to have Goose Goslin hit his 32nd home run after Sam Gibson, who only joined the Yankees yesterday, had walked the first two men he faced. New York, however, scored six more times in the second and made a third bunch of five hits in the next frame for four runs. Gibson only lasted part of the second inning and Ed Wells pitched the major part of the game for New York, getting credit for the victory, although McEvoy was called in to stop a ninth inning Brownie rally. Blaeholder, Kimsey, Holshausser and Stiles toiled for St. Louis. Schulte hit a homer.

HUBBELL TURNS BACK CUBS WITH THREE HITS

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—(AP)—The New York Giants, who hold only a slim chance of getting back into the National league pennant race but have plenty of ability to cause trouble, sank Chicago's Cubs deeper into the doldrums today by winning the first game of their important series, 7 to 0. Carl Hubbell's three-hit pitching and the ineffectiveness of a pair of the younger Cub hurlers combined to leave the Cubs a game and a half behind St. Louis and Brooklyn, virtually tied for the lead, and to place the Giants three games behind Chicago.

Jess Petty, Hubbell's opponent through most of the game, was hit rather freely but kept most of the blows from doing damage. Two hits and a bad throw in the first gave the Giants their opening run and Lindstrom's homer in the third brought the only other tally off Petty.

But the Cubs failed to do any hitting behind Petty and he was removed for a pinch hitter in the eighth. Bob Osborn took his place and walked three men in succession before he retired in favor of Lyn Nelson. Fred Leach came in to bat for Roettger and sent an easy grounder down toward second. Blair booted the ball and allowed Ott and Hogan to score. The next two men sacrificed, Jackson scoring after Critz's fly, then Allen smacked a homer into the left field stands to bring in two more runs, five in all for the inning.

Hubbell, pitching almost perfect ball, was in trouble only twice. Bell opened the third inning with a triple but was stranded there as the young southpaw forced Petty to hit an easy grounder, then fanned Blair and English. In the next frame he walked Cuyler and Wilson and Hartnett sacrificed, but a double play on Dan Taylor's hit to Critz ended the inning. Hubbell struck out ten Cubs, fanning Hack Wilson on two occasions.

PHILLIES NOSE OUT PIRATES IN HECTIC GAME

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 16.—(AP)—The Phillies nosed out the Pirates today 15 to 14 in a wild and woolly ten-inning struggle. After Pittsburgh had scored four runs in the tenth inning, the Phils came back to score five in their half and clinched the victory.

In the eighth inning Chic Thompson engineered a triple play. Paul Waner and Grantham were on first and second when Traynor hit a line drive. Thompson speared it, touched second, doubling Paul Waner, and then threw to Sherlock, who nipped Grantham. Klein hit his 34th home run of the season. Grantham hit two home runs and Suhr one.

CLINNIN NAMED PRESIDENT OF N. B. A. TO SUCCEED ISSACS

OMAHA, Neb., Sept. 16.—(AP)—John V. Clinnin of Chicago, chairman of the Illinois boxing commission, was elected president of the National Boxing association today, succeeding Stanley M. Issacs of Cincinnati, Ohio. The association voted to establish permanent headquarters in Chicago and empowered Clinnin to set up a working office.

The association also organized a national wrestling association, which will have no connection with the N. B. A. Colonel Harry J. Landry of New Orleans was named as president of the wrestling body and New Orleans was chosen as its headquarters.

Detroit was selected for the 1931 convention of the N. B. A., other officers of which were chosen as follows: James M. Brown, Michigan, first vice president; Ben J. Jacobs, New Jersey, second vice president; Karl D. Malone, Kentucky, third vice president; Judge Landry, Mississippi, fourth vice president, and Ira L. Vorhies, Nebraska, re-elected treasurer. A secretary for the N. B. A. will be appointed by the president and will be a full time official stationed at the Chicago headquarters.

Elected officers of the wrestling association are: Judge Seneca Taylor, St. Louis, first vice president; Mike Jankowsky, Tulsa, second vice president; Latrobe Cogswell, Baltimore, third vice president, and Peter Swanson, New Orleans, secretary-treasurer.

RHEM MISSING ON EVE OF CRUCIAL GAME TODAY

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 16.—(AP)—Flint Rhem, Cardinal pitcher who has won six consecutive games and whose turn it is to pitch against the Brooklyn Robins at Brooklyn tomorrow, in the second game of a crucial National league series is missing from the fold, a dispatch to the Post-Dispatch from its staff correspondent, says.

"No official of the club could be reached to confirm or deny that Rhem had stepped out of line, but it became known late this afternoon that he has not been seen since yesterday," the Dispatch says.

Rhem's loss to the team, "even temporarily," would be a severe loss to the club in the thick of the pennant fight," the Dispatch says.

Berg-Glick Bout Postponed

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—(AP)—Rain forced postponement until Thursday night of the Queensboro Stadium's boxing show, scheduled for tonight. Jack Kid Berg, English lightweight, was to have met Joe Glick of Brooklyn in the main bout.

The series is on again, Glory be.

It was a darned shame to see a perfectly good series broken up through hot words and a misunderstanding.

When New London came to Norwich yesterday and told the Norwich management that they would call the game played there last Sunday a tie game and play it over they raised the standard of sportsmanship of New London a hundred per cent.

It's mighty hard after one has once taken a wrong stand to come out flat-footed and admit you are wrong. A good deal of credit is due the Kacey management for their willingness to play the game over.

And also there is a world of credit due the Norwich team in overlooking the unfortunate occurrence at Sunday's game and the treatment they received. But by-gones are by-gones and the teams meet in the field as though nothing had happened. It is better so.

Now you fans don't go lugging any blackjacks or six shooters to the game on Sunday in expectation that they will be needed. There will be no fight at this game and the first one that shows fight is going out on his ear. That's a promise.

The game will be umpired by strictly neutral officials and if the breaks go against you pay your bets and don't squak. Remember the umpires have no interest in the game at all.

But get there early if you want a seat. It's a bet that the largest crowd that ever assembled in the eastern part of the state will be there.

It looks like a good game between two evenly matched ball clubs.

May the best club win.

ATHLETICS TAKE BOTH GAMES FROM WHITE SOX

CHICAGO, Sept. 16.—(AP)—The championship Philadelphia Athletics took a tighter grip on the American league pennant today by grabbing both ends of a doubleheader from the White Sox and boosting their lead over the idle Washington Senators to eight full games.

"Lefty" Grove pitched his 27th victory of the season to win the first game, 6 to 4. In the second the A's bunched hits in the sixth and eighth innings for five-run scoring splurges and the ball game, 10 to 2.

The Athletics have but nine games to play while the Senators have 11.

AUSTEN IS LOST TO YALE TEAM WITH LEG INJURY

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 16.—(AP)—Ned Austen, first string halfback on last year's smooth-running Blue backfield, will be lost to the Yale team for the early part of the season, Coach Mal Stevens said today after he had put the 110 candidates for gridiron honors through a double workout.

Austen suffered a leg injury in a hockey game last winter and an infection developed. Today it was revealed that the wound had not healed properly and Austen was ordered to take two or three weeks' complete rest. Al Beane, a letter man of the 1929 squad, was moved up to take his place on the tentative varsity lineup. Stevens said he expected Austen would be available for the Georgia game on Oct. 11.

Today's broiling sun, reminiscent of mid-summer, caused the Blue candidates to turn scantily-clad backs on modesty and go through their strenuous two-hour afternoon workout garbed in bare essentials. Football fundamentals, punting and forward passing practice followed by signal drills constituted the day's labors. The first scrimmage, in preparation for the opening game against Maine on Sept. 27, will be held Friday.

Coach Stevens said the weakest spots on the team appeared to be at the center and ends. To remedy this he moved Ed Church, consistent ground-gaining halfback of last year's freshman team, and John Madden, a 1929 varsity backfield reserve, to the wings and sent in Tom Hawley, varsity tackle, and Everett Esselyn, frosh guard of two years ago, to bolster up Ed Loeser at the snapper-back position.

Larry Noble assistant varsity coach of last year who resigned to devote full time to his law practice in New York, appeared at the practice field today to aid Stevens in the backfield drill. He said he would help out for the next two weeks, while he was visiting in New Haven.

DARTMOUTH HAS STIFF WORKOUT IN HEAT

HANOVER, N. H., Sept. 16.—(AP)—Coach Jackson Cannell sent Dartmouth's football squad through its last two practice sessions of the fall today for college opens Thursday. Extremely hot weather bothered the candidates, who went through gruelling workouts morning and afternoon.

Ralph Maynard, of Rumford, Me., a tackle candidate unknown last year, was praised by the coaches for his work today and threatens to capture a position on the first team. Len Clark, first team halfback was laid up with a slight leg injury but the coaches expect him back in a day or two.

ST. LOUIS BEATS BROOKLYN IN TENTH TO TAKE LEAD BY A SINGLE POINT

BROOKLYN, Sept. 16.—(AP)—The St. Louis Cardinals, who came from nowhere to complicate the National league pennant race, today broke an 11-game winning streak of the Brooklyn Robins, who went away and came back, and by winning after ten innings, 1 to 0, the Cards took the lead again by one point.

Few more thrilling baseball battles have been fought in any series, crucial or otherwise. Two pitching giants, Dazzy Vance and Wild Bill Hallahan, who should demand a recount on his nickname, fought out a biting, scratching struggle, with honors even through the regulation nine innings. The Cardinals scored the vital run in the tenth and although Brooklyn came back in the last half of the final inning to fill the bases with one out, a lightning double play ended the game as the tying run was crossing the plate.

Hallahan and Vance are noted fast ball pitchers and strikeout kings; Hallahan occupies the strikeout throne at the moment, and Vance is the heir apparent. Vance won the strikeout argument today but it did him no good in the light of the late afternoon developments. Vance forced 11 Red Birds to miss third strikes while Hallahan scored four, but the Dazzler gave seven hits to five for Wild Bill.

Vance, a pitcher of uncommonly fine judgment, nodded in the tenth when he had two strikes and no balls on Andy High, opening the inning as a pinch hitter. The big fellow then fired one over the plate, trying to sneak it by, and Andy drove it to center field for two bases. Hallahan sacrificed High to third and Taylor Douthit drove him home with a single.

Brooklyn skies brightened when Wright opened the tenth for the home club by hitting a screaming double to the center field bleacher fence. Bissonette walked and Hendrick sent them both along with a bunt. Flowers went to bat for Finn and was purposely passed, filling the bases. The strategy won the game for Gabby Street's crew. Lopez hit a terrific drive to Adams at short. The ball struck his hands and bounded away but Sparky was on it like a flash and with a quick throw to Frisch, laid the foundation for a double play. Frisch threw with no lost motion to Bottomley and the game was over.

Hallahan, the Binghamton boy, absolutely confounded the Robins during the early stages of the game. He retired 20 members of the home club in order before one reached first base. Herman, the first man to get on, reached the bag on Hallahan's error.

In the eighth the Robins got two hits without getting a man to second base and in the ninth they got two more without getting a runner past the middle station.

Hendrick's single to left with one out in the eighth was the first hit. He was out stealing on a play that seemed intended as a hit and run effort but Finn did not swing at the ball. Finn then singled and was out trying to go two bases. He collided with Charley Gelbert at second and the Cardinal shortstop was stunned momentarily. Gelbert emerged from the affair with a black eye.

In the ninth Lopez opened with a single and was safe at second when Adams threw high trying to force him on Vance's intended sacrifice. Moore bunted a pop foul to Mancuso and Lopez was doubled off second. Gelbert then singled to left, sending Vance to second but Herman flied to Hafey.

The Cardinals were within inches of winning in the sixth inning. Adams had singled and advanced to third on an infield and outfield outs. With two strikes on Hafey, Adams broke for the plate and seemed about to steal home but the alert Vance threw the ball right at Hafey and when the bespectacled Chick forgot to duck, the ball hit him and the runner had to return to third. Watkins then fouled out.

Great fielding by players of both clubs protected the home plate through nine innings. Herman made a hair-raising one-hand catch in a pinch and both First Baseman Bottomley and Bissonette came up with balls that seemed to be extra-base hits as they left the bats.

A capacity crowd of 25,500 spectators crowded into Ebbets field and there will be no less at the two remaining games of the series. Managers Robinson and Street tonight were prepared to renew the battle for first place tomorrow, with Flint Rhem probably pitching for the Cardinals against Adolfo Luque for the Robins.

The game enabled Vance to draw within five strikeouts of Hallahan, even if it did not help him in his won column. He ran his total for the season to 160, while Hallahan now has 165.

TERRY AGAIN INCREASES LEAD IN BIG SIX

By The Associated Press.

The threat against Bill Terry's batting supremacy in the big six and the National league subsided a bit yesterday as the Giant slugger added another point to his mark with two hits in four times at bat, going to .405, while his rival, Babe Herman, dropped two points to .396 as he failed to get a hit in four trips to the plate. Chuck Klein and Lou Gehrig also registered one point gains, holding their tie at .384 as Klein made three hits in five tries and Gehrig hit two out of three. Al Simmons slipped badly, hitting only twice in nine attempts and losing three points while Babe Ruth dropped one point with one out of four.

MANERO WINS GLENS FALLS TOURNEY WITH 276

GLENNS FALLS, N. Y., Sept. 16—(AP)—Tony Manero today won the Glens Falls open golf tournament with a 276 for the 72 holes. He was four strokes ahead of Gene Sarazen and Bobby Cruikshank, tied in second place with 280 each.

Manero put together rounds of 67 and 69 to lead the field of more than 130 players.

Manero won a $1,000 purse. Second place was worth $500.

Joe Ford, of Wilmington, Vt., had a total of 285.

Gives Credit to Old-Timers

Sports Editor: Couillard's Baltic Sacs certainly did trim McGraw's "All Stars" Sunday on Sayles field at Baltic by the score of 10-0, a brilliant feat for Mr. Couillard to be proud of. But the question is, was the game played as it was published in last Monday's Bulletin? Not exactly so, though great credit must be given to the youthful Coady for his good pitching, allowing but three hits, and also a great deal of it must go to the players for the fine support they gave him.

This is one side of the game, but what about the other? As a man who has followed the game ever since he was able to understand and play it, I have a different idea of this game. Seated in the grand stand directly behind the catcher, I was able to see every play and it seems to me that the McGraw men not only had to play the Sacs, but also the tenth man, which was a big handicap. We do not admit that Stefon did not pitch as well as Coady, but what can you expect for a man 45 years of age to do against a man of 26 or 27? Did the Sacs hit him? Certainly they did, but not as the paper stated, "All over the lot for 16 hits." According to good score keeping, he was touched up for seven clean hits and these were well scattered, the others were given to the Sacs by errors made by McGraw's men.

It was a tough break for the veteran Stefon who, in the eyes of the crowd, pitched a wonderful game. And what more was there to help the Sacs win this game? There was the tenth man. How many of Stefon's pitched balls cut the corners of home plate and with good umpiring could not be called anything else but strikes, not counting the many that cut the center of the plate which were called balls? Still, by luck, Stefon struck out six men, and this was due to the fact that his speed was too much for the boys, as the ball had passed the plate before they had time to swing at it, and these were some of the best Sacs hitters. Coady, on the other hand, struck out far less men. Another bad feature of the game was when Tommy Charron was cornered between third and home and ran way out of the base line to tag home while Stefon was reaching for the ball to tag him, and was called safe. Another thing Tommy tried was to jump up and throw his hands up to interfere with the player covering second from getting the ball so as not to be put out, and this they did not want to act on. In both of these instances the base runner is out, according to baseball rules. Furthermore, some of the strikes the umpire called on McGraw's men were terrible, one in particular, the third strike on George Sullivan that was way over his head and required no eyeglasses to see that it was a ball by a mile, but still it was called a strike.

The Sacs can well be proud to have won this game and if Couillard expects to make baseball in this manner I think he is mistaken. My sympathy goes out to that good old-time pitcher, Stefon, who is still able to show the young boys how to pitch, and with good umpiring I think the score would have been very close. Six of the Sacs' runs were unearned, so you can judge for yourself how many they deserved.

A TRUE BASEBALL FAN.

TWELVE AMERICANS REACH SECOND ROUND AT MONTREAL

MONTREAL, Sept. 16.—(AP)—Paced by the defending champion, Helen Hicks of Hewlett, N. Y., eleven players from the United States battled their way into the second round of the Canadian women's open golf championship today. Marching with them past first round opposition were five Canadians, including the two principal Dominion threats, Ada MacKenzie of Toronto and Mrs. Alexa Stirling Fraser of Ottawa.

Altogether it was a field day for the Americans, who won all five of the international matches in which they engaged. Seventeen Americans had qualified for the first round and the six eliminated were put out by opponents from their own country.

Miss Hicks, who with Mrs. Fraser scored 74 to lead the qualifying round yesterday, defeated Mrs. J. Dagenais of Montreal in easy fashion, 5 and 3, while another strong American contender, Maureen Orcutt of New York, eliminated another New Yorker, Mrs. Leo Federman, by the convincing margin of 7 and 5.

In the international matches, Mrs. R. C. Lake, New York, defeated Mrs. Vera Hutchings of Vancouver at the 19th green, which Mrs. Hutchings three-putted; Fritzi Stifel of Wheeling, W. V., disposed of Mrs. D. Wanklyn, Montreal; Bernice Wall, Oshkosh, eliminated Eileen Kinsella, Montreal, and Peggy Wattles, Buffalo, N. Y., put out Mme. Vagliano, France, one up.

The two Canadian threats both were forced to display their best game to survive. Mrs. Fraser eliminated Dora Virtue of Montreal, one up, and Miss MacKenzie also was carried to the home hole before she could shake off Mrs. Harold Soper, Montreal, two up.

Other Americans who survived the first round were: Frances Williams, Allentown, Pa.; Mrs. Harley Higbie, Detroit; Mrs. H. A. Martelle, Hartford, Conn.; Edith Quier, Reading, Pa.; and Marion Bennett, New Britain, Conn.

Tomorrow's pairings were:

Miss Hicks vs. Mrs. Lake; Mrs. Fraser vs. Cecile Smith, Toronto; Miss Orcutt vs. Miss Williams; Mrs. Higbie vs. Miss Stifel; Miss Wattles vs. Mrs. Martelle; Miss MacKenzie vs. Mrs. E. W. Whittington, Toronto; Miss Quier vs. Marjorie Kirkham, Montreal and Miss Wall vs. Miss Bennett.

JONES AND PARTNER WIN EXHIBITION FROM PROS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—(AP)—Bobby Jones and Roland MacKenzie, amateurs, defeated MacDonald Smith and Fred McLeod, pros, one up, in an 18-hole exhibition golf match today at the Columbia Country club.

Jones and his partner won the match on the final hole, when Smith missed an eight-foot putt for a par four. The match was played through a rainstorm.

The Atlanta American and British open champion stopped over here today en route to Philadelphia for the American amateur tournament.

The scores:
Jones, 35-36—71.
MacKenzie, 38-35—73.
Smith, 35-34—69.
McLeod, 36-37—73.

Wauregan Indies Defeat Chepachette

The Wauregan Independents defeated the hard-hitting Chepatchette Fire team in a very hard-fought game by the score of 4-2, on Sunday. Messier, pitching for the Indies, hurled a very good game, getting 11 strikeouts and allowing six hits. His opponent held the Indies to nine hits and got nine strikeouts. The Firemen, in their last time at bat, had the tying scores on bases and one out, but a very fast double play by the Indies sent them home defeated.

Next Sunday the Indies play the Blue Caps of Putnam and are out to win.

The Indies are out of a game for this coming Saturday and wish to book a game to be played out of town with any fast team in Eastern Connecticut. For further arrangements call 872-13 and ask for Manager Deloye.

BOXERS TO BE BARRED FOR BOUTS IN NON-MEMBER STATES

OMAHA, Nebr., Sept. 16.—(AP)—A resolution providing for suspension of boxers participating in contests held in states other than those affiliated with the National Boxing association, was passed the closing session of the organization tonight. The action, by which the association hopes to obtain control over the fistic profession in all states, was sponsored by Stanley Isaacs of Cincinnati, former president.

States which signed up on the convention floor as members of the Wrestling association were Alabama, Illinois, Louisiana, Kentucky, Mississippi, Maryland, Missouri, Oklahoma, Michigan, Connecticut and Nebraska.

The resolution reads in effect:

"After Jan. 1, any boxer that performs in New York, California, Pennsylvania or Massachusetts (not members of the N. B. A.) will not be used in the N. B. A. member states."

Commenting that New York at present is the center of the fight industry, Isaacs said "either New York will have all the boxers or we (the N. B. A.) will.

"If we all stick together it will work," he continued. "These states, I think, will come in and join the association. You must have a central body controlling boxing or you will have no boxing at all."

Passage of the resolution was unanimous.

GRIESCHEIMER HAS HIGH GUN IN TAFTVILLE SHOOT

Geo. Griescheimer of Baltic, with a score of 1106 made a very fine showing in the championship match for the medal donated by John Kaufmann, at Taftville, Sunday. There is to be a new bar added each year to this medal with the score and year engraved on it.

John Kaufmann ran way below his average as he made second place with a score of 1066. Bradford and Palmer also made a good showing in this match. The weather conditions were not very favorable to good shooting.

The scores are:

Geo. Griescheimer, 1106; John Kaufmann, 1066; John Bradford, 1039; Chas. Palmer, 1054; Harry Sargent, 1011; Lawrence Krauss, 960; Dri Lawhon, 947.

TWO TIE FOR LOW GROSS IN ONE-DAY TOURNEY

NEW BRITAIN, Sept. 16.—(AP)—The toss of a coin today gave Mrs. F. W. White, of the Hartford Golf club, the prize for low gross at the one-day tournament of the Connecticut Women's Golf association over the Shuttle Meadow course, here. In the play over the 18 holes, she tied with Mrs. Charles H. Sherwood, of Sequin, with 94 strokes.

Low net honors were won by Mrs. Frank Doyle, of Mill River, whose 25-stroke handicap brought a 97 gross down to 72. Mrs. S. B. Perkins, of Sequin, and Miss Martha Chamberlain, of Shuttle Meadow, tied for second place with net scores of 75. Mrs. Perkins won the toss. She had taken a gross of 96 with a 21-stroke handicap to Miss Chamberlain's 91 gross and 16-stroke handicap.

Mrs. Raymond Ellis, of Hartford, won the 18-hole putting contest, negotiating the greens in 34. She also tied with Mrs. H. O. White, New Haven, in the approaching and putting contest, but conceded the prize to her opponent.

A 220-yard drive by Mrs. B. Scott, Greenfield Hills, won the driving contest.

GALLANT FOX GOES OUT OF CLASS IN GOLD CUP RACE

NEW YORK, Sept. 16—(AP)—With the three-year-old title and the money winning championship safely tucked away, William Woodward's Gallant Fox steps out of his class for the second time this year tomorrow in the $10,000 jockey gold cup at two miles—the longest race of his career. Unlike his other appearances he will have only one horse to beat, A. C. Bostwick's Yarn, also a three year old, but considered to have very little chance of turning back the Fox and his great riding partner, Earl Sande.

Both the Fox and Yarn will pack 114 pounds tomorrow, and there may be an added starter, as second and third money is worth battling for.

If there is any betting on the race, Gallant Fox should be one to 100. The numbers turned around would be fair odds on Yarn, which showed speed in running third in the Lawrence realization, but has never indicated he was in the class of the three-year-old champion.

N. B. A. Champions

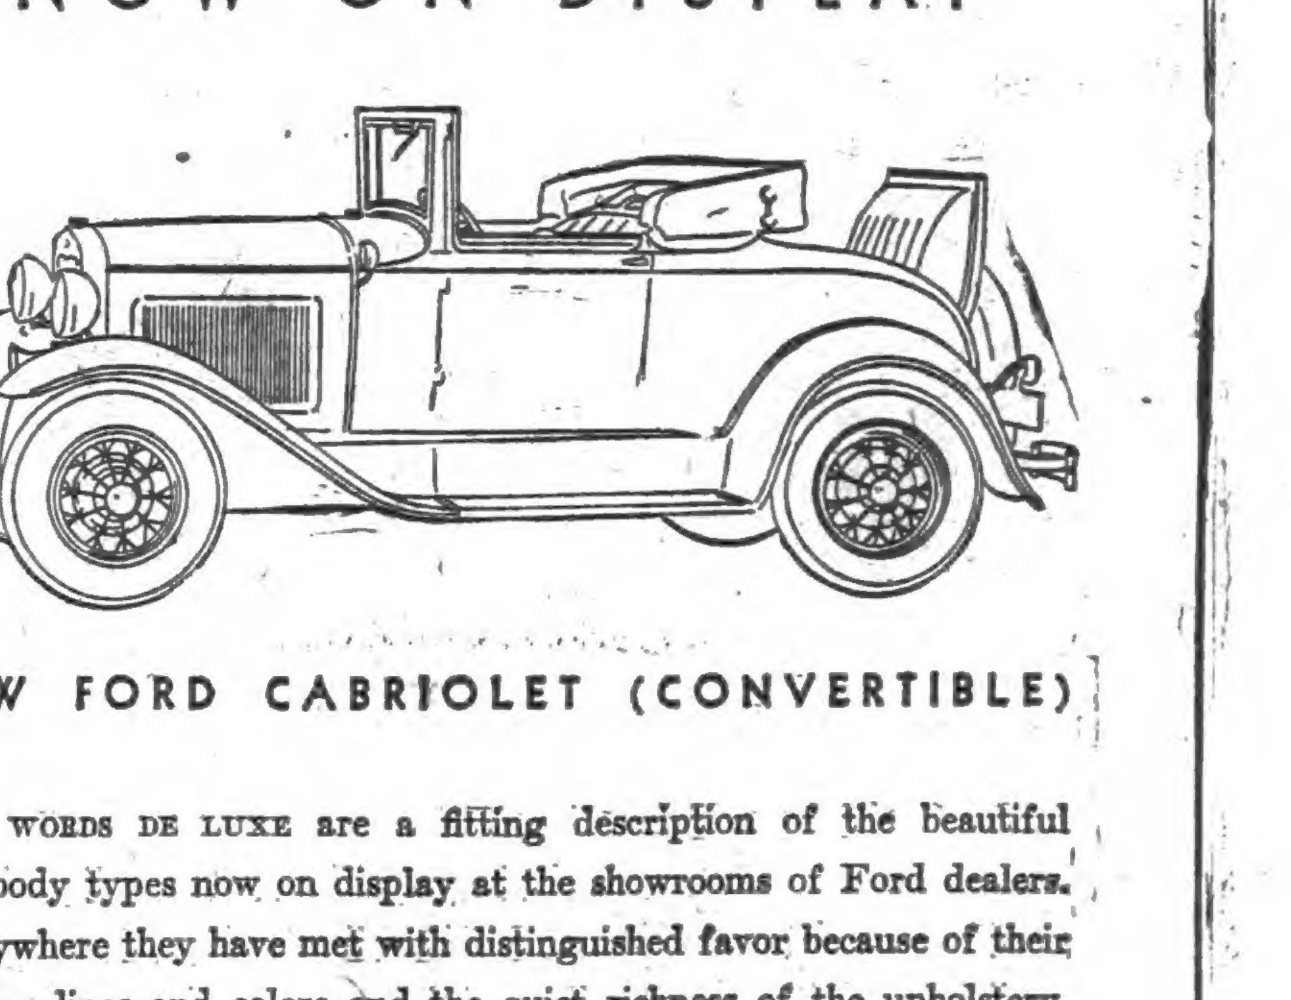
OMAHA, Nebr., Sept. 16.—(AP)—Following is the list of prize fight champions as recognized by the National Boxing association in its annual convention here yesterday:

Heavyweight—Max Schmeling, Germany.
Light-Heavyweight—Maxie Rosenbloom.
Middleweight—Title vacant; Dave Shade, Rene Devos, Len Harvey, Harry Smith, leading candidates.
Welterweight—Freeman.
Junior Welterweight—Jackie Kid Berg.
Lightweight—Al Singer.

BEAUTIFUL

New Ford De Luxe Bodies

NOW ON DISPLAY



NEW FORD CABRIOLET (CONVERTIBLE)

THE WORDS DE LUXE are a fitting description of the beautiful new body types now on display at the showrooms of Ford dealers. Everywhere they have met with distinguished favor because of their striking lines and colors and the quiet richness of the upholstery, trimming and appointments.

These new de luxe bodies are offered in addition to the standard Ford line and include the De Luxe Roadster, De Luxe Phaeton, De Luxe Sedan, De Luxe Coupe, Town Sedan and Convertible Cabriolet.

The De Luxe Roadster and De Luxe Phaeton are upholstered in genuine Bedouin grain leather, in tan harmonizing with the swagger tops. The spare wheel is carried forward on the left. The new colors for these two types are Raven Black, Washington Blue, and Stone Brown. The wheels are finished in a complementary color.

The De Luxe Sedan, De Luxe Coupe and Town Sedan are upholstered in soft luxurious mohair or Bedford cord, optional with the purchaser. Wide, comfortable rumble seat is standard equipment in the De Luxe Roadster and the Convertible Cabriolet.

Plan to see these new de luxe bodies this week and arrange for a demonstration. You will find much to admire in their sprightly appearance and the high quality so evident in every detail

Estate of Emma J. Doust. Matter of court citation continued to next court session.

SEVERAL MOTOR VEHICLE CASES SETTLED AT STONINGTON

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, Sept. 16 — Violation cases of Connecticut automobile laws were before Judge William A. Wilcox of Pawcatuck in the Tuesday morning regular session of Stonington town court, with prosecutor, Henry P. Hammacher of Mystic.

Frank H. Schneidermann of 48 Wolcott street, Dorchester, Mass., charged with auto speeding on the Boston Post road on Sept. 8th, had his cash bond of $25 called and declared forfeited when he failed to appear in court.

George H. Babcock of 209 W 8th street, Plainfield, N. J., and summer visitor at his Watch Hill summer home "El Reposo", also had his cash bond of $25 called and declared forfeited when he failed to appear in court in response to a summons issued by State Police Officer Arthur Whitmarsh, being charged with speeding on the Boston Post road on Sept. 7th.

James E. Howarth, 24, of 1109 North Main street, Fall River, Mass., plead guilty to driving his auto at a rate of speed greater than reasonable and proper on Sept. 7th on the Boston Post road. State Police Officer Whitmarsh testified that in company with Officer Swanson they were parked near Aunt Betty's Pantry and the accused passed at the rate of between 55 and 60 miles per hour. He was followed and arrested in Solomonville. Prosecutor Hammacher stated that there was no accident and recommended the usual fine. Being found guilty he was sentenced to pay a fine of $10 and costs totalling $22.95, which he paid and was discharged.

Walter Cheesebro, 19, driver of an Elliott and Watrous motor truck of New London, had Dr. J. H. Weeks appointed his guardian ad litem. With a waivure of reading of the complaint a plea of guilty was entered for him. Prosecutor Hammacher informed the court that the Reo truck was without reflectors and that it was 2½ inches over the minimum 8 foot width which a recent Connecticut ruling in a May bulletin stated should have lights on the outside edges. In this technical violation a fine of $5.00 and costs was imposed with fine remitted by Judge Wilcox on the payment of $12.95 costs.

Morris Morosine, 21, of Mystic, was before the court on two counts: the first of driving an auto on the Boston Post road on Sept. 13th without an operator's license. The second of failure to obey traffic signals. Police Officer William H. Noyes of Mystic testified to the automobile being driven between the monument and telephone exchange in Mystic and autos were passed and other violations of law were made. He was found guilty and sentenced to pay a fine of $10 on the first count and $5 on the second. Fines and costs, totalling $28.45 were paid.

Raymond Chester Jennings, 20, of Mystic, had Dr. Weeks for a guardian and Prosecutor Hammacher told the court that Officer Noyes apprehended the accused on Sept. 11th while driving without a license. Officer Noyes also reported that the young man had given trouble to New Haven railroad police by committing unlawful acts. Prosecutor Hammacher said the boy's parent had died by the wilful act of another in connection with the Bogue case in West Mystic and that an uncle had taken an interest in the young man and would have to pay the fine. Being found guilty a fine of $10 was imposed and remitted with costs totalling $12.66 to be worked out and paid for by the defendant.

George E. Miner, 64, of Old Mystic, was again before the court on a charge of intoxication when arrested by State Officer Arthur Whitmarsh. The accused said that his neighbors had been troublesome and bothered him but upon his calling the state police, they had held him. On the prosecutor's recommendation a term of 10 days in New London county jail was imposed. A mittimus was issued and the defendant taken to jail by Officer Whitmarsh. Costs totalled $16.45.

Joseph Syracuse, 20, of Mystic, had a friend, Aimand Radicom, named as guardian, and a plea of guilty was entered to a charge of disturbance and breach of the peace on Sept. 12th. At the Rossie Velvet mill the defendant had struck the complaining witness, C. Wesley Bradley, and had knocked him down, whereupon he was discharged. Outside he waited and at noontime had grabbed Bradley by the neck and struck him between the eyes with his fist. He was found guilty and sentenced to pay a fine of $10 and costs which totalled $26.55, which he paid.

Continuances of one week were granted in the following:

Edwin O'Connell of Bingham, Me., summoned by State Police Officer Arthur Whitmarsh for reckless driving on Sept. 4th on the Boston Post road.

Witold Domanouski of Jersey City, N. J., charged on Sept. 4th with reckless driving of an auto on the Boston Post road.

E. V. Rust, of Philadelphia, given a court summons by State Police Officer Frederick O. Johnson, for reckless driving on the Boston Post road on Sept. 8th. Bonds of $50 cash have been posted in all three cases.

MISS PAPE SUMMONED TO APPEAR IN WESTERLY COURT

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, Sept. 16—Miss Emmie Pape of Germantown, Pa., driver of the automobile on the Boston Post road on Monday afternoon in which Miss Bessie Goldsmith, 30, of 906 South 58th street, Philadelphia, received injuries resulting in her death at the Westerly hospital, has received a court summons of driving an automobile so as to cause the death of a person, to appear in third district court next Friday. Attorney from New York and an insurance claim agent were in Westerly on Tuesday investigating the fatal accident. James Stone, 10 Pelham street, Newport, driver of the other auto in which were a number of sailors going from New London to Newport, has also been given a court summons for next Friday. Patrolman George L. Madison was the investigating officer, and found the autos had been in a head-on collision when the Pape-driven auto was proceeding from Wakefield to New London returning to Philadelphia from a vacation trip. Miss Goldsmith was secretary of a Philadelphia medical society. In the auto crash neither Stone nor any of the sailors were injured, but Miss Pape, who was slightly injured collapsed at the Elm Tree Inn when she learned of her companion's death and was taken to the hospital for treatment.

Barn Burned at Clarks Falls

The burning of the barn of Walter Bradley at Clarks Falls in the early hours of Tuesday morning and the threatened destruction of the general store, post office, and surrounding buildings was the cause of telephone calls for assistance being sent to the Pawcatuck and Westerly fire departments. The pumper of the Pawcatuck fire company, called first, was used to pump water from the river through some 900 feet of fire hose and prevented the spread of the flames. The two pumpers of the Westerly fire department were not used, having been called as a precautionary measure. Residents of the vicinity expressed their deep appreciation of the prompt response of the Pawcatuck and Westerly firefighters. The whistle alarm of the Westerly fire station sounded the 33 number for an out of the district call about 5:45 a. m.

Deborah chapter, No. 9, Order of the Eastern Star, Mrs. Jennie W. Mitchell, worthy matron and Gustave Brucker, worthy patron, held their first regular meeting in Masonic hall on Tuesday evening, following the summer adjournment for the months of July and August. Refreshments were served in the banquet hall of the armory of Narragansett commandery, No. 27, K. T., at the close of the meeting.

Miss Mary D. Godfrey

Miss Mary Davis Godfrey, 40 died at her home, 6 Brown street, Monday night after an illness with septic sore throat. Miss Brown was born in Mystic, town of Stonington, July 5, 1890, the daughter of Fannie A. Brown and the late John H. Godfrey. She is survived by her mother and two brothers, Frank of Broton Heights and John of Burnetts Corners, a half brother, George of New London. The passing of Miss Godfrey is extremely sad as she cared for her mother, who is now left alone. She was industrious, loved her home and was a kind neighbor and sincere friend.

Fred W. Smart Dies Suddenly

Fred W. Smart, 81, died suddenly at his home in Old Mystic Tuesday at 1:45 p. m. He collapsed and Dr. W. H. Gray of Mystic was called, arriving quickly and found him breathing but he expired in a few minutes. The body was removed to the funeral home in Mystic. Mr. Smart was born in Exeter, R. I., and came to Old Mystic when young and married Mary Robinson, she died Feb. 18, 1929. He is survived by the following sons and daughters: Fred, of Norwich, Maud of New York, Mrs. Nellie Sebastian, Miss Genevieve, Mrs. Mary Oaks, Joseph, Evelyn and Leana of Old Mystic, Mrs. Ada Burrill of Westerly and by four grandchildren, two sisters, Mrs. Eliza White, Mrs. Mary Smith and a brother George Smart, all of Providence. Mr. Smart was employed by the Mystic Woolen Co., which plant is closed at present.

STONINGTON

At a tea given in her honor Saturday afternoon, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Mason announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Lucy Mason, to Lieut. Louis Neusse, of Milwaukee, Wis.

Rev. P. W. Back, pastor of the First Baptist church, left Tuesday for Hartford to attend a retreat for Connecticut pastors, held at the Hartford seminary.

Miss Evelyn Meuse has returned here to her home after undergoing an operation for appendicitis at Lawrence-Memorial hospital.

Union Missionary Meeting

The Stonington Union Missionary meeting was held in the church parlors on Tuesday morning at 10:30. In the afternoon at 2:30, Miss Howard, of Hartford, was the speaker and Miss Bucklin, who has charge of the Americanization, also spoke. Lunch was served at noon.

Mrs. Evangeline O'Connor returned to New York Monday, after spending the summer in the borough.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Davidson, of Greenfield, Mass., were week-end visitors here with relatives.

Mrs. Emma Kelly is visiting relatives in Warren, Mass.

Mr. and Mrs. Merton Clark have returned to Worcester, after spending a vacation of two weeks here with relatives.

Miss Alice Powers was a week-end visitor in Newport, R. I.

Mr. and Mrs. James Harvey were visitors in Putnam Sunday.

An exhibit which will show the development of plant, animal and finally human life on earth through a period of 1,500,000,000 years is planned at the Field Museum.

NO APPETITE?
MAYBE IT'S WORMS

LOSS OF APPETITE is just one of the symptoms. Worms are much more common than most mothers think. See whether your little one is troubled with grinding of teeth, picking the nose, crossness, crying in sleep, offensive breath, loss of weight, nausea or general restlessness. Any one of these signs may be your warning that worms are present.

Wise mothers take no chances with these dangerous and disgusting childhood pests. Even if worms are only suspected they give the child

DAY'S LOSSES ELIMINATED IN RALLY IN THE LAST HOUR OF THE STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—(AP)—The stock market rallied in the last hour of a quiet session today, but the recovery did little more than eliminate the day's losses. It was the fifth successive day in which the dominant trend had been downward.

Sentiment seemed influenced to an important degree by the movement of grains, for the shorts sold stocks most actively while corn and wheat were easing and shares only showed recuperative powers on the afternoon upturn in those commodities. The covering that appeared in stocks when wheat soared 3 1-2 cents to 4 cents a bushel from the day's lows received some further impetus from the Washington announcement of a $38,000,000 estimated increase in August exports over July.

Volume of trading picked up a little on the decline, especially in the forenoon when some commission house selling was uncovered. Shorts, who had been paying their respects to the motion picture and radio shares, as well as to some of the old line industrial favorites, soon put out new lines, selecting the chain store and farm implement stocks. They were somewhat more successful with the special groups than with U. S. Steel, American Can, Westinghouse Electric, General Electric and American Telephone, although losses of a point and more appeared in these favorites.

Sears Roebuck, Montgomery Ward, Case and International Harvester yielded 2 to 4 points before meeting support. Grigsby Grunow, sagging to 6 3-4, another new low, Real Silk Hosiery, off nearly 4, and Atlas Powder were other soft spots. On the other hand, bull pool operations went forward in Kroger Grocery and Safeway Stores, which rose 3 and 4 points, respectively.

Business news was generally featureless. Reports from the northwest indicated that the movement of wheat had reached about 4,000,000 bushels daily on four large carriers, foreshadowing an improvement in railway operating incomes. Missouri-Kansas-Texas president said his road would make a better showing this month, predicting that the last four months of the year would exceed last year's record for the same period.

Bearish professionals stressed the point that the market has been extremely lazy on the recent rallies and they suggested that interests which had worked for the advance had become tired and were liquidating. It was noticeable, however, that support was waiting for the highest grade shares and this was in turn discouraging to the bear faction. As the rally got under way, the market was extremely dull.

Money was comfortable and there was no noticeable congestion from the quarterly financing by the government and the September income tax payments. Call loans renewed at 2 1-2 per cent, but dropped to 2 shortly after noon.

The advance in wheat after the September future had come within an eighth of a cent of yesterday's post-war low reflected an oversold condition in that market. Although final quotations were off from the top, prices ranged from 3 to 3 1-2 cents net higher. Corn firmed in sympathy and in response to a strong cash market, rising 1-8 to 1 cent. Cotton closed steady, 1 to 11 points, although the old January contract closed 2 points off.

In general, stocks made narrow moves on the day, U. S. Steel, Electric Power & Light, American Power & Light, Eastman Kodak, Foster Wheeler and Union Carbide showed gains of about a point and there were fractional advances in General Electric, American Telephone, General Motors, Westinghouse Electric and Radio.

International Harvester's 4-point drop was halved and so was Montgomery Ward's 2-point decline. Sears Roebuck and Johns Manville finished fractionally lower. American Water Works was strong, rallying a couple of points. J. I. Case closed 1 3-4 higher and Diamond Match soared 5.

Foreign exchange rates firmed. The Spanish peseta was soft.

WALL STREET BRIEFS

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—(AP)—Offering is to be made tomorrow of $5,000,000 Los Angeles, Cal., 4 1-4 per cent water bonds, due 1931 to 1970.

The daily gold statement of the New York Federal Reserve bank today showed receipts of $217,000 from Brazil and $167,000 from Argentina. There were no exports.

Stockholders of the American Eagle Aircraft Corp at the annual meeting to be held in Kansas City, Oct. 6, will be asked to vote on a proposal to reduce the present capitalization from 2,000,000 shares of no par common stock to 200,000 shares of no par common, to be effected by the exchange of 1 share of new common for 10 shares of the old. The stockholders also will vote on a resolution to authorize the corporation to issue $500,000 6 1-2 per cent, 15-year sinking fund debenture gold bonds.

THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—(AP)—The curb market finished narrowly irregular today. A rally in the final hour saved many pivotal issues from sinking to new lows on the current selling movement which set in last week. Changes were fractional for the most part, with few outstanding examples of strength or weakness, except among inactive industrial issues.

The trend throughout most of the session was toward lower levels. There were several ineffectual efforts to stage a recovery, but advances brought out a volume of offerings sufficient to force a decline. Late buying principally attributed to covering operations by shorts carried prices to the best levels of the session. The volume of business totaled 349,600 shares.

Bears, concentrating on utilities, found Electric Bond & Share, American & Foreign Power warrants, United Light & Power A, Central States Electric, American Super Power open to attack. Electric Bond & Share sagged 2 points, and American & Foreign Power more than 1 during the session. At the finish the former was off only 1-4 and the latter was firm. The others were little changed. Short covering carried Public Utility Holding up more than a point. Brazilian Traction moved against the trend, closing at 36 5-8, up 1 1-8.

As in the previous session, oil shares were less affected by the selling movement. Cosden and Humble gained about 1-2 point each. Cities Service closed net unchanged, while Standard of Indiana, Gulf, Vacuum and Standard of Nebraska, were slightly lower.

There was little activity in the specialty group. Technicolor was the feature. Duplicating its performance on Monday, it reached another new low in moderate trading, closing at 20 3-4, a net loss of 2 1-4 points. Translux lost 1-2. Deere moved up more than a point on thin buying. Dresser Manufacturing was strong. American Cyanamid B, and Anglo-Chilean Nitrate were soft spots.

Price movement of investment and holding companies' shares was very narrow. The late rally carried Goldman Sachs, Pennroad and Shenandoah slightly higher. Aviation stocks were irregular. National Aviation was strong. Western Air Express sagged 2 points.

COTTON

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—(AP)—Futures closed steady, 11 points higher to 2 lower. Spot quiet; middling 10.95.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, Sept. 16.—(AP)—Soaring almost 4c a bushel as the result of a buyers' stampede, wheat today suddenly jerked backward at the last, losing part of the gain. The market showed evidence of having become greatly over-sold with many traders nervous about a sharp let-up in rural deliveries of wheat in Canada. There was also much concern apparent relative to advices that the 1930 wheat crop in France would amount to only 208,000,000 bushels and would be of poor quality, indicating unavoidable big imports.

Closing quotations on wheat were unsettled, 1 7-8a2 5-8c higher than yesterday's finish. Corn closed 1-2a 1-4c up, oats 3-4a1 5-8c advanced, and provisions varying from 10c decline to a rise of 7c.

Provisions averaged higher, largely as a consequence of a bigger decrease than was looked for in Chicago stocks of lard.

LAW GETTING AFTER CARELESS DOG-OWNERS

State Officer Genung of the domestic animals department of Hartford, was in town Tuesday, checking up on the dog situation, as the result of several complaints made this week to W. R Palmer, dog warden for Griswold

Tuesday morning Lionel Jarvis, a Glasgo child was bitten quite severely on his hip by an airedale owned by James Stearns. As a precautionary measure the dog will be quarantined for several weeks. A roving German police dog has been making trouble in the borough, but so far has been successful in eluding the officer. This dog resembles a wolf and acts like one, when attempts are made to approach him. Both officers were on a still hunt for the animal Tuesday. One complaint is that roving dogs are driving hens from their nests on a farm, and eating the eggs. A general clean-up is promised of all dogs which are being kept illegally, and of those which are roaming at large.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Edward J. Farrell

The many friends of Mrs. Sarah Murray Farrell, wife of Edward J. Farrell of Wauregan, will be sorry to learn of her death, which occurred at her home in Wauregan at 5 o'clock, Tuesday morning. She has been in failing health for some time, but as only her nearest relatives and friends realized the seriousness of her condition, her death comes as a great shock to many in Wauregan and Jewett City. Mrs. Farrell was born in New York state but her earlier years were spent in Packerville and Central Village. For years she lived in Jewett City until her marriage with Edward Farrell of Wauregan. She has been a frequent visitor at the home of Mrs. E. H. Hiscox, an intimate friend for years. She was essentially devoted to her home, but much interested in the happenings in the world, being widely read in the best of literature, and possessing a retentive memory. To her husband she was an ideal help-mate, and to her best friends her relationship has been one never to be forgotten. Besides her husband she is survived by two brothers, Martin in Akron, Ohio, and Dennis, of East Providence, R. I.

Selects Light Type

The borough electric light commission has selected the style of lamp for the white way, a sample of which is to be seen on the pole in front of the Rioux block. It is artistic and substantial and is of the flambeau pattern.

During the first week of the present month, on three nights in succession there was a near-frost all through this section, with the mercury down to 40. At that time one of the local weather sharps declared that if we could get through the full moon and into the last quarter on the 15th, there would be a few weeks of warm weather. His predictions have proven sound, with summer temperatures to back them up. Tuesday, during the afternoon the red mark got up to 86

Raymond Campbell, of Pachaug, has taken a cake diet of late, and likes it. He won the 13-pound guess loaf at the grange fair. His figures were 13 pounds 8 ounces.

A couple of local men returning recently from Canada, report a discouraging outlook on the wet question. While there they agreed to try a glass of that famous Canadian ale, which the papers tell so much about. They did just that and returned to tell that a better brand was to be had right in town. Score one for Griswold.

A. A. A. to Play H. N. S.

Local baseball enthusiasts are anticipating the banner contest of the season, when the A. A. A. meets the H. N. S. in a series of three or five games. There are to be presented a number of new attractions among whom will be DeYoung the new Acco pitcher. He was a recent rookie with the Brooklyn Robins, and did some mound work for the Paterson, N. J. league team. DeYoung has a wonderful smoke ball, so wonderful indeed that those who saw the Sunday's game with the Worcester team, declare it to be their honest belief that with DeYoung striking out the opposing batsmen, one, two, three, some of the time he didn't throw the ball at all, at least the men with the stick couldn't locate the pill as being anywhere around in their vicinity.

Arthur J. Hamel, fatally injured by a baseball in a game of pitch and catch in Poquetanuck, Sunday, was a grandson of Mrs. Ethier, of Green avenue of this place. He lived in Jewett City until a year and a half ago.

The members of Faith chapter O. E. S. are planning to carry jellies and preserves to the Masonic home in Wallingford on Grand Master's day, Saturday. The donations are being left at the home of Mrs. J. T. Stewart on Mathewson street.

Norwich Man a Good Guesser

The contest at Pachaug fair on guessing the number of revolutions made in two minutes on a victrola record in Charles Ruszenas department, resulted in guesses of anywhere from 18 to 5,000. The correct number 78, was guessed by Frank Morgan of Pachaug and Paul Bigda of Norwich.

Slater library is closed for a few days.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—(P)—High grade domestic issues held a firm trend in a quiet session of the bond market today and a few issues established new highs for the year. The volume of business improved but the heavy volume of new offerings with which the week has started apparently detracted from the activity in the listed market

Buying was of a very selective nature, but demand was sufficient to carry the market to a new high for the year in the composite average of 30 bonds. The price movement was irregular.

Activity in the railroad group centered in issues that rank slightly under the best. Canadian Northern 4 1-2s were in demand and reached a new high, and closed unchanged. New peaks were registered also by Big Four 4 1-2s (Cairo division), Hocking Valley 4 1-2s, and Buffalo, Rochester & Pittsburgh 4 1-2s. Pennsylvania 4 1-2s duplicated their recent year's peak. The construction 4s of the same company and Allegheny 5s were weak spots.

Several utility issues profited from good buying. Columbia Gas 5s and Laclede Gas Light 5s reached new highs, and other strong bonds were Denver Gas & Electric 5s, Detroit Edison 5s, New York Gas & Electric 5s and Postal Telegraph 5s, the latter up 1 point.

More interest developed for some high grade industrial issues. McKesson & Robbins 5 1-2s were very active and firm. By-Products Coke 5 1-2s attained a new high. American Sugar Refining 5s, Armour & Co. 5 1-2s, National Dairy 5 1-4s, and Wheeling Steel 4 1-2s advanced. Central Steel 8s rose 4 1-2 points. Ajax Rubber 8s dropped nearly 5.

German government issues regained some of the ground lost in the selling movement yesterday. The 5 1-2s closed 5-8 net higher, and the 7s advanced 1-1. Some municipal and industrial issues showed weakness, notably Berlin 6s, Berlin Electric 6s and 6 1-2s, and United Steel Works 6 1-2s. In the Latin American group Mexican defaulted issues sagged. Brazilian 8s and Buenos Aires 6 1-2s were strong. Argentine 6s sold off 3-4.

The stock privilege group suffered from selling inspired by the heaviness of stocks. In a large turnover, International Telephone 4 1-2s sagged 3-4. Pathe warrant 7s lost 2 points. Lautario Nitrate 6s were weak.

Offerings will be made tomorrow of $5,000,000 4 1-4 Water bonds of the City of Los Angeles, Calif., and $1,500,000 Tarrant County, Texas, district No. 1, 4 1-2 per cent water bonds.

Martin Openshaw, commercial vice-president of the Pilot Radio and Tube Corp., said that the company will add 2,000 workers to its payroll at its Lawrence, Mass., plant during the next six or seven months. He said that at the rate orders are being received and with the expectation of doubling the orders, "I can readily say that soon there will be but a modicum of unemployment in Lawrence."

CURB MARKET

NOANK

Dexter Holliday, of East Greenwich, R. I., spent the week end at his home on Sylvan avenue.

Capt. Henry L. Specht, of Boston, has been spending several days at his home on Spring street.

Miss Ann Robertson spent the week end with friends in Providence.

Mrs. James Mulvey has returned to New London.

HANDLING SNAKES A TRICK GEO. REID OF NOANK SAYS

George Reid is a new snake charmer in the village of Noank—the only fellow who can talk to a snake, it does not make any difference how big they are, it is all the same to the local charmer. Recently he went out in the woods to get some wild grapes to be used to make jelly for the winter (by all signs expected to be the worst on record.) While Happy Reid was picking the grapes, looking down on the ground, he saw a monster black snake with a dash of white under its neck and with a mad look in its eyes. It was already to spring at the grape gatherer. But George said, "Come, old boy, give me your tongue to shake with!" The snake did and it seemed that George knows how to tame snakes, and in a few minutes he was talking to Mr. Snake, that seemed not afraid but had a happy look in the eyes. The new snake charmer took out of his pocket a rule and said, "Well, let's get the length so I can tell them down at the gas station how many feet you are!" If the rule tells the truth, that snake was nine feet long and that sure is some size for around this section. It must have been 20 years old.

The snake, without a home, left the graper and went out of sight so he could get a bushel of grapes and call it a day.

"Never be afraid of snakes," the village charmer says, "for they will run first; just stop and talk to them. But you've got to use some words that will throw their mind the other way. That old trick was taught to me by a snake oil seller out in St. Paul, Minn., where caterpillars are army mules and selling the oil is as fast as hail stones in the summer time. He told me how to talk to a snake and the words that would almost make them cry. Gee! I was some happy to get them! I could sit all night and hear that big giant selling oil and making fun like Bringing Up Father in the paper! Once I was picking raspberries and was whistling along, when I felt something biting me in the back. It was like a pin sticking into me. I found it was a rattlesnake biting on all 14 by the sound. Giving him, or her, the words, the rattlesnake got scared and beat it away. If one of them gets a good hold, you will kiss this world good bye, with your toes sticking up! I had some tobacco put right on the bite and that took the poison out But I was laid up in bed for a week, yet I am here to tell it. That is the closest I ever come to passing away.

"Now a few remarks on how to handle snakes: Pick them up quick and always grab them by the neck, because a snake has got to turn around before he will bite, and if you get bit, put tobacco right on, that takes the poison right out. The snake, the charmer fears the most, is a red snake, the kind that make their home around the rocks of Lantern Hill. They are deadly poison and tricky, also quick as a cat. I won't run away from them, but I put on rubber gloves. To talk to snakes and pick them up is a trick, too; for a snake knows when a person is afraid of it just like a skunk. If ever you scare a skunk, stand from under! It is my hobby to catch snakes, big or small."

MONTVILLE

Many of the members of Montville post, No. 114, American Legion, will tune in on their radio Thursday evening, the 18th, and listen to one of the greatest hook-ups in radio history when the National Broadcasting Co. broadcasts the pre-convention plans. The convention will be held in Boston Oct. 6-9. Commander Henry W. Jermias of the local post has requested that all members who are planning to attend this convention will tune in Thursday night.

The sum of $40 was made on the supper held in Uncasville M. E. church parlors Monday, under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid society, which proved a success. The committee, headed by Mrs. R. W. Johnson, comprised Mrs. Fred Rogers, Mrs. J. Y. Miller, Mrs. Burt Hewitt, Mrs. Albert Kellogg and Mrs. John Botham.

Invited to Convention

Invitations have been received by local members of the Woman's Christian Temperance union to the annual county convention of the W. C. T. U., which will be held at the New London Y. W. C. A. building Thursday, Sept. 18, beginning at 10 a. m.

Mrs. M. J. Pont, of Pequot, is a patient at Dr. Lena hospital, New London, where she will be operated on this (Wednesday) morning for appendicitis.

Peter Clark, of Palmertown, who was operated on at a hospital in New London, Tuesday morning, is reported to be resting as comfortably as is possible.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

The Head of the Home

Who struts and boasts and swaggers
'round
Fools but himself it will be found.
—Old Mother Nature.

Little Miss Frisky was now little Mrs. Impy. A very pretty little Chipmunk she was and Impy was very proud of her. She was even more proud of Impy for you know his coat was coal black and a black-coated Chipmunk is seldom seen. It had pleased Impy that Mrs. Impy had been so pleased with his home. To be sure, she had changed the entrance. Impy had to admit that it was better hidden than the entrance he had made. Otherwise, she had been quite satisfied.

Now that he had a home and a mate Impy the black Chipmunk felt very important. Yes, indeed, he felt very important. He strutted. Why shouldn't he strut? Was he not the head of a home? He thought he was anyway. Yes, indeed, he thought he was very much the head of a home.

He and Mrs. Impy had been living together happily for several weeks and Impy was not aware that there had been any changes to amount to anything. To be sure, he discovered that Mrs. Impy had enlarged one of his storerooms; but he thought nothing of this. In fact, he decided it was an improvement. He was quite satisfied to have it so, for now that there were two of them, more storage space would be needed. Then his second storeroom was enlarged. It was done without his knowledge. He happened to be passing one day when he peeped in and discovered how much bigger it was than he remembered it.

"Did you make this room bigger?" he inquired of little Mrs. Impy.

"Yes," said she. "It really wasn't big enough. It might have done all right for you alone, but now that there are two of us we need plenty of room. By the way, we'll build a third storeroom shortly."

"Will we?" inquired Impy, looking a little surprised.

"Yes," replied little Mrs. Impy. "Come with me and I'll show you where we will start it."

Impy did as he was told to do. He followed little Mrs. Impy and when she showed him the place where the new storeroom was to be he not only agreed that that was a good place, but actually went to work digging as Mrs. Impy told him to. Moreover, he kept at it. Little Mrs. Impy helped at times but most of the time there was only room for one to work and, of course, Impy was that one.

He not only agreed that that was a good place, but actually went to work digging

Impy no longer remained out after the coming of the Black Shadows, as he had once done. He would have told you that he no longer cared to stay out. That wasn't it at all. No, indeed, that wasn't it. It was all due to little Mrs. Impy. She had told him to come in with the setting of jolly, round, red Mr. Sun and so he had done as she desired. When they went on little expeditions in search of food little Mrs. Impy always decided where they should go and when they should go. Impy never decided anything. Mrs. Impy decided everything.
